Colin Burgon: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what (c) training to officers in (i) juvenile offender institutions and (ii) prisons for adults and (b) equipment is provided to deal with assaults using weapons. [143354]

Mr. Sutcliffe: All prison officers employed in public sector prisons receive the same control and restraint training (and are required to complete annual refresher training) to prepare them for all types of incident, regardless of which type of establishment they are posted to. Personal protective equipment is available wherever the risk dictates, again regardless of the type of establishment. All prison officers are trained in its use.

Colin Burgon: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what factors were taken into account in deciding that prison officers officed in the juvenile estate should not be given access to extendable batons and other protective equipment. [143355]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Extendable batons were issued in 2005 to all staff who carried the outdated wooden stave. Officers in juvenile establishments have never carried staves and at the time of the introduction of batons consideration was not given to widening their use. A review is planned later this year to consider what evidence there may be for extending the use of batons to other parts of the estate.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Departments: Information and Communications Technology

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission whether the House has in place arrangements for the ethical disposal of surplus IT equipment. [143550]

Nick Harvey: The House of Commons uses a specialist commercial company for the disposal of all Members centrally provided and House of Commons Administration IT equipment.

The company is used by a number of other Government agencies and all personnel with access to parliamentary equipment are security cleared.

Equipment is securely cleaned of all data and data destruction certificates issued once this has been completed. Equipment is then evaluated as to its resale potential; where possible it is sold on to second level users with the original manufacturer's operating system and no other software. Proceeds from the sale of equipment are returned to Parliament. Equipment with no resale value is disposed of in line with the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment (WEEE) Directive. This involves breaking down the equipment into its base materials for reuse with only completely un-recyclable materials being sent to landfill.

Portcullis House

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what assessment has been made of environmental factors affecting thermal comfort as defined in British Standard BS EN ISO 7730 in Portcullis house; whether any survey has been made of thermal comfort of workers in Portcullis house; whether any workplace temperature risk assessment has been undertaken with regard to Portcullis house; what the maximum operating capacity of the air conditioning unit at Portcullis house is; and if he will make a statement. [142331]

Nick Harvey: I am well aware of this issue and know that there have been a number of complaints about temperature control in the building. The Serjeant at Arms has directed his staff to investigate and to take the appropriate remedial actions. He will write to the hon. Lady when the issues involved are clear.

Parliamentary Works Services Directorate staff monitor the environmental conditions and systems in Portcullis house using the computerised building management system. As a result they are aware that since Easter the temperature has not been controlled as well as it should have been. An investigation of the cooling system has revealed a number of small faults. The majority of these have now been rectified and work is in hand to address the remainder as quickly as possible.

I understand that no survey of the thermal comfort of workers in Portcullis house has been undertaken. Nor has a workplace temperature risk assessment been carried out.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Crime

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many responses his Department received to the consultation document Making Sure that Crime Doesn't Pay; which organisations responded; and if he will place copies of those representations in the Library. [131283]

Maria Eagle: The Northern Ireland Office received responses from:

the Superintendents Association of Northern Ireland;

the Periodical Publishers Association of Ireland; and the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission.

I have made arrangements for these to be placed in the Library.

Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Brentwood and Ongar of 19 February 2007, Official Report, column 565W, on the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency, when the copy of the presentation will be placed in the Library. [142399]

Mr. Hain: This has now been placed in the Library.

WALES

Departments: Manpower

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of staff in his Department are (a) male, (b) female, (c) registered disabled and (d) aged 55 or over. [143922]

Mr. Hain: The percentages for the staff of the Wales Office is as follows:

(a) 49 per cent. of the staff are male

(b) 51 per cent. of the staff are female

(c) 12 per cent. of staff are aged 55 or over

The Wales Office has a small number of staff with disabilities. For privacy reasons the numbers are confidential, in line with guidance issued by the Cabinet Office, which states that Departments are not required to provide figures on the number of disabled staff where it is less than five in the department.

Departments: Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many staff in his Department received bonus payments in 2006-07; what proportion of the total workforce they represented; what the total amount of bonuses paid was; what the largest single payment was; and if he will make a statement. [143096]

Mr. Hain: In the last financial year three members of staff have received bonuses, representing 5 per cent. of the workforce. All of the bonuses together came to £862.30 before tax, and the largest single payment was £362.30.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Departments: Publications

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many publications produced by his Department and funded by the public purse have been (a) provided at no cost and (b) sold to the Labour Party or Parliamentary Labour Party Office in the last 12 months. [141264]

Mr. Thomas: Following are the publications produced by DFID that have been provided directly to the Parliamentary Labour Party Office in the last 12 months. All of these publications are available free of charge (and indeed copies have been requested by representatives of other parties).

Publication	Quantity
G8 Gleneagles: One year on turning talk into action	500
Eliminating World Poverty White Paper III popular version	840
The World Classroom—Developing Global Partnerships	250

These figures are total figures for orders sent directly to the Parliamentary Labour Party Office through DFID's mailing house contractor in the last 12 months. These may not reflect the total number of publications sent out, as it is not possible to establish the number of publications posted by DFID staff in response to individual requests. DFID has not sent any publications to the Labour Party via its mailing house contractor in the last 12 months, and it is not possible to establish the number of publications posted by DFID staff in response to individual requests.

Any publications produced in the last 12 months that have been priced are classified as Command, or House of Commons, papers. These publications are available to be purchased from The Stationery Office (TSO) under a Government-wide agreement. DFID would have no record of who had purchased these items via this route. DFID does not itself sell these publications.

Departments: Sick Leave

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what average number of days per year was taken by staff in his Department as sick leave in each of the last five years for which records are available. [143110]

Mr. Thomas: For the years 2001-05 (the latest for which figures are available) the average working days per employee lost to sick leave for DFID are:

	Days
2005	5.7

Departments: Sign Language

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the merits of providing British Sign Language (BSL) videos on his departmental website for the benefit of those whose first language is BSL. [142496]

Mr. Thomas: DFID does not currently have any video material on its website. An exercise is under way to assess the technical facilities and procedures needed to create and deliver video effectively, and the use of BSL videos will be considered as part of this work. DFID aims to make its website as accessible as possible, and an independent review of the site recently gave it a high rating for accessibility. The internal Intranet does include video material, and DFID has a policy that this material should have a written transcript, subtitles or a BSL interpreter.

Developing Countries: Energy

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much his Department provided to developing countries for (a) the development of industry to extract fossil fuels and (b) the development of local renewable energy sources in each of the last five years. [142893]

Mr. Thomas: Improved access to reliable affordable energy supplies and services is essential for the achievement of international development goals. In the energy sector, DFID engages primarily through our international partners and international financial institutions.

DFID has been actively engaged with the EU Energy Initiative for Poverty Eradication and Sustainable Development (EUEI) since it was launched in 2002. We contribute to the Energy Sector Management Assistance Programme, which is managed by the World Bank on behalf of the donors. DFID is also working closely with the World Bank and regional development banks on the new Clean Energy Investment Framework. DFID is also currently developing a new £800 million Environmental Transformation Fund that will finance environmental projects, including clean energy. In 2007 DFID launched a five-year Energy Research Programme that will include the application of renewable energy, building on earlier DFID funded work on renewable energy technologies.

DFID has not provided any bilateral funding to developing countries during the last five years for the development of industry to extract fossil fuels or for the development of local renewable energy sources.

Developing Countries: Fossil Fuels

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what analysis his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated of the impact on the welfare of people in developing countries of fossil fuel extraction in those countries. [142894]

Mr. Thomas: DFID's primary involvement with fossil fuel extraction projects in developing countries is an indirect one, as a "shareholder" in multilateral financial institutions, such as the World Bank group and the Regional Development Banks, which invest in projects in this sector.

However, DFID reviews how the effects of fossil fuels extraction are managed as part of a commitment to sustainable development and attainment of the Millennium Development Goals.

DFID has supported non-governmental organisations in the analysis of the impacts of extractive industries, including fossil fuels. For example, work on the Democratic Republic of Congo looked at natural resource governance. DFID also takes note of the many studies about opportunities and effects of extractive industries, including work by Transparency International, the "Publish What You Pay" campaign and the Resource Endowment Study of the International Council on Mining and Metals.

DFID was actively engaged in the Extractive Industries Review and the International Finance Corporation's review of its environmental and social safeguards policies and procedures. These safeguards are a key tool to ensure the prudent management of the exploitation of natural resources in developing countries. This includes the impact on welfare of people in those developing countries.

DFID has provided support to countries wishing to implement the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative (EITI). This initiative supports improved governance in resource-rich countries through full publication of company payments and government revenues from oil, gas, and mining. EITI enables non-governmental organisations to participate in the process and work with government and companies to ensure that revenues from extractive industries are fully disclosed.

Developing Countries: Renewable Energy

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans he has for future aid allocations aimed at developing the use of local renewable energy in developing countries. [142892]

Mr. Thomas: DFID is committed to increasing access to reliable and affordable energy to reduce poverty and increase economic growth in developing countries. Renewable energy has an increasingly important role to play in helping developing countries make progress towards the Millennium Development Goals.

In terms of future aid allocations, we expect deployment of clean energy investment to happen not through DFID's bilateral aid allocations, but through a big change in the way the multilateral agencies engage in the energy sector. We are encouraging the World Bank and regional development banks to give renewable energy greater attention.

For example, the World Bank has scaled up its financial support for renewable energy and energy efficiency projects. In August 2006, it announced a rise to $680 million in commitments in the year to June 2006, an increase of 48 per cent. compared to the previous year. This figure excludes large hydropower projects and covers solar, wind, geothermal, biomass and small (less than 10 MW) hydropower technologies.

We very much welcome this increased investment by the World Bank on clean energy. We now think that the bank needs to set out a high level of ambition for funds flowing through the Clean Energy Investment Framework over the coming years. At the recent spring meetings of the World Bank the UK called on the bank to set a range of new investment and outcome targets, including a higher target for renewable energy.

As announced in the 2007 Budget Statement, a new £800 million Environmental Transformation Fund will finance environmental projects, including clean energy.

DFID has supported the creation of a new €220 million EU African, Caribbean and Pacific Energy Facility, which will start funding projects this year from the European Development Fund. This facility aims to improve access to energy, especially in rural areas of Africa, and has encouraged viable renewable energy proposals.

Finally, DFID is increasing research funding for the energy sector to reflect the growing interest in clean energy for development. This year DFID launched a new five year, £3.75 million energy research programme on renewable energy and is currently scoping areas for further work.

Overseas Aid: Climate Change

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what analysis he has undertaken of the impact of his Department's aid policies and programmes on climate change. [142891]

Mr. Thomas: The 2006 DFID White Paper recognises that climate change poses the most serious long-term threat to development and poverty reduction. We are working to implement our White Paper commitments on three main fronts: work for a global agreement, including helping developing countries prepare for international negotiations; assisting developing countries to adopt clean energy technologies; and helping developing countries adapt to the impacts of climate change.

We assess how well these policies are being implemented through our standard organisational systems. For example, the Department's internal Development Committee regularly assesses how well the Department's policies are being rolled out.

We are considering the changes that will be necessary to how we deliver programmes as a result of climate change. For example we are planning to have procedures in place by 2008 to identify and manage risks associated with climate variability. We have also committed to mainstreaming climate into DFID development activities in climate sensitive sectors, such as agriculture, water, health infrastructure and energy, by 2008, to help developing countries adopt low carbon energy and adapt.

As part of our support to the Clean Energy Investment Framework, we have called for the World Bank and the other multilateral development banks to set out a set of specific targets to cover investments in areas such as renewables and energy efficiency. For example, last year the World Bank committed $860 million in these areas, but it needs to do more. The banks also need to look at their entire investment portfolios including lending for fossil fuels and help Governments make the right choices about their energy mix to underpin sustainable growth and poverty reduction. We expect this analysis to contribute to a better understanding of how to minimise the impact of development investments on carbon emissions.

Our Evaluation Department is currently considering establishing a baseline of data on climate change related indicators to help us better measure the Department's contribution to helping developing countries mitigate and adapt to climate change.

Overseas Aid: Fossil Fuels

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support his Department has provided to fossil fuel extraction projects through the World Bank and other international financial institutions in the last five years. [142890]

Hilary Benn: During the last five years the World Bank (International Development Association (IDA) and the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development) provided around $1.2 billion (£609 million) in financing for activities in fossil fuels. Around one-third of this is for policy work and mine closure programmes. Of the remaining two-thirds, around 80 per cent. is for investment in gas projects, including infrastructure investment such as storage and distribution. Loans for fossil fuel extraction from the Asian Development Bank and the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development amounted to $350 million (£178 million) and €768 million (£518 million) respectively. The International Monetary Fund, the African Development Bank, the Inter-American Bank and the Caribbean Development Bank did not fund any fossil fuel extraction projects during this period.

In financial years 2001-02 to 2005-06 the UK provided £2.42 billion for the World Bank's IDA, the African Development Fund (ADF) of the African Development Bank, the Asian Development Fund (AsDF), the Caribbean Development Bank Special Fund, the IMF, Regional Development Bank Capital Subscriptions including the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD), and other IFI programmes. Details can be found in DFID's Annual Report 2007, copies of which are in the Library of the House.

Contributions from the UK and other shareholders are one source of finance drawn upon by the international financial institutions to provide loans and grants to developing countries. The banks also draw on other sources such as repayments and investment earnings. Lending on more commercial terms—to more developed countries—is usually financed from the banks' own resources. Assistance to poorer countries, on much more concessional terms, is financed by a combination of the banks' and donor resources. Therefore it is not possible to say what proportion of the UK's contributions was spent on fossil fuel extraction projects.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Project Al Yamamah

Nick Harvey: To ask the Solicitor-General what advice (a) his Department and (b) other Departments gave the Director of the Serious Fraud Office with regard to his investigation into the Al Yamamah deal with Saudi Arabia; and when the advice was given. [119161]

The Solicitor-General: I refer to my previous explanations of the views which were conveyed to the Director of the Serious Fraud Office about the national security implications of the investigation, 14 December 2006, Official Report, column 1120; 7 February 2007, Official Report, columns 875-76.

SCOTLAND

Departments: Manpower

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many officials work in his Department. [143173]

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much energy in kilowatt hours was purchased by his Department from renewable sources in the most recent year for which figures are available. [142204]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office subscribes to the sustainable development policies adopted by the Ministry of Justice.

The Scotland Office is included in the Ministry of Justice's annual returns on total energy usage across the Ministry's estate.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what his strategy is for renewable energy and meeting energy targets in departmental buildings; and if he will make a statement. [142207]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office subscribes to the sustainable development policies adopted by the Ministry of Justice.

Elections

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether any manual counts took place during the Scottish (a) parliamentary and (b) local election areas which used electronic counting to verify the accuracy of the counting machines. [141634]

David Cairns: It is for individual Returning Officers to decide on the conduct of the count. All 32 Returning Officers chose to conduct the count electronically and are confident of the accuracy of the result.

Oil: Natural Gas

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has had with the First Minister on the fiscal regime for the UK oil and gas sector. [140992]

David Cairns: The fiscal regime for the UK oil and gas sector is a reserved matter. The Government are committed to realising the full potential of our oil and gas reserves. This is why this year's budget confirmed that we would provide stability in the North sea fiscal regime—as requested by the industry—including retaining generous capital allowances and a continuing engagement with the industry to consider a future fiscal regime for the North sea.

Olympic Games: Greater London

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment the Government has made of the likely impact on (a) Scotland's infrastructure and (b) the Scottish economy of the relocation of (i) plumbers, joiners, electricians and related professionals and (ii) architects and associated building professionals to London and the South-East of England to service the Olympic building programme and associated developments. [143254]

David Cairns: The construction of the Olympic park and venues present huge opportunities for Scottish businesses. The flexibility within the UK labour market, that is a benefit of Union, has contributed substantially to the record levels of employment Scotland currently enjoys.

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of providing British Sign Language (BSL) videos on the Downing Street website for the benefit of those whose first language is BSL. [142544]

The Prime Minister: Although British Sign Language is not used on the Number 10 website, my Office is committed to providing a website that is accessible to the widest possible audience, including those who have hearing impairments. For example, the website provides transcripts and captions for audio and audio-visual material.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Carbon Sequestration: Research

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what funding is available for research on carbon capture and storage technology. [143148]

Malcolm Wicks: DTI supports research and development for carbon capture and storage (CCS) through the Technology Programme. During 2005-06 some £3.5 million was set aside for Carbon Abatement Technologies of which £2.3 million has been allocated to CCS. This funding will continue through 2007 at which stage the new arrangements for the Technology Strategy Board and Energy Technologies Institute will be introduced.

Additionally £35 million has also been allocated for the demonstration of components for CCS technologies. To date some £1.4 million of those funds has been set aside for one project.

Funding is also made available by the Research Councils. The following table outlines their expenditure on CCS research to date:

2002-03	78,000
2003-04	30,000
2004-05	966,000
2005-06	1,072,000

Mr. McCartney: The DTI and the Department for International Development work closely together on issues relating to the Cotonou Agreement, in particular on economic partnership agreements.

Article 37.4 of the Cotonou Agreement states that the parties should carry out a formal comprehensive review in 2006. The UK was active in ensuring that the ACP had full participation in the review. All six EPA regions completed their reviews by April this year and these were endorsed by the EU-ACP Council of Ministers on 25 May 2007.

Departments: Remploy

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) services and (b) products his Department has procured from Remploy in the last 12 months; and at what cost. [143788]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Central records indicate that the Department has procured no services or products from Remploy in the last 12 months.

Domestic Wastes

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what advice the Chief Scientific Adviser has provided in relation to the collection of household rubbish. [143657]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government's Chief Scientific Advisor, Sir David King, has not provided specific advice in relation to the collection of household rubbish. Lead responsibility for assuring the quality of scientific evidence within individual Departments lies with the Chief Scientific Advisors appointed by those Departments.

Estate Agents: Complaints

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 23 April 2007, Official Report, column 946W, on estate agents: complaints, how many of the 210 complaints about the conduct of estate agents received by the Office of Fair Trading in 2006 were referrals from the Ombudsman for Estate Agents. [143187]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 15 June 2007]: The Department has not carried out, or commissioned on its behalf, any research into average fees charged by estate agents since 2004.

The Office of Fair Trading has a general duty to keep under review the estate agency market including commercial developments relating to the carrying on of estate agency work, and the working and enforcement of the Estate Agents Act 1979.

The Office of Fair Trading is also responsible under UK competition legislation for monitoring markets and investigating allegations of anti-competitive behaviour.

(3) what progress is being made in ensuring that internet service providers accept their responsibility to tackle online copyright theft; and if he will make a statement. [143028]

Malcolm Wicks: Industry associations representing the interests of internet service providers and copyright holders are actively discussing developments of a voluntary protocol to address misuse of content and copyright theft. Discussions are proceeding well and we would anticipate agreement in autumn to forestall the need for Government intervention.

Minimum Wage: Young People

Mr. McGovern: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the Low Pay Commission has undertaken research into the effect of a minimum wage for those under the age of 16 years. [143611]

Jim Fitzpatrick [holding answer 18 June 2007]: The Low Pay Commission has not been asked to undertake research in this area.

Mr. McGovern: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will consider introducing a minimum wage for those under the age of 16 years. [143612]

Jim Fitzpatrick [holding answer 18 June 2007]: The Government have no plans to introduce a minimum wage for those under the age of 16.

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 18 June 2007]: The statistics are not available. HM Customs and Excise do not record trade with individual Russian provinces (or regional data for any other country).

Packaging

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many prosecutions were made by local authority trading standards departments for over-packaging in each year since 2000. [143655]

Malcolm Wicks: There were two successful prosecutions made by trading standards departments in 2000, followed by a further one in 2004 and another in 2006.

Tidal Power

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the proportion of UK energy supply which tidal power (a) could theoretically provide and (b) is expected by his Department to provide in the next decade. [143330]

Malcolm Wicks: The tidal energy resource can be split into two categories: tidal current—the extraction of kinetic energy from fast moving tidal currents, and tidal range—the extraction of potential energy release from water at high level relative to low level.

The UK tidal energy programme that ran between 1978 and 1994 estimated the total resource available in the UK, for tidal range energy generation from reasonably exploitable estuaries with a mean tidal range of 3 metres or more, at around 50 tera watt hours per year (around 15 per cent. of current UK demand). Nearly all of this potential resource is in England and Wales, with 90 per cent. located in eight large estuaries—the Severn, the Dee, the Mersey, Morecambe Bay, Solway Firth, the Humber, the Wash and the Thames. The remaining 10 per cent. is in 30-40 smaller estuaries.

A study undertaken in 2005[1] estimated the tidal-current resource at approximately 16 tera watt hours per year (around 5 per cent. of current UK demand).

The Department has also carried out a study called ATLAS[2] that looks at the marine resource around the UK, including tidal power. A copy of the study can be found online at

The Department has not assessed the proportion of UK energy supply that tidal power could be expected to provide in the next decade.

Trade Unions

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what mechanisms the Certification Office has in place to monitor whether trade unions affiliate more members to the Labour Party than contribute to their union's political fund. [143170]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Some unions with political funds do not affiliate to any political party. In the case of those unions that affiliate to a political party, the affiliation arrangements are matters for the unions and political parties to decide in accordance with their rules and constitutions. The Certification Officer therefore has no specific powers to monitor the number of members that trade unions affiliate to political parties.

Unfair Commercial Practices Directive

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what progress has been made in implementing the Unfair Commercial Practices Directive; [141284]

(2) when he plans to introduce regulations to implement the Unfair Commercial Practices Directive. [141288]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 11 June 2007]: On 29 May I published a consultation paper seeking views on draft Consumer Protection from Unfair Trading Regulations to implement the Unfair Commercial Practices Directive. On the same day the Office of Fair Trading (OFT) published a consultation on joint OFT/DTI draft guidance to accompany the regulations. The deadline for responses to both consultations is 21 August. The regulations will be made in the autumn to come into force on 6 April 2008. The guidance will be finalised at the end of this year or in early 2008.

Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether his Department has any plans to update the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977. [141287]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 11 June 2007]: The Government asked the Law Commission and the Scottish Law Commission to consider the case for a unified regime for unfair terms in consumer contracts, bringing together the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 and the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999. The Commissions reported in February 2005 in favour of a unified regime, and provided a draft Bill. The Government have accepted in principle the recommendations of the Commissions, subject to further consideration of the detail of the issues, and to further work to identify potential cost impacts.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Arms to Sierra Leone Inquiry

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the cost was of the 1998 inquiry into the arms to Sierra Leone affair. [143721]

Mr. McCartney: According to the published report, the inquiry undertaken by Sir Thomas Legg and Sir Robin Ibbs took 68 days and its direct costs amounted to approximately £112,500.

Departments: Advertising

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much was spent on advertising by (a) her Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last five years. [139519]

Mr. Hoon: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) advertises in different media for a number of varied reasons. The main expenditure is on recruitment advertising for generalist and specialist staff in the FCO and FCO Services (an executive agency of the FCO since 1 April 2006). In the last five financial years the following totals have been spent on recruitment advertising:

2003-04	381,683
2004-05	493,324
2005-06	547,514
2006-07	460,359

Other FCO departments may also place advertisements on an ad hoc basis, as will the FCO's agency (Wilton Park), and its posts overseas. Details of this expenditure are not held centrally and could be collated only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Manpower

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of staff in her Department are (a) male, (b) female, (c) registered disabled and (d) aged 55 or over. [143913]

Mr. Hoon: The figures requested for Foreign and Commonwealth Office staff are:

Staff	Percentage
Male	57.5
Female:	42.5
Disabled[1]	4.3
Aged 55 or over	11.2

[1] Staff are not obliged to declare whether they have a disability nor what it may be. This number represents those who have told us that they are disabled.

We are committed to ensuring that our UK workforce reflects fully the diversity of modern Britain.

We were also one of the few Departments to decide in 2006 to dispense with mandatory retirement ages for staff below the Senior Management Structure.

Departments: Recruitment

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many recruits to her Department were graduates of Oxford or Cambridge university in each year since 1995. [142460]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 14 June 2007]: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) does not hold educational details on all staff centrally, and the full information could be collated only at disproportionate cost. Some details are available from 1997 for the FCO fast stream, administered by the Cabinet Office, and for the FCO operational stream from 1997-2000 and 2006. 2007 data are not yet available, as the final list of FCO fast stream and operational appointments has not yet been made.

Our recruitment processes are run on the principle of fair and open competition, as laid down in the Civil Service Commissioners' Recruitment Code (www.civilservicecommissioners.gov.uk). The minimum education requirement to apply at fast stream is a lower-second class degree in any subject. To apply at operational stream the minimum education requirement is a degree or 2 A-levels with GCSE Mathematics and English Language (grade A* - C) or five GCSEs including Mathematics and English Language (grade A* - C).

Our work experience schemes for undergraduates in 2006 offered placements to students from 18 different universities. The FCO is also active in outreach activities, such as careers fairs and community business events throughout the UK. Through this, the FCO aims to recruit a talented and diverse work force that reflects the society we serve.

Departments: Sick Leave

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what average number of days per year was taken by staff in her Department as sick leave in each of the last five years for which records are available. [143063]

Mr. Hoon: The average number of days recorded as sick leave absences by staff of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for each of the past five calendar years is as follows:

	Number
2004	6.17
2006	5.14

These figures, particularly for the early years, may contain a level of under-reporting. They rely on staff and their managers entering absences accurately on our electronic management information system. We have recently revised our sickness absence procedures to improve the accuracy of our records and to reduce the number of days lost to sickness absence. Subject to agreement with our trade unions, we plan to implement the new procedures in September.

Developing Countries: Drugs

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received following the meeting between the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and senior officials from Afghanistan, Iran and Pakistan; and what steps the UK is taking to increase participation between these partners to stop drug trafficking along their common borders. [143226]

Dr. Howells: We await the UN Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) report following the meeting between the UNODC and senior officials from Afghanistan, Iran and Pakistan which took place on 12 June.

The UK is keen to encourage increased participation between these partners to stop drug trafficking along their common borders. We encourage regional co-operation between Afghanistan and her neighbours as part of our commitment to supporting the Government of Afghanistan to deliver their National Drugs Control Strategy. This is undertaken through either bilateral or multilateral mechanisms through UNODC. Bilaterally, our missions in Islamabad, Tehran and Kabul help to facilitate better working level contacts and information sharing between these countries to take forward regional practical assistance, including improved border control. We also provide support to the Afghan Ministry of Counter Narcotics Good Neighbourly Relations Declaration meetings to encourage Afghanistan's neighbours to engage in the drugs process. We support UN capacity building projects which foster greater links between regional law enforcement agencies to exchange information on drug trafficking and strengthen Afghanistan's borders.

Iran: Bahai Sect

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations she has made to the Iranian government on the treatment of the Bahá'í community in that country. [143302]

Dr. Howells: We continue to have concerns about the situation of religious minorities in Iran and treatment of the Bahá'í community in particular. We often receive reports of discrimination against Bahá'ís in Iran.

We most recently addressed the situation of the Bahá'ís in our dialogue with the Iranian authorities on 25 May, through an EU Statement. We will continue to raise this issue bilaterally and through the EU.

We have pressed the Iranian authorities on many occasions to take seriously their international human rights obligations, uphold the right to freedom of religion and belief as described in article 18 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, and address the intimidation and discrimination suffered by Iranian Bahá'ís. We also take action at the UN, and in December 2006, we along with all EU countries co-sponsored a resolution on human rights in Iran, which expressed serious concern at:

"the escalation and increased frequency of discrimination and other human rights violations against members of the Bahá'í Faith".

Nepal: Human Rights

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support the UK is making available to assist the second phase of monitoring Maoist army personnel in Nepal to ensure that no child soldiers are serving. [143225]

Dr. Howells: Under the Comprehensive Peace Agreement signed in Nepal in November 2006, both sides to the conflict have agreed not to include or use children under 18 years of age in the armed forces. The Communist Party of Nepal (Maoist) have agreed that any children in the cantonment camps who are identified under phase II of the UN monitoring process will be removed to the care of the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) and partner agencies to arrange their return home and reintegration into civilian life.

Through the Global Conflict Prevention Pool, the UK has recently provided £150,000 to support UNICEF's programme for the reintegration and rehabilitation of child soldiers. In addition, we have provided funding and technical expertise to help with the arms verification process.

Pakistan: Human Rights

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received on the freedom from government intrusion of (a) the press, (b) internet access and (c) telecommunications in Pakistan. [143222]

Dr. Howells: On 4 June, the Government of Pakistan introduced an ordinance giving the state regulatory media body, Pakistan Electronic Media Regulatory Authority, enhanced powers to confiscate equipment and revoke licences of media organisations without recourse to a complaints council. However, on 7 June, the Government of Pakistan withdrew these media restrictions pending a review. We welcome the decision to suspend the ordinance as the UK views media freedom as essential to economic and social development and stability, and we actively support the evolution of free and fair media in Pakistan. We have received no reports of government intrusion into internet access or telecommunications in Pakistan.

Palestinians

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the United Kingdom's 1945 Emergency Regulations for Palestine were annulled. [142696]

Dr. Howells: We have found no record of annulment or revocation by the United Kingdom of the Defence (Emergency) Regulations 1945 made by the then Government of Palestine.

Rendition

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what undertakings have been (a) sought and (b) received from the US Administration since January 2001 that the US Administration has not rendered any detainee through UK territory or airspace since May 1997; and if she will make a statement. [143040]

Dr. Howells: We are clear that the US would not render a detainee through UK territory or airspace without our permission. In an interview covering these issues alongside my right hon. Friend the then Foreign Secretary (Mr. Straw) in March 2006 the US Secretary of State, Condoleezza Rice, said

"the United States respects the sovereignty of our allies and of other countries in the international system".

We have also carried out extensive searches of official records and have found no evidence of detainees being rendered through the UK or overseas territories since 1997 where there were substantial grounds to believe there was a real risk of torture.

There were four cases in 1998 where the US requested permission to render one or more detainees through the UK or overseas territories. Records show the Government refused the US request in two cases and granted the request in the two others. In both these cases, the detainees were subsequently tried and later prosecuted on criminal charges in the US.

Saudi Arabia: Terrorism

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the risks to UK citizens from Al-Qaeda terrorists in Saudi Arabia; and if she will make a statement. [143043]

Dr. Howells: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) provides the British public with an assessment of the safety of travellers and expatriates overseas through its travel advice.

All of our travel advice is regularly reviewed and draws on a variety of sources, including the local knowledge and expertise of the FCO's overseas posts and intelligence sources.

We believe there is a continuing high threat of terrorism in Saudi Arabia and that terrorists are planning further attacks, including against westerners.

http://www.fco.gov.uk/servlet/Front?pagename=OpenMarket%2FXcelerate%2FShowPage&c==Page&cid=1007029390590&a=KCountryAdvice&aid=1013618387135.

Saudia Arabia: Arms Trade

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the Government have received from (a) the government of Saudi Arabia and (b) its representatives on the Serious Fraud Office inquiry into defence sales to Saudi Arabia; and if she will make a statement. [143094]

Dr. Howells: The Government are in frequent and regular contact with the government of Saudi Arabia as part of the normal conduct of our close bilateral relationship across a wide range of issues of mutual concern.

Somalia: Politics and Government

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the assurances of the Transitional Federal Government that a planned Reconciliation Congress in Somalia will be fully inclusive, regardless of clan loyalty. [143219]

Mr. McCartney: Lasting security in Somalia will only be possible with a credible political reconciliation process. We believe that the Transitional Federal Government (TFG) is the only body that can bring stability across Somalia, as envisaged by the Transitional Federal Charter. But we strongly believe it must be more inclusive and develop a broad base of clan acceptance if it is to succeed. Therefore, we have repeatedly stressed to the TFG that it should reach out to all Somalis who reject violence, regardless of clan and that the National Reconciliation Congress, now scheduled to start in mid July, represents an excellent opportunity to do this. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, made this point in person to President Yusuf when he visited the UK in February and to the Somali Foreign Minister on 7 June. The meeting of the International Contact Group in London on 6 June sent the same strong message to the TFG through the Somali Foreign Minister. We will continue to work for this.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps she is taking to further a cessation of violence by fundamentalist Islamic militias loyal to the Union of Islamic Courts in Somalia; and what discussions the UK has held with the International Contact Group on the establishment of peace and stable government in Somalia. [143221]

Mr. McCartney: We do not believe the Union of Islamic Courts (UIC) still exists as a coherent political entity. A meeting of the International Contact Group (ICG), hosted by the Government in London on 5 and 6 June, strongly condemned actions of extremists and terrorists and those looking to undermine the political and reconciliation process. The ICG called on the international community to do everything it could to prevent further acts of violence. We fully support these views.

At the same time, the ICG has publicly stressed the need for the Transitional Federal Government (TFG) to do all it can to make the National Reconciliation Congress as inclusive as possible so that there will be a broad clan-based acceptance of the TFG. We believe that this offers the best long-term way to increase political participation and stable government, as well as to reduce the scope for violence.

Sri Lanka: Internally Displaced Persons

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received of the movement of Tamils from the city of Colombo by the Sri Lankan Government; and if she will make a statement. [142947]

Dr. Howells: On 7 June, the Sri Lankan Government removed between three and four hundred people from boarding houses and lodges in a mainly Tamil area of Colombo and transferred them to majority Tamil areas of the north and east of the country.

We supported an EU statement which condemned their forced eviction and called on the Sri Lankan Government to halt this activity and to take action to safeguard the rights of those already removed.

We welcomed the apology offered by the Sri Lankan Prime Minister for the evictions.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has received on the forced relocation of people in Sri Lanka. [142948]

Dr. Howells: Although we receive frequent representations on the conflict in Sri Lanka and on the peace process there, we have not so far received any specific representations on this issue.

Sudan: Armed Conflict

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government is taking to encourage China, India and Malaysia to ensure that their activities and influences in the region are conducive to alleviating the conflict in Darfur. [142556]

Mr. McCartney: We regularly discuss Darfur with the Chinese Government including at the UN. We want China to use its influence with the Sudanese Government to ensure Khartoum supports the deployment of joint UN peacekeeping forces in Darfur, as well as committing to a ceasefire and renewed political process. We gave this message to the Chinese Government before President Hu's visit to Africa earlier this year. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary raised Sudan with the Chinese Government during her trip there last month, as did my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister during his visit to China in April. We have also raised our concerns about Sudan directly with the Malaysians and Indians and pressed them to use their influence with Khartoum to get them to co-operate.

WMD Intelligence Review Committee

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the cost was of the Butler Inquiry. [143722]

Hilary Armstrong: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the right hon. Member to the answer given in the other place to the noble Lord Palmer on 27 October 2004, House of Lords, Official Report, column WA125, by my right hon. Friend the Lord President of the Council (Baroness Amos).

TRANSPORT

Eddington Transport Study

9. John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to take forward the recommendations of the "Eddington Transport Study"; and if he will make a statement. [143388]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Government set out in the December 2006 pre-Budget report how we intend to take forward the recommendations of the Eddington Study. My Department is now reviewing its strategy and delivery processes in the light of the key conclusions of both the Eddington and Stern reports—including through the recently announced refresh of our appraisal framework. The Department will provide its detailed response to Eddington and Stern alongside the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Canals

10. Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his Department's policy is on the use of canals as a part of an integrated transportation system; and if he will make a statement. [143390]

Dr. Ladyman: It is Government policy to encourage the greater use of the inland waterways for carrying freight, where this is practical and economic. Passenger transport on canals is dominated by the leisure industry.

Road Safety Targets

11. Meg Hillier: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made towards meeting 2010 road safety targets. [143391]

Dr. Ladyman: Provisional statistics for 2006, compared with the 1994 to 1998 averages, indicate that the number of people killed or seriously injured was 34 per cent. below the baseline, the number of children killed or seriously injured was 53 per cent. below the baseline and the slight casualty rate was 26 per cent. below the baseline.

Bus Services

12. Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to give local authorities a greater role in planning bus services. [143392]

Gillian Merron: The draft Local Transport Bill proposes changes to enable local authorities to secure better local bus services. It sets out measures to promote more effective partnership working between local authorities and bus operators and makes the implementation of quality contracts schemes a realistic option in areas where it is in the public interest for local authorities to take greater control of bus services.

15. Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to improve the quality of bus services. [143395]

Gillian Merron: Last month the Government published a draft Local Transport Bill for consultation. This includes proposals to provide the necessary powers for local authorities to improve bus services as set out in "Putting Passengers First".

Trams: Nottingham

13. Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress is being made on approving the next tram line in Nottingham. [143393]

Mr. Tom Harris: In October 2006 the Secretary of State announced that he was granting programme entry, for funding purposes, to Phase 2 of the system. In April 2007, Nottinghamshire county council and Nottingham city council applied for the Transport and Works Act powers required to construct and operate the system. I cannot comment on the merits of that application, in order not to prejudice the Secretary of State's fair and impartial consideration of it.

Foreign Registered Aircraft

14. Mr. Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the timetable is for the Civil Aviation Authority's consultation on the application of UK regulatory requirements to foreign registered aircraft based in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [143394]

Gillian Merron: The Civil Aviation Authority is not conducting a consultation on the treatment of foreign registered aircraft based permanently in the UK. However, the Department completed a consultation in 2005 and the Government response is available on the Department's website.

Trains: Overcrowding

16. Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on levels of rail overcrowding. [143396]

Mr. Tom Harris: We will continue to increase capacity through the franchising process and in other ways. In particular, the Secretary of State announced on 14 March that the High Level Output Specification, to be published in July, will include a commitment to a thousand extra carriages. They will be targeted at the most congested routes on the network.

Rail Services

17. Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures his Department is putting in place to increase the number of passenger journeys on branch lines of the rail network. [143397]

Mr. Tom Harris: The Government are implementing the Community Rail Development Strategy which is intended to increase the number of passengers using branch lines and other rural and suburban routes.

Car Usage

18. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made in reducing travel by motor car since 1997. [143398]

Dr. Ladyman: Between 1996-98 (combined years) and 2005, the average number of trips and the average distance travelled per person per year as a car driver has remained stable at around 435 trips and 3,700 miles respectively. However, because the population of Great Britain has increased by 3 per cent. over this period, overall there has been an increase in car travel.

Vehicle Emissions

19. Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on progress in lowering the average level of emissions per vehicle. [143399]

Dr. Ladyman: Voluntary agreements are currently in place requiring the car industry to reduce carbon dioxide emissions of new cars by around 25 per cent. from 1995 levels (to an average of 140 grammes per kilometre by 2008-09). However, these agreements are unlikely to be met - the 2004 average for the EU was 163g/km. The Commission is now proposing mandatory new car CO_2 targets and the UK supports this approach.

Nottingham Express Transit Tramway

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the total cost has been so far of the Nottingham Express transit tramway; what the estimated cost is of the proposed extension to Chilwell and Clifton; how many properties, including dwelling houses, are expected to have to be demolished to make way for the extension; and what the expected cost is thereof. [143263]

Mr. Tom Harris: The total cost of building Nottingham Express Transit (NET) Line 1 was £200 million.

Up to the end of the 2006-07 financial year approximately £10 million has been spent on developing NET Phase Two. The approved scheme cost for Phase Two is £482 million (2005 present value prices).

It is possible that approximately 80 properties may be demolished by the NET Phase Two proposals, although this remains subject to detailed design. Overall land costs, which would include these properties, is estimated at approximately £37 million. The promoters of the system have stated that detailed property values are commercially sensitive at present.

A120: Essex

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he is in a position to provide updated information on the preferred route of the A120 Braintree to Marks Tey improvement; and what exhibitions and presentations are planned to be provided to explain how the decision was made. [143872]

Dr. Ladyman: A public consultation on options for dualling the A120 between Braintree and Marks Tey ended on 17 June 2005, and resulted in a number of additional routes being suggested by respondents. The Highways Agency has been carrying out further work on these proposals, which should be complete this summer. Once I have received that advice I will be in a position to consider the way forward and how those affected should be informed.

A21: Baldslow

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will take steps to ensure that the implementation of the Baudslow link improvement on the A21 will be accelerated; [143771]

(2) if he will make a statement on the delivery of the Baldslow link improvement on the A21; and whether it will be brought forward to be delivered in parallel with the Bexhill to Hastings link road; [143933]

(3) when he expects the Baldslow link improvement to be delivered; and whether funding has been allocated for its construction. [143934]

Dr. Ladyman: The A21 Baldslow Link trunk road improvement is being promoted by the Highways Agency and is a complementary scheme to the Bexhill - Hastings Link Road which is being promoted by East Sussex county council. The Baldslow Link has been prioritised by the south east region for funding from the Regional Funding Allocation with a start of works in 2010-11. It is currently intended that the Baldslow Link would start construction at about the time the Bexhill Hastings Link Road opens to traffic. While planning of the scheme is currently on time, the Highways Agency will seek to improve on this.

Aviation: Exhaust Emissions

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if his Department will commission research and development into minimising (a) carbon dioxide emissions and (b) general environmental impacts caused by commercial aircraft engines. [140604]

Gillian Merron: Government are committed to ensuring that effective policy development and environmental action relies upon sound research, evidence and knowledge transfer. This is why we are investing in initiatives such as the new knowledge transfer network called OMEGA (Opportunities for Meeting the Environmental Challenge of Growth in Aviation). OMEGA defines specific areas where work is needed, facilitates inter-disciplinary research and supports strategic longer-term thinking. A number of other collaborative research programmes funded through the DTI collaborative research mechanism are set to deliver improvements. These include the £95 million Environmentally Friendly Engine programme. I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Industry and the Regions on 18 June 2007, Official Report, column 1492W.

Government are also supporting work from the aviation industry. We welcomed the Sustainable Aviation initiative, launched in June 2005, which aimed to place sustainability at the forefront of the sector's strategic planning. The Government also welcomed the Advisory Council for Aeronautics Research in Europe (ACARE), which adopted stretching European targets for environmental performance of new aircraft and engines by 2020. These include reducing the fuel consumption and hence carbon emissions by 50 per cent., relative to new aircraft in the year 2000, with 20-25 per cent. savings from airframe developments, 15-20 per cent. from the engines and 5-10 per cent. from improved air traffic management.

On an international level the UK is playing an important role and is contributing to a number of work streams in the Committee for Aviation Environmental Protection under the auspices of the UN's International Civil Aviation Organisation (ICAO).

The Government intend that the initiatives such as those mentioned above will improve our evidence base on aviation science, technology, operations and economic issues in ways that will help deliver improved environmental performance and longer term sustainability.

Aviation: Northern Ireland

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many near misses were recorded over Northern Ireland airspace in the last 12 months; and how many related to flights into or out of (a) Belfast International, (b) Belfast City and (c) Londonderry airports. [143818]

Gillian Merron: During the period from 1 June 2006 to 31 May 2007, three Airprox incidents in airspace over Northern Ireland were reported to the independent UK Airprox Board (UKAB) for investigation and assessment.

One of these Airprox is reported to have involved one aircraft operating into Belfast International airport, the other aircraft being outbound from Belfast City airport. This Airprox remains subject to assessment by the UKAB following which the findings will be published both on the UKAB's website at www.airproxboard.org.uk and subsequently in hardcopy.

Aviation: Security

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what Government policy is on the adoption of harmonised aviation security regulations across Europe as defined in EC Regulation 2320/2002. [143348]

Gillian Merron: The UK was a strong advocate of the establishment of baseline security requirements across the European Union, and supports the principle of harmonisation for the benefits it can bring for travellers and industry. It is important however that member states are able to require additional aviation security measures in their own territory, where they judge this necessary for the proper protection of aviation interests and passengers.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) when he next plans to assess the basis for the restrictions on the number of pieces of carry-on luggage allowed for passengers departing from UK airports; [143157]

(2) when he last assessed the basis for the restrictions on the number of pieces of carry-on luggage allowed for passengers departing UK airports; [143185]

(3) when he expects the restrictions on the number of pieces of hand luggage for airline passengers to be amended or removed. [143239]

Gillian Merron: The current security regulations remain under constant review. It is not possible to state when further adjustments might be made to the measures that apply to cabin baggage. However we have made clear throughout our readiness to remove the one bag limit once industry—collectively—is confident of its ability to deliver security effectively without it.

Blue Badge Scheme: Misuse

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the level of abuse of the blue badge scheme, with particular reference to (a) the incidence of theft of blue badges, (b) misuse by people not entitled to have blue badges and (c) misuse by family members when the badge holder is not present. [142486]

Gillian Merron: The Department for Transport is working with the Home Office and local agencies to improve data collection and promote good practice in this area.

The Department is committed to tackling all Blue Badge misuse as signalled by a three month, strategic review of the scheme, which will report in September 2007. This will culminate in the production of a comprehensive Blue Badge Reform Strategy by April 2008.

Bus Services: Concessions

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) who will administer the national off peak free bus travel scheme for pensioners and disabled people; [143994]

(2) what the expected start date is for the introduction of the national off peak free bus travel scheme for pensioners and disabled people; [143995]

(3) from which budget the national off peak free bus travel scheme for pensioners and disabled people will be funded; [143996]

(4) what eligibility conditions for travel will be in place for the national off peak free bus travel scheme for pensioners and disabled people. [143997]

Gillian Merron: As announced in the 2006 Budget the national bus concession will be introduced in April next year (the exact date will be decided in due course). Eligibility on age or disability grounds will be the same as for the current statutory concession—people aged 60 and over, or who come under one of the seven categories of disability listed in the Transport Act 2000, will qualify.

Guidance to local authorities on eligibility for disabled people was published in 2001 and updated in 2005 (copies have been placed in the Libraries of the House). The Department is looking to re-issue this guidance later in the year following consultation with its Concessionary Fares Working Group.

An eligible person, on the presentation of a pass, will be entitled to travel for free on any local bus service in England from 9.30am to 11pm on weekdays and at any time at weekends and Bank Holidays.

The responsibilities for administering the concession—assessing eligibility, issuing passes, reimbursing the bus operators and enforcement—will rest with the existing travel concession authorities (TCAs). These are shire districts, unitary authorities, the Passenger Transport Executives in the metropolitan areas, and the London boroughs (we expect the London councils to administer the concession on behalf of the boroughs). The Concessionary Travel Bill currently before Parliament includes an order making power to change the tier of local government at which the concessionary fares is administered in the future, for example from shire districts to county councils.

TCAs can voluntarily enter into joint arrangements with other authorities e.g. a county council could administer the scheme on behalf of its districts. The Department is keen to see such arrangements, due to the administrative efficiencies.

The Concessionary Travel Bill will require the TCA to issue passes to those people that qualify, on age or disability grounds, who appear to have their 'sole and principal' residence in the TCA.

The extra funding (up to £250 million per year) will either be distributed via the formula grant system (as is the case for current funding of mandatory concession) or specific grant. A decision on the funding route will be made in due course.

Buses: Safety

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the impact of bus design on the risk of injuring pedestrians. [143408]

Gillian Merron: No specific assessment has been made but the Department is reviewing two related areas. The first review will identify the key safety issues with large passenger, goods and agricultural vehicles, and suggest cost-effective proposals to address them. The second review will improve our understanding of the nature, and underlying causes of trends in pedestrian accidents involving large passenger and goods vehicles.

The reports are expected to become available in the autumn, for consideration of appropriate further action.

Cycling

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to encourage the use of cycles (a) to and from workplaces and (b) within local communities; and if he will make a statement. [144057]

Mr. Tom Harris: Cycling England, the Government's advisory body on cycling, is tasked with getting more people cycling, more safely, more often. It is working with local authorities and others to promote cycling, focusing on the journey to work and to school. We doubled Cycling England's budget to £10 million last year and launched "Bikeability" cycle training earlier this year. The six cycling demonstration towns with whom Cycling England is working have increased cycle trips by around 30 per cent. in just one year.

Furthermore, the Finance Act 1999 and the Income Tax (Earnings and Pensions) Act 2003 provided a tax exemption for employers to purchase cycles for their employees to commute to work. In June 2005 the Department issued guidance and assisted in the establishment of a group consumer credit licence for all UK businesses to allow them to implement the scheme up to a value of £1,000 per cycle. We understand from the scheme providers that approximately 70,000 people have benefited from the scheme to date.

Since 1999, we have also sought to mainstream the use of workplace travel, planning to reduce car use and increase sustainable travel such as cycling through guidance and pump priming funding for local authority employed travel plan officers. In February 2007 we set up the National Business Travel Network to enable businesses to share their experiences of travel planning with a view to promoting wider take-up of sustainable workplace travel.

Departments: Carbon Emissions

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department is on track to deliver the projected carbon savings of 5.1 MtC by 2010 as set out in the 2000 climate change programme; and if he will make a statement. [141867]

Gillian Merron: Savings of 5.1 MtC in 2010 were projected in the 2006 climate change programme from existing transport measures. We remain on track to achieve these.

Departments: Consultants

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department spent on consultants in each of the last 10 years. [141010]

Gillian Merron: The Department was formed in May 2002. Details of expenditure by the Department on consultants from 2002-03 to 2006-07 are shown as follows:

	£ million
2002-03	227.5
2003-04	239.5
2004-05	193.3
2006-07	81.2

The business units within the Department currently use separate accounting systems which record expenditure differently. The totals include a mixture of committed spend (i.e. orders raised) and actual spend incurred. The Professional Services Forum definition of consultancy has been applied since 2005-06 resulting in more accurate coding of expenditure.

Departments: Manpower

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people work in the Rail Directorate of his Department; and what the wages and salaries costs of the directorate were in each of the last five years. [141859]

Mr. Tom Harris: The current established headcount of the Rail and National Networks Directorate is 325.

The Rail Directorate wages and salaries costs for the last five years were:

	£ million
2002-03	3.5
2003-04	4.5
2004-05	4.9
2005-06	19.1
2006-07	16.5

The 2005-06 and 2006-07 costs include staff transferred into the Department from the Strategic Rail Authority.

Departments: Official Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent on hospitality by his Department in the financial year 2006-07. [133252]

Gillian Merron: The Department for Transport spent £552,796.35 on hospitality for the financial year 2006-07. This spend includes costs for refreshments provided at meetings and working lunches.

The following agencies were not able to provide the information requested without incurring disproportionate cost:

Highways Agency (only provided by the Information Directorate);

Vehicle and Operator Services Agency; and Driving Standards Agency.

Departments: Official Residences

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the official ministerial residences allocated to Ministers in his Department; and what the total annual cost is of running each. [141972]

Gillian Merron: No Ministers in the Department for Transport are allocated a ministerial residence.

Departments: Property

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was raised from the sale of his Department's property in each of the last five years. [139307]

Gillian Merron: The requested information is as follows:

2006-07	9,191,000

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was received by his Department from the letting of its properties in each of the last five years. [139326]

Gillian Merron: The requested information is as follows:

2003-04	4,087,889
2004-05	4,094,935
2005-06	4,225,375
2006-07	3,651,636

Departments: Public Relations

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent by his Department on public relations in each of the last five years. [139453]

Gillian Merron: The Department's prime use of external public relations is in support of our marketing activities on the THINK! road safety and Act on CO_2 campaigns. Expenditure in each of the last five years is as follows:

	Total (£)
2002-03	798,254
2003-04	860,934
2004-05	811,538
2005-06	923,072
2006-07	959,681

Departments: Sign Language

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the merits of providing British Sign Language (BSL) videos on his departmental website for the benefit of those whose first language is BSL. [142500]

Gillian Merron: The Department for Transport website has been designed to follow the Guidelines for Government websites and to meet the Web Accessibility Initiative Guidelines conformance level double A. The Code of Practice for Part III of the Disability Discrimination Act states that websites should be made accessible to ensure provision for people with disabilities, hence conformance to the double A standard.

We do not routinely produce BSL versions of material on our website, but have produced a BSL film on use of Seatbelts and Child restraints in support of our THINK! road safety campaign. BSL versions of the Highway Code will be available from the Driving Standards Agency from September if required.

Departments: Travel Agents

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department and its agencies paid in travel agencies' fees in each year since 1997. [139916]

Gillian Merron: The Department for Transport came into existence in May 2002 under machinery of government changes. From that date until June 2005, travel agent's fees were paid at 1.5 per cent. of contract turnover, an average figure of £12,500 per quarter. Since 1 July 2005, fees have been paid at a fixed annual rate of £50,000. This figure includes one of the Department's agencies and a small element for the Department for Communities and Local Government.

Five of the Department's agencies either do not pay travel agent's fees, or do not record the fees separately from other travel costs. Further information could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

The remaining agency, VOSA, spent £199,000 in 2003-04, £180,000 in 2004-05, £134,000 in 2005-06, and £124,000 in 2006-07.

Driving Offences

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 12 June 2007, Official Report, column 971W, on driving offences, how many vehicles are represented by the 2.5 per cent. of cases in which it is not possible to trace a vehicle from the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency database. [143992]

Dr. Ladyman: Currently there are approximately 33 million vehicles on the DVLA database and 2.5 per cent. of this figure is 825,000.

Driving Tests: Fees and Charges

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the costs of the driving theory test were in each year since its introduction; and what the reason was for each change. [144032]

Dr. Ladyman: The following table shows the theory test cost since its introduction in 1996.

Date	Test type	Cost (£)	Reason
1996	All categories of vehicle	15.00	Cost of initial theory test
1999	All categories of vehicle	15.50	Inflationary increase
2002	All categories of vehicle	18.00	Hazard Perception Test introduction
2003	All categories of vehicle	20.50	Balance of Hazard Perception Test costs
2005	All categories of vehicle	21.00	Inflationary increase
2006	All categories of vehicle	21.50	Inflationary increase
2007	Vocational (LGV/PCV)	32.00	Enhanced test with new topics, such as first aid
2007	Car/motorbike	28.50	Enhanced test with new topics, such as first aid

Heathrow Airport: Security

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the (a) longest and (b) average waiting time was for travellers going through airport security at Heathrow terminal 4 on 10 June. [142991]

Gillian Merron [holding answer 15 June 2007]: I would refer the hon. Gentleman to the BAA website—www.heathrowairport.com—which has summary statistics on its monthly performance against a range of service quality measures, including passenger security queuing.

M3: Hampshire

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when junctions 5 to 7 of the M3 motorway will be resurfaced with noise retarding materials; and how many lanes will be resurfaced as part of this work. [143993]

Dr. Ladyman: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 15 January 2007, Official Report, column 754W.

Motor Vehicles: Excise Duties

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his most recent estimate is of the number of unlicensed vehicles on the road in the UK. [144030]

Dr. Ladyman: Evasion among all vehicles in use was estimated to be around 6 per cent. in 2006. This was 2.2 million vehicles.

Parking: Disabled

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether his Department has made any assessment of the effectiveness of road markings distinguishing parking bays for the disabled; [142950]

(2) what steps his Department has taken to raise awareness amongst drivers of the problems caused by incorrect parking in disabled parking bays. [142951]

Gillian Merron: The Department for Transport has not made any assessment of the effectiveness of road markings distinguishing parking bays for disabled people.

On-street parking provision and enforcement is the responsibility of individual local authorities. In this context local authorities are best placed to raise the awareness of both disabled and non-disabled drivers about the provision for parking and how disabled parking bays should be used.

The provision and enforcement of parking bays in off-street car parks, whether local authority or privately owned, is a matter for individual car park operators. The Department issues advice on signage and markings in off-street car parks in its Traffic Advisory Leaflet 5/95, "Parking for Disabled People".

The Department is conducting a three month review of the Blue Badge Scheme which will aid us in the publication of a comprehensive Blue Badge Reform Strategy by April 2008. Tackling abuse of the Blue Badge Scheme and the issue of enforcement of disabled person's parking bays on-street will be included in the review.

Pedestrians: Accidents

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many pedestrian fatalities were caused by buses in each of the last seven years. [143407]

Gillian Merron: The numbers of pedestrians who were killed as a result of being hit by a bus or coach in a road accident in each of the last seven years is shown in the table:

	Number
1999	69
2000	60
2001	79
2002	55
2003	57
2004	52
2005	47

2005 is the latest year for which figures are available.

Public Transport: Costs

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the change in cost to the passenger of public transport in real terms in each year since 1997, broken down by mode of transport. [142838]

Gillian Merron: Table 1 shows in index form bus and coach fares and rail fares in real terms in each year since 1997.

Table 1: real changes in the cost of transport: UK 1997 to 2006—(Index 1997 = 100)

	Bus and coach fares	Rail fares
1997	100.0	100.0
1998	99.9	100.7
1999	101.9	102.8
2000	103.0	101.5
2001	105.4	103.6
2002	106.9	104.2
2003	108.2	103.0
2004	110.5	103.9
2005	114.6	105.1
2006	112.6	105.9

Source:
Office for National Statistics

Between 1997 and 2006 the real cost of bus and coach fares has increased by 12.6 per cent. and rail fares have increased by 5.9 per cent.

Railways: Eastbourne

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to improve the transport infrastructure of (a) Eastbourne and (b) East Sussex for the purpose of (i) facilitating economic growth, (ii) reducing environmental damage and (iii) widening access to services and opportunities to the population. [141896]

Gillian Merron: Local transport plans (LTP) are the mechanism by which local authorities undertake transport improvements at the local level. The objectives of the East Sussex LTP include the reduction of congestion to improve the efficiency of the transport network, the protection of the environment and the improvement of access to services. East Sussex county council received over £10 million from Government to implement its LTP in 2007-08. In Eastbourne the plan's objectives will be delivered via the Eastbourne local area transport strategy which is aimed at addressing local needs.

In addition a number of improvements to the trunk road network in east Sussex have been prioritised by the south east region for funding from the regional funding allocation for major transport schemes. The A27 Southerham-Beddingham improvement (£32 million) is currently under construction and, subject to successful completion of statutory procedures, the Bexhill-Hastings Link Road (£47 million) and the A21 Baldslow junction improvement (£18 million), have both been prioritised for funding by the region over the next five years to 2010-11. East Sussex county council have reported that the Bexhill to Hastings Link Road estimated cost has increased to around £89 million and the region are currently considering whether it is still a priority at the higher cost. In addition, £15 million worth of congestion relief improvements on the A27 at Wilmington have also been prioritised by the region for 2015-16.

On 22 May we published a consultation document 'Strengthening Local Delivery' accompanied by a draft Local Transport Bill. The draft Bill would ensure that local authorities have the right mix of powers to improve their local bus services, following on from the proposals in 'Putting Passengers First'.

The Concessionary Bus Travel Bill, currently before Parliament, provides for a national bus travel concession for older and disabled people in England. The Bill extends the existing statutory concession of free off-peak local bus travel within an eligible person's local authority area, introduced in 2006, to free off-peak local bus travel anywhere in England, widening access to services and opportunities for a significant number of Eastbourne and east Sussex residents.

With regard to Rail investment, figures are not available specifically for east Sussex but the county will benefit from a number of recent improvements. All older 'slam-door' rolling stock south of the Thames has been removed from the network. The electric multiple units now used by southern TOCs are less than three years old, and are more reliable, and faster than their predecessors. With the accompanying power supply upgrade of recent years, passengers on Southern, Southeastern and South West Trains have also benefited from £2.7 billion worth of investment since 2003.

Road Traffic

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of the effectiveness of the Traffic Management Act 2004 in reducing congestion in each Government office region. [141047]

Gillian Merron: A research commission to assess parts 2, 3 and 4 of the Traffic Management Act 2004 commenced on the 4 June 2007, and where appropriate results will be presented by Government office region.

An assessment of how local traffic authorities performed their network management duties (part 2 of the Act) was conducted in 2006, the results of which are still to be finalised.

In April 2007 an assessment took place following the deployment of the Traffic Officer Service (part 1 of the Act). Results of the assessment are yet to be published.

Roads: Accidents

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate his Department has made of the survival chance of a pedestrian hit by a vehicle travelling at (a) 20 mph, (b) 30 mph, (c) 35 mph, (d) 39 mph, (e) 40 mph, (f) 50 mph and (g) 60 mph; and if he will make a statement. [144155]

Dr. Ladyman: Research by Ashton and Mackay estimated the chances of a pedestrian surviving if hit by a vehicle travelling at a variety of speeds. This showed that:

At 20 mph there is about a 1 in 40 chance of being killed.

At 30 mph there is about a 1 in 5 chance of being killed.

At 35 mph there is about a 50/50 chance of being killed.

At 40 mph there is about a 9 in 10 chance of being killed.

The research also showed the chances of a child pedestrian surviving are:

At 30 mph there is about a 1 in 5 chance of being killed.

At 40 mph there is about an 8 in 10 chance of being killed.

Pedestrians being hit by vehicles travelling at 39 mph, 50 mph and 60 mph were not assessed as part of this research.

Thames River Safety Inquiry

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what the cost was of the Thames River Safety Inquiry; [143716]

(2) what the cost was of the 2000 Clark Inquiry into issues arising out of the identification of victims following major transport accidents; [143717]

(3) what the cost was of the Marchioness Inquiry. [143718]

Dr. Ladyman: The total cost to the Department of the Thames Safety Inquiry, the public inquiry into the identification of victims following major transport accidents and the Marchioness Formal Investigation was approximately £6.3 million. Since the individual inquiries ran either concurrently or within a very short time of each other, a breakdown for each separate inquiry is not obtainable except at disproportionate cost.

Trains: Bicycles

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to ensure that (a) there is adequate space for a reasonable number of bicycles on each train and (b) secure cycle parking is available at stations. [144056]

Mr. Tom Harris: Bidders for the franchises that are out to tender currently (East Midlands, West Midlands, New Cross Country and InterCity East Coast) are required to consider bike-rail integration and facilities at stations in their bid submissions. The Government's aspiration is to see 95 per cent. of journeys originating from stations with adequate cycle parking facilities.

Last year the Government asked Cycling England, our advisory group on cycling, to look into how we might better encourage bike and rail journeys. Cycling England has accepted this remit and is now looking to see where progress can best be made further to improve bike and rail integration.

Also, we will continue to encourage Train Operating Companies (TOCs) to carry bikes on trains where possible. This is in line with the Cycling Policy document first published by the former Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) in 2004 and recently adopted by the Department. The Cycling Policy document advises TOCs to facilitate the carriages of cycles on off-peak services and encourages the carriage of folding cycles at all times. However, I accept that during the peak hours, where capacity is under pressure, there will be occasions where it is in the interests of the majority of passengers not to permit non-folding cycles on board.

It is [redacted] TOCs are given a steer by Government as to how [redacted] should ensure they are fully maximising the potential [redacted] bike and rail to help reduce car use. However, TOCs are best placed to know where and when pressure on services exists and they must be free to impose restrictions accordingly, although I hope that such restrictions are carefully considered and kept to a minimum.

Trams: Greater London

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had with the London Mayor on the funding of the West London Tram scheme. [143122]

Gillian Merron: The Secretary of State has had no recent discussions regarding the West London Tram. However, officials from Transport for London and the Department for Transport continue to discuss London's investment options and priorities as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Transport: Schools

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what estimate he has made of the potential extra cost to local authorities of providing transport for pupils to attend special schools as a result of the repeal of section 75 of the Local Government and Provisions Act 1975; and if he will make a statement; [143999]

(2) what estimate he has made of the cost of obtaining a licence by people who wish to contract with local authorities to provide transport for children to and from special schools; and if he will make a statement. [144000]

Gillian Merron: The decision to repeal section 75(1)(b) of the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1975, known as the "contract exemption", was motivated by the paramount need to ensure the safety of those being carried under contracts for the hire of a Private Hire Vehicle (PHV).

PHV licence fees are set by local licensing authorities and vary widely from area to area. Making reasonable assumptions about the numbers of drivers, vehicles and operators likely to be involved in total across all sectors, and about average licence fees, we estimate that the total cost will be about £1 million.

No specific estimate of the costs for those involved in transport to and from special schools has been made.

It should be borne in mind that many contracts will already be carried out by drives, vehicles and operators that are already licensed or to whom the contact exemption did not apply. Furthermore, the proportion of licensing cost which will be passed on to those awarding contracts will depend on contracts terms in each case.

HEALTH

Bournemouth Hospital: Accident and Emergency Departments

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans there are to close Bournemouth hospital's accident and emergency department. [139039]

Andy Burnham [holding answer 24 May 2007]: This is a matter for the chair of The Royal Bournemouth and Christchurch Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust. We have written to Sheila Collins informing her of the hon. Member's inquiry. She will reply shortly and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Cancer

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department made of the needs of people with lymphoma in the preparation of the "Our Health, Our Care, Our Say" White Paper. [143741]

Andy Burnham: There was no specific assessment of the needs of people with lymphoma as part of the "Our Health, Our Care, Our Say" White Paper. The White Paper's broad focus meant it did not deal with specific illnesses, but focussed instead on principles that would improve care for all patients such as greater integration between health and social care, more treatment in the community and better preventative and early intervention services.

Children: Abuse

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of children under the age of five years who died following abuse or neglect in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [137880]

Mr. Dhanda: I have been asked to reply.

The Government have not estimated the number of children under the age of five years who have died following abuse or neglect in the last five years. The Government do not collect that specific information.

Chiropractice

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what requirement exists for chiropractors to register with the Healthcare Commission; and if she will make a statement. [139188]

Andy Burnham: Chiropractors are required to register with the General Chiropractic Council. Chiropractors would be required to register with the Healthcare Commission if they also intended to operate an independent clinic where services are provided by medical practitioners as defined under section 2(4) of the Care Standards Act 2000.

Christopher Clunis Care and Treatment Inquiry

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost was of the 2000 Ritchie Inquiry. [143711]

Andy Burnham: The cost of the 2000 Ritchie Inquiry was £645,000.

Chronic Fatigue Syndrome: Research

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department plans to take to increase the amount of bio-medical research conducted into chronic fatigue syndrome/myalgic encephalomyelitis; and if she will make a statement. [139022]

Caroline Flint: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Hancock) on 6 June 2007, Official Report, column 561W.

Departments: Pay

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average salary of staff working in her Department was in each financial year since 1997-98. [131908]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department does not hold data of average salaries. The Department publishes information on pay bill costs and numbers of core Department staff in its annual reports, which are available in the Library.

Departments: Public Bodies

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) budget was and (b) staffing numbers were for each of her Department's arm's length bodies in each year since 1997. [141979]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Such information as is available is shown in the following tables. Budget and staffing numbers for the Department's Arms Length Bodies are not held centrally prior to 2003-04 and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

General Practitioners: Lancashire

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what percentage of general practitioner practices in West Lancashire constituency have closed their lists to new patients. [143524]

Andy Burnham: The information requested is not collected centrally. Central Lancashire primary care trust advise that there are no general practitioner practices in West Lancashire that have closed lists.

Harold Shipman Tribunal of Inquiry

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost was of the Shipman Inquiry. [143710]

Andy Burnham: The cost of the Shipman Inquiry was £21 million.

Health Services

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she published the conclusions of the review announced in paragraph 3.34 of the Health White Paper Our Health, Our Care, Our Say; and if she will place a copy in the Library. [142044]

Andy Burnham: No date has yet been set for publication. Once published, a copy will be placed in the Library.

Health Services: Children

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department's guidance on the application of the statutory definition of children in need includes children affected by alcohol misuse. [138560]

Mr. Dhanda: I have been asked to reply.

Children are defined as 'in need' under section 17 of the Children Act 1989 if they are unlikely to achieve or maintain a reasonable level of health or development, or their health or development would be significantly impaired, without the provision of services by the local authority with children's services responsibility.

The Government's guidance, "A Framework for the Assessment of Children in Need and their Families" (2000) provides guidance on undertaking assessments to support professional judgments about how to help children and families in the best interests of the child. Circumstances such as the misuse of alcohol by a child or by others within the child's family would be among the factors taken into account when carrying out such an assessment.

Health Services: Social Services

Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what statutory obligations govern the co-ordination of service delivery between local primary care trusts and local authority delivered social services; [142895]

(2) what guidance is given to primary care trusts and local authority controlled social services serving the same geographical and administrative area on the co-ordination of their service delivery. [142896]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The main pieces of legislation governing co-operation between the national health service and local authorities providing social services are:

Section 82 of the NHS Act 2006 (which is derived from section 22 of the NHS Act 1977) provides that defined NHS bodies and local authorities must co-operate in order to secure and advance the health and welfare of the peoples of England and Wales;

Sections 26 to 32 of the Health Act 1999 which created a new duty of co-operation within the NHS and extend the duty between NHS bodies and local authorities;

Section 45 of the Health and Social Care Act 2001 (now section 77 of the NHS Act 2006) provides for the designation of primary care trusts (PCTs) and NHS trusts as care trusts in cases where they have local authority health-related functions delegated to them by agreement;

Section 10 of the Children Act 2004 which created a statutory framework for local co-operation between local authorities, key partner agencies (relevant partners) and other relevant bodies (other bodies or persons), including the voluntary and community sector, in order to improve the well-being of children in the area; and

Section 4 of the Childcare Act 2006 which creates a reciprocal duty between the local authority and relevant partners in the NHS and Jobcentre Plus to work together in delivering integrated early childhood services to improve outcomes and reduce inequalities in achievement.

The Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Bill includes provisions to enhance local partnership working and strengthen the role of local area agreements (LAAs). LAAs will form the central delivery contract between local government and its partners. The provisions in the Bill include: a new duty on upper tier local authorities and authorities with upper tier responsibilities to produce a LAA in consultation with other local partners; a new duty on named partners and the local authority to co-operate with each other to agree the targets within the LAA, and to have regard to those targets; and a new duty on local authorities and PCTs to develop a joint strategic needs assessment of the health and social care needs of their local population, the findings of the which will feed into the sustainable community strategy and subsequently the targets in the LAA.

Guidance on the Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Bill, including the provisions on partnership working between local authorities and the NHS, will be issued by Communities and Local Government when the Bill receives Royal Assent.

Hospital Beds: Cumbria

Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the cost of bed blocking to Cumbria primary care trust and its predecessor primary care trusts in each year since 1997; and if she will make a statement. [142905]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The requested information is not collected centrally.

Hospitals: Admissions

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent estimate she has made of the incidence of patients who having been discharged were subsequently re-admitted for the same complaint within (a) one week, (b) two weeks, (c) one month, (d) two months, (e) three months, (f) four months, (g) five months and (h) six months; and if she will make a statement. [138742]

Andy Burnham: The information requested is not collected in the format requested. However, the Department does collect information on emergency re-admissions and this information can be accessed on the National Centre for Health Outcomes Development website at:

www.nchod.nhs.uk

Medical Treatments: Greater London

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she plans to use (a) epidemiological data and (b) other research evidence in the further development of the Pan London 3 Year Treatment Information Initiative Commissioning Intentions 2007-2010; and if she will make a statement. [140534]

Andy Burnham: This is a matter for London primary care trusts as they are responsible for commissioning pan-London prevention and treatment information programmes.

New Deal for Carers

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how the £1 million allocated as part of the consultation on the New Deal for Carers will be spent; [144009]

(2) which organisations she expects to receive funds from the £1 million allocated as part of the consultation on carers. [144010]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The £1 million support to carers' organisations that was announced as part of the package on the consultation on the New Deal for Carers is to be made available to national organisations who provide direct support to carers generally and who have a high profile and regard in the field. They will be organisations who have provided close support to the Government in the development of the New Deal for Carers which was formally launched by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 23 February this year.

The funding will be made available to help such organisations to build their capacity to provide direct support for carers.

NHS Treatment Centres: Standards

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the performance of NHS walk-in centres at (a) Royal Surrey County Hospital, (b) Surrey Primary Care Trust and (c) in England; and if she will make a statement. [143279]

Andy Burnham: National health service walk-in centres are local services which are commissioned or provided by primary care trusts (PCTs). The White Paper "Our Health, Our Care, Our Say" strongly endorsed such centres as they contribute significantly to improving access to services for many people. Performance management of an individual centre is, however, a matter for the responsible PCT.

NHS: Drugs

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when her Department's response to the consultation on branded generic medicines will be published; [144047]

(2) what conclusions she has reached following the consultation on branded generic medicines on their potential to produce savings for the NHS; and if she will make a statement. [144049]

Caroline Flint: The Department has received the report of the Office of Fair Trading's market study of the pharmaceutical price regulation scheme and will consider its findings on this matter before we finally decide upon what action to take concerning branded generic medicines.

NHS: Inquiries

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost was of the three inquiries into the effectiveness of local health services' procedures to deal with complaints about individuals. [143712]

Andy Burnham: The total cost of the three inquiries was £7,336,000. The cost of the Ayling Inquiry was £1,982,000; the Neale Inquiry was £2,145,000 and the Kerr/Haslam Inquiry, which included some common costs for all three inquiries, was £3,209,000.

NHS: Non-Geographic Numbers

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which non-geographic numbers may be used by each type of NHS organisation. [138605]

Andy Burnham: Since April 2005, national health service organisations have been banned from setting up new premium rate telephone numbers (starting with the digits 09) or national rate telephone numbers starting with the digits 087 for patients contacting local services.

NHS organisations are able to set up free phone numbers or those that offer patients a guaranteed low rate call, such as 0845 or 0844 numbers. In addition, Ofcom has recently introduced a new 03 number range to be used by public sector and not for profit bodies, which is charged at local rate.

It is for individual NHS dentists, NHS opticians, general practitioner practices and out-of-hours providers to decide what is in their patients' best interests, taking account of the Central Office of Information guidance on cost to the citizen.

NHS: Standards

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how (a) many staff were employed and (b) much was spent by her Department analysing NHS targets in each year from 1997 to 2006; and if she will make a statement. [143280]

Andy Burnham: This information is not collected centrally.

Queen's Hospital Romford

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of hospital acquired infections were reported at the Queen's Hospital in Romford in each of the last five years. [135026]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This information is collected by the Department at trust level only. Queen's hospital is part of Barking, Havering and Redbridge NHS trust and has been open only since December 2006. It would therefore not be relevant to provide trust level data.

TREASURY

Cash Dispensing: Fees and Charges

Tony Baldry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made on the provision of non-charging ATMs in low income areas since the summit hosted by his Department in May 2006. [142670]

Ed Balls [holding answer 14 June 2007]: I have today made a written ministerial statement on this issue.

Child Tax Credit: Take-Up

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much his Department and its agencies spent on promoting take-up of child tax credit in the latest year for which figures are available. [142852]

Mr. Timms: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Rayleigh (Mr. Francois) on 14 May 2007, Official Report, column 566W.

Campaigns promote take up of both working tax credit and child tax credit (CTC); separate figures for CTC are not therefore available.

Children's Centres: Finance

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to fund children's centres in the comprehensive spending review. [142718]

Mr. Timms: The DfES settlement for the comprehensive spending review period (2008-09 to 2010-11) was announced at Budget 2007. This included an announcement of increased expenditure for Sure Start, child care and early years of at least £340 million by 2010-11 compared to 2007-08—leading to a total of over £1.6 billion.

These additional resources include sufficient funding to meet the target for a national network of 3,500 Sure Start children's centres by 2010, one for every community in the country.

Council Tax

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the contributing factors in the rise of council tax receipts between 1997-98 and 2006-07; and if he will make a statement. [142353]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply.

Council tax levels are set by local authorities. In addition to changes over time in the Band D level of council tax, the total receipts have been affected by growth in the council tax base. Receipts actually taken by authorities depend also on their collection rates.

Council Tax: Valuation

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research the Valuation Office Agency has (a) conducted and (b) commissioned on the merits of annual (i) council tax and (ii) business rates revaluations. [142362]

Mr. Timms: None.

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the (a) objective and (b) timescale is of the Valuation Office Agency's (i) Enterprise Resource Planning and (ii) World Class programmes. [143652]

Dawn Primarolo: The objective of the world-class programme is as an enabler to deliver the VOA's World-Class Vision, which is set out in the VOA's Forward Plan 2006-10.

The Enterprise Resource Planning system is designed to modernise and integrate back-office functions within the VOA in HR, Finance, Payroll and Procurement. The VOA is planning to introduce ERP in the week beginning 9 July.

Counterfeit Manufacturing: Drugs

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue he estimates was foregone by the Exchequer due to the trade in counterfeit medicines in 2006. [142946]

John Healey: HMRC do not estimate the amount of revenue lost as a result of the trade in specific goods, including counterfeit medicines.

Debts

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average personal (a) unsecured debt and (b) total debt was as a percentage of income in each year since 1997. [143313]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 19 June 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on average personal unsecured debt and total debt was as a percentage of income in each year since 1997. (143313)

The information requested is shown in the following table. The data for unsecured debt (households' total financial liabilities other than secured debt) and income (households' gross disposable income) used in the calculations are national accounts series for the combined household and non-profit institutions serving households (NPISH) sectors. The accounts for the household and NPISH sectors are currently combined; separate estimates are not available.

For the denominator in the calculations the series used is Population aged 16+.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average total personal debt servicing level as a percentage of income was for (a) interest and (b) capital repayments in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [143314]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 19 June 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on the average total personal debt servicing level as a percentage of income for each year 1997. (143314)

John Healey: Six Treasury officials resigned in May 2007.

Departments: Sick Leave

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what average number of days per year was taken by staff in his Department as sick leave in each of the last five years for which records are available. [143064]

John Healey: The latest available data on sickness absence are published at the Cabinet Office statistics website under analysis of sickness absence in the civil service at:

Disabled Children

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the transition support programme announced in Aiming High for Disabled Children: Better Support for Families will be piloted; and in what parts of the country these pilots will take place. [143557]

Mr. Dhanda: I have been asked to reply.

We intend that the Transition Support Programme will be piloted from 2008-09. Work is in progress on developing the pilots and more details will be available later this year. No decision has yet been taken on what parts of the country the pilots will take place.

The Council for Disabled Children has produced draft guidance on transition which will be published by the Department later this summer.

Employment: Lancashire

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many people in West Lancashire constituency were recorded as being in full-time employment in the financial year ended March (a) 1997 and (b) 2007; [143530]

(2) how many people in West Lancashire constituency were registered as unemployed in the financial year ending March (a) 1997 and (b) 2007. [143532]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 19 June 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Questions about employment and unemployment in West Lancashire. (143530, 143532).

The Office for National Statistics compiles employment and unemployment statistics for local areas from the annual local area Labour Force Survey (LFS) and the Annual Population Survey (APS) following International Labour Organisation definitions.

Estimates of the number of people in full-time employment, resident in the West Lancashire constituency, as well as all the other parliamentary constituencies in Great Britain, was provided in an Answer on 3rd May 2007 (Hansard: column 1806W-1807W, reference 135561).

There were 3,000 unemployed people aged 16 and over, resident in the West Lancashire constituency, in the 12 month period ending in February 1997 based on data from the annual local area LFS. The estimate for the 12 months ending in September 2006, from the latest available data from the APS, is 3,000. The corresponding unemployment rates are 7.2 per cent for 1997 and 5.8 per cent for 2006.

As these estimates are for a subset of the population in small geographical areas, they are based on small sample sizes, and are therefore subject to large margins of uncertainty.

ONS also compiles statistics for local areas of people claiming Jobseeker's Allowance (ISA). The annual average number of people, resident in the West Lancashire constituency, claiming ISA from March 1996 to February 1997 was 3,230, and for October 2005 to September 2006 was 1,673. Data on numbers of ISA claimants are available for more recent periods than the APS data, and the annual average number of claimants in West Lancashire for April 2006 to March 2007 was 1,711.

Energy: Conservation

Tony Baldry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) energy action plans and (b) buildings have been adapted for energy efficiency under the Eighth Inclusive Communities Budget; at what cost; and whether a Ninth Inclusive Communities Budget is planned. [142592]

John Healey: Priority areas for round 8 of the Invest to Save Budget—Inclusive Communities included improved energy efficiency in the public sector and third sector bodies and efficiency and increased access to the arts and culture sector. I refer to the written answer given to the hon. Member for Rayleigh (Mr. Francois) on 25 April 2007, Official Report, column 1162W, for further detail about these projects. These projects are in their initial stages and we do not have the detail on energy action plans or numbers of buildings adapted at this stage.

Round 9 of the Invest to Save Budget concluded on 27 October 2006 and winners were announced with the Budget on 21 March 2007. Details of the successful projects can be found in the House Library.

Families

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of families with a child under the age of 18 years where there is (a) one parent or guardian and (b) two parents or guardians. [143594]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Jil Matheson, dated 19 June 2007:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your request for the number of families with a child under the age of 18 years where there is (a) one parent or guardian and (b) two parents or guardians. I am replying in her absence. (143594)

The available figures are estimates from the Labour Force Survey of the numbers of families with dependent children in the United Kingdom in each year. A child is considered to be dependent if they are aged under 16 or 1648 but in full-time education. For this reason, the figures include some children aged 18 (those in full-time education). In 2006, it is estimated that there were 1,879 thousand lone parent families with dependent children and 5,474 couple families with dependent children.

Immigration: Greater London

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of international migrants in (a) London and (b) Wimbledon constituency under (i) the International Passenger Survey and (ii) the proposed Labour Force Survey calculation method. [143012]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 19 June 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked by the Chancellor of the Exchequer to reply to your question regarding the estimates made of the number of international migrants in (a) London and (b) Wimbledon constituency under (i) the International Passenger Survey and (ii) the proposed Labour Force Survey calculation method. (143012)

ONS has recently published material detailing a number of proposed improvements to the methods used to estimate the effect of international migration on population. Both the existing method and the planned improvements make use of the International Passenger Survey (IPS). One of the planned improvements is to use the Labour Force Survey to distribute IPS estimates of international migration into the UK between the constituent countries of the UK, and between government office regions within England. Information on this is available at the following page of the National Statistics website: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/statbase/Product.asp?vlnk=14834.

Under the existing methods, the net effect of international migration on the population of London was to add 396,000 people to the population between mid-2002 and mid-2005. Under the proposed methods, the indicative net effect of migration would be to add 336,000 to London's population over this period.

ONS does not produce migration estimates for parliamentary constituencies.

Lymphoma

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many people were diagnosed with lymphoma in each of the last 21 years; [142935]

(2) how many people died from lymphoma in each of the last 21 years. [142936]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Jil Matheson, dated 19 June 2007:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent questions asking how many people were diagnosed with, and how many people died from, lymphoma in each of the last 21 years. I am replying in her absence. (142935, 142936)

The most recent year for which figures are available is 2004 for incidence and 2005 for mortality. The table below shows the number of newly diagnosed cases and deaths from Hodgkin's disease and non-Hodgkin's lymphoma in England from 1984 to the most recent year. These cancers have been presented separately as they have very different epidemiological characteristics and treatments.

Number of newly diagnosed cases and deaths from Hodgkin's disease[1] and non-Hodgkin's lymphoma[2] England, 1984 to 2005[3]

[1] Selected using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9) code 201 for the years 1984 to 1994 for newly diagnosed cases, and from 1984 to 2000 for deaths, and Tenth Revision (ICD-10) code C81 from 1995 onwards for newly diagnosed cases and from 2001 onwards for deaths.

[2] Selected using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9) codes 200, 202 for the years 1984 to 1994 for newly diagnosed cases, and from 1984 to 2000 for deaths, and Tenth Revision (ICD-10) codes C82-C85, C91.4 and C96 from 1995 onwards for newly diagnosed cases and ICD-10 codes C82-C85 from 2001 onwards for deaths. The introduction of ICD-10 for coding cause of death in 2001 means that figures are not completely comparable with data for years prior to this date. Comparisons between the data before and after 2001 should therefore be interpreted with caution. An article specifically examining the effect of the change in classification for cancer trends in England and Wales was published in Health Statistics Quarterly 23. * More information about these changes for England and Wales can be found on the National Statistics website at www.statistics.gov.uk/icd10mortality.

[3] Figures are for registrations of newly diagnosed cases in each calendar year between 1984 and 2004, and for registrations of death in each calendar year between 1984 and 1992 and for occurrences of death in each calendar year from 1993 onwards.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the five year survival rates were for lymphoma in each of the last 21 years. [142937]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 19 June 2007:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what the five year survival rates were for lymphoma in each of the last 21 years. (142937)

The latest available five-year survival rates for selected major cancers in England are for adult patients (aged 15-99 years) diagnosed during 1998-2001 and followed up to the end of 2003. Survival was calculated for Hodgkin's disease and Non-Hodgkin's lymphoma separately. Survival rates for patients diagnosed between 1986 and 2001 are given in the table below.

Five-year age-standardised[1] relative survival (percentage) for adult patients[2] diagnosed during 1986-2001 by selected cancers[3], by sex

	Diagnosis years
	1986-1990 (England and Wales)	1991-1995 (England and Wales)	1996-1999 (England and Wales)	1998-2001 (England)
Hodgkin's disease
Men	75	75	80	80
Women	75	76	80	82
Non-Hodgkin's lymphoma
Men	45	43	47	51
Women	45	49	52	55

[1] As cancer survival varies with age at diagnosis, the relative rates for all ages (15-99) have been age-standardised to control for changes in the age profile of cancer patients over time, thus making them comparable with previously published figures.

[2] Aged 15-99 years.

[3] Cancers registered in from 1995 are defined by codes in the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD10). Therefore, Hodgkin's disease is defined by code C81 and Non-Hodgkin's lymphoma by codes C82-C85. Cancers registered before 1995 are defined by codes in the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD9). Therefore, Hodgkin's disease is defined by code 201 and Non-Hodgkin's lymphoma by codes 200 and 202.

Lyons Inquiry

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans his Department has to respond formally to the Lyons inquiry into local government. [143643]

John Healey: The Government responded to a number of Sir Michael's findings in Budget 2007. His work also played a major contribution in the development of the Local Government White Paper, which is being implemented through the Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Bill. His report and recommendations will continue to inform the development of Government policy.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Bone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the per capita public expenditure was in (a) the East Midlands and (b) the UK in the last period for which figures are available. [142785]

Mr. Timms: Information on total identifiable expenditure per capita for each region of England and for the UK is set out in the HM Treasury publication, "Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses (PESA) 2007", May 2007. This provides outturn data from 2001-02 to 2005-06 and is available at:

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/economic_data_and_tools/finance_spending_statistics/pes_publications/pespub_pesa07.cfm

Revenue and Customs: Consultants

Mr. Meale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much HM Revenue and Customs spent on consultants in each of the last two years, broken down by (a) division, (b) area and (c) type of work commissioned. [137900]

Dawn Primarolo: During the year 2005-06 HMRC spent a total of £106,000,000 on consultancy requirements across the categories of Business, HR, Legal and IT consultancy. At this time the two former departments (HM Customs and Excise and Inland Revenue) were mid-transformation and merging systems and procedures. HMRC accounting function for this period does not enable us to identify the division (directorate) who commissioned the work.

Audited figures for 2006-07 are not available.

Revenue and Customs: Mansfield

Mr. Meale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 27 February 2007, Official Report, columns 1312-3W, on Revenue and Customs: Mansfield, what the costs were for April 2006 to April 2007. [142836]

Dawn Primarolo: The fixed accommodation running costs for Chaucer House, Mansfield for 2006-07 are:

April to March	Cost (net of VAT) (£)
2006-07	111,786.83

This cost is made up of the PFI unitary charge for the provision (by Mapeley) of the serviced accommodation at this address, the business rates and the utilities for the year. The additional cost over the figure previously reported on 27 February 2007 is the March utilities; this was not available at that time.

Strokes: Greater London

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many deaths from stroke there were in London in each of the last five years, broken down by primary care trust area. [143018]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Jil Matheson, dated 19 June 2007:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many deaths from stroke there were in London in each of the last five years, broken down by primary care trust area. I am replying in her absence. (143018)

The table attached provides the number of deaths where stroke was the underlying cause of death in each primary care organisation[1] in London, for 2001 to 2005 (the latest year available).

Taxation: Empty Property

Anne Main: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the change in tax revenue from (a) small and medium-sized and (b) large enterprises arising from the end of the 50 per cent. rate of relief on empty commercial properties; what the evidential basis was for setting the period for 100 per cent. relief at three months; what consideration was given to extending the three month 100 per cent. relief period in taking the decision to remove the subsequent 50 per cent. rate; and what the evidential basis was for setting the period for 100 per cent. tax relief for warehouses and factories at six months. [142736]

John Healey: Yield forecasts for this reform were published in Budget 2007. Further information on the evidence base for the reform and the options that were considered can be found in the regulatory impact assessment, published on the Communities and Local Government website at:

http://www.communities.gov.uk/index.asp?id=1510357.

Valuation Office Agency: Valuebill

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer with which local authorities the Valuation Office Agency communicates using Valuebill. [143748]

Dawn Primarolo: Valuebill facilitates improved communication with all billing authorities in England and Wales.

Welfare Tax Credits

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will investigate the delay in resolving the tax credit case of Mrs. Kim Young. [143998]

Dawn Primarolo: I understand that the hon. Member's constituency office has spoken recently with the Tax Credit Office (TCO) MP Hotline about his constituent's case. TCO apologised and explained they are working to resolve the problems affecting Mrs. Young's case which is among those I referred to in the answer I gave the hon. Member for North-West Cambridgeshire (Mr. Vara) on 18 June 2007, Official Report, column 1502W.

Pensions: Rebates

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consultations there were between (a) officials and (b) Ministers in his Department and (i) officials and (ii) Ministers of the Department for Work and Pensions in (A) 2005 and (B) 2006 before the decision not to implement fully the recommendations of the Government Actuarial Department on contracted-out rebates for salary-related pension schemes; and if he will make a statement. [141180]

James Purnell: I have been asked to reply.

Decisions on the level of contracted-out national insurance rebates are a matter for the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions. The current contracted-out rebate rates were set out in the Secretary of State's report laid before each House of Parliament on 1 March 2006 and reflected in the rebate Order made on 30 March 2006. This report gave due consideration to the report of the Government Actuary and to other considerations such as the fiscal conditions which prevailed at the time. As with all decisions which have a major impact on public expenditure, including previous rebate reviews, the recommended rates were agreed with HM Treasury.

The Secretary of State has departed from the rebate rates recommended by the Government Actuary on two occasions in the period covered by the question, in addition to the one where the Government Actuary's recommendation for rebate rates from 2007 was not fully implemented. The two occasions were the application of a 9.0 per cent. cap on age-related percentages for contracted-out DC schemes for the period 1999-2000 to 2001-02 tax year, and the application of a 10.5 per cent. cap from 2002-03 to 2006-07.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agriculture: Subsidies

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will ensure that at least 96 per cent. of the 2006 Single Farm Payment will be paid by the end of June payment window; and if he will make a statement. [143694]

Barry Gardiner: As of 13 June, the Rural Payments Agency had paid more than 94 per cent. of the amount due to claimants under the 2006 Single Payment Scheme. The Agency is working hard to meet the EU target of paying 96.14 per cent. of claim value by the end of June.

Algae

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the effects of algal blooms on human health in the coastal areas covered by the North Western and North Wales Sea Fisheries Committee. [142807]

Mr. Bradshaw: My Department and I understand the Welsh Assembly Government (who are responsible for water quality in and around Wales) do not directly carry out such assessments.

I am advised by the Environment Agency that while some species of potentially toxic algae are found in the north-west area, they are seldom at significant concentrations and therefore do not pose any risk to human health.

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the extent to which agricultural nitrates are contributing to algal blooms in the area covered by the North Western and North Wales Sea Fisheries Committee. [142808]

Mr. Bradshaw: My Department and I understand the Welsh Assembly Government (who are responsible for water quality in and around Wales) do not directly carry out such assessments.

The eutrophication status (of which algal blooms are a consideration) of the waters around the UK coastline is reviewed on a regular basis by the Environment Agency (England and Wales) for the purposes of the nitrate and urban waste water treatment directives. It is also reviewed by the Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science (CEFAS), for the Convention on the Prevention of Pollution of the Environment of the North East Atlantic (OSPAR) Convention. The latest review under the directives was 2005-06 and under OSPAR was 2002, with a further OSPAR review being completed in the spring of 2007.

Algal blooms in coastal waters are a natural phenomenon. They can be exacerbated by nutrient pollution from human activities e.g. agricultural practices and from sewage. The links between nutrient enrichment and the occurrence of marine algal blooms are complex and an area of continuing research.

The Environment Agency inform me that none of the north-west coastal and marine waters in this Sea Fisheries Committee area are identified as at risk from nutrients in water framework directive risk assessments carried out between 2003-05. These will be reviewed as part of ongoing work on the water framework directive.

Beekeeping: Training

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will bring forward plans (a) to promote training in apiculture and (b) to extend the role of his Department's Bee Unit. [143192]

Barry Gardiner: The National Bee Unit organises a large number of training courses for beekeepers and assists with beekeeper associations' training and examination programme. 600 to 700 training events are held each year. The NBU is currently developing the reach of its training to increase awareness and control of pests and diseases among all beekeepers.

Biodiversity

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures he plans to take to ensure that those biodiversity objectives that can only be delivered through targeted initiatives are the subject of the transfer of existing agri-environmental agreements into the Higher Level Scheme. [142883]

Barry Gardiner: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 8 May 2007, Official Report, column 28W.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy and Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease Inquiry

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost was of the Phillips Inquiry into bovine spongiform encephalopathy. [143708]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy Inquiry, chaired by Lord Phillips of Worth Matravers, cost approximately £30 million. This includes the cost of the inquiry itself, together with the costs of liaison units and legal support for witnesses from all the main Departments involved.

Central Heating: Pensioners

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many central heating systems have been installed for (a) pensioners on pension credit and (b) all other pensioners under the Warm Front and Home Heat programmes since January 2006. [142595]

Ian Pearson: The Government's main programme for tackling fuel poverty in England is Warm Front.

Since January 2006, 31,973 households received central heating systems under the Warm Front scheme having declared pension credit as the qualifying benefit.

Over the same period, 65,399 pensioner households declaring' other qualifying benefits received a central heating system from Warm Front.

Cetaceans

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate his Department has made of the proportion of cetaceans killed or injured in the sea which are washed ashore. [143284]

Mr. Bradshaw: The exact number of cetaceans killed or injured at sea every year is unknown, as it is not feasible to monitor all cetacean deaths. As such, I am unable to estimate the proportion of cetaceans killed or injured at sea that are washed ashore. In any event, this will be influenced by several factors, including distance from shore and the prevailing weather and sea conditions over a period of time.

For nearly 15 years the Government have funded studies by the Natural History Museum and the Institute of Zoology (IoZ) on causes of death and trends in numbers of stranded cetaceans around the UK coastline. Post-mortems are carried out on a selected number of the stranded carcases each year.

The two species that are more commonly reported as stranded along the UK coastline are the harbour porpoise and the common dolphin. The annual proportion of UK-stranded harbour porpoises diagnosed as by-catches varied between 11 per cent. and 25 per cent. in the 2002-06 period. The proportion of UK-stranded common dolphins diagnosed as by-catch varied between 57-77 per cent. for the same period. The majority of these by-catches (for both species) occurred in SW England during the winter months. Although the annual numbers of harbour porpoises and common dolphin strandings reported in SW England has increased since the 1990s, a number of factors (particularly increased observer effort and possible changes in abundance and distribution of these species) are suspected to have played a role in this increase.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the number of bottle nose and common dolphins and harbour porpoises which will be killed or injured by foreign pair trawlers fishing within the UK 12 mile limit in the next 12 months. [143288]

Mr. Bradshaw: My Department funds research which is carried out by the Sea Mammal Research Unit to monitor by-catch in all relevant UK fishery sectors, including the bass pair trawl fishery.

Results for the 2004-05 pair trawl fishery for bass show a marked decrease from the preceding year for the total numbers of dolphins observed as by-catch and the number of dolphins stranding in the south west coast has similarly decreased this year. It is, however, too early, on the basis of one year's data alone, to link these reductions to the 12 mile ban. Further analysis of the effectiveness of the 12 mile ban on sea bass pair trawling will be undertaken as more data become available. The funding for cetacean by-catch and strandings monitoring has been extended to 2010. 2005-06 survey data are being analysed and the results will be published in the near future.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether he has the power to close UK fisheries to foreign-registered pair trawlers to protect dolphins and porpoises. [143289]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Common Fisheries Policy regulation, Council Regulation 2371/2002, provides a number of possible responses to threats faced in relation to fishing activities:

(i) Article 7: Commission emergency powers

These can be used at the request of a Member State where there is a serious threat to the conservation of stocks or the marine environment from the impact of fishing requiring immediate action. The Commission has emergency powers to put in place measures for 6 months applicable to all Member States. Measures are also renewable for a further 6 months. Member states have a right to submit written comments on the request to the Commission. The Commission must decide upon the Member State's request for action within 15 days of receipt. If the Commission decides to take emergency action any Member State can refer the decision to the Council. The Council, acting under qualified majority voting procedures, may take a different decision within one month of the referral.

This article was used successfully by the UK in 2003 to secure protection for the Darwin Mounds when we discovered it was at risk from damaging fishing activities.

(ii) Article 8: Member State emergency measures

These measures can be used by a Member State to take action, subject to confirmation, cancellation or amendment by the Commission, where there is a serious and unforeseen threat to stocks or to the marine environment. Measures would apply to other Member States' vessels but, again, as under Article 7, other Member States have the right to comment and refer the Commission decision on the Member State request to the Council of Ministers. Measures last for 3 months and are non-renewable.

(iii) Article 9: Member State measures within 12 miles

This article provides for Member States to take measures for the conservation of stocks and to minimise the impact of fishing on the marine environment within 12 nautical miles of baselines. Where such measures are liable to affect vessels of other Member States (that is, in practice, those that have historic rights of access under the CFP to the 6-12 nautical mile zone), as with Articles 7 and 8, they are subject to approval by the Commission, open to comment from other Member States and any Commission decision can be referred to the Council of Ministers.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs in which months dolphins and porpoises are most likely to be found washed up on British beaches having been killed or injured by foreign-registered pair trawlers. [143290]

Mr. Bradshaw: The pair trawling sea bass fishery season usually starts in November and continues until April and takes place in the south-west approaches.

From 1 November 2004 to 4 March 2005, a total of 90 cetaceans were reported as stranded along the south coast. Not all of these strandings can be solely attributed to the pair trawling sea bass fishery, and the figures include stranded dead cetaceans, live strandings and carcases seen floating at sea. Only 12 of the 90 cetaceans that were stranded were definitely confirmed as by-catch. These data were obtained under the DEFRA-funded Cetacean and Turtle Strandings Scheme, carried out by the Natural History Museum in partnership with the Institute of Zoology, Marine Environmental Monitoring and Scottish Agricultural College.

Departments: Advertising

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much revenue his Department received from advertisements on his Department's (a) public information leaflets and (b) public websites in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [140665]

Barry Gardiner: Neither public information leaflets issued by the Department nor public websites operated by the Department carry advertisements from which revenue is derived.

Departments: Manpower

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many staff funded by the public purse in the Central Science Laboratory are classified as people without posts. [141647]

Barry Gardiner: The response from the Central Science Laboratory to this question is a nil return.

Departments: Official Cars

Mr. Simon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what make and model of car (a) he and (b) each Minister in his Department selected as their official ministerial car; and what criteria were used when making the decision in each case. [141994]

Barry Gardiner: Defra's official ministerial cars are all hybrid, with four Toyota Prius cars and one Honda Civic Hybrid.

The Government Car and Despatch Agency (GCDA) is responsible for providing ministerial cars in line with the Ministerial Code and the Prime Minister's guidance "Travel by Ministers".

GCDA advises the Prime Minister on the suitability of cars for inclusion in his guidance, taking into account a number of criteria when assessing suitable cars including their environmental impact, running and maintenance costs and overall suitability as a ministerial car.

Departments: Official Residences

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will list the official ministerial residences allocated to Ministers in his Department; and what the total annual cost is of running each. [141969]

Barry Gardiner: There are no official ministerial residencies allocated to Ministers in this Department.

Departments: Public Relations

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much was spent by his Department on public relations in each of the last five years. [139428]

Barry Gardiner: With regard to public relations expenditure incurred by Defra's Communications Directorate over the last five years, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for North Thanet (Mr. Gale) on 6 March 2006, Official Report, columns 1074-75W.

Further to this, in the financial year 2006/07 public relations expenditure for activity conducted via the Department's central Communications Directorate's procurement arrangements was as follows:

Agency	Project	Cost (£)
Media Moguls	Personal Food Imports	45,000
Trimedia Harrison Cowley	Climate Change Radio Media	60,300
Amazon	Sustainable Development	120,000
Weber Shandwick	Climate Change	12,600

Inclusion of non-centralised Defra spend, inclusive of agencies and NDPBs, would incur disproportionate cost.

Departments: Public Transport

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will list the occasions during 2007 when he has used (a) rail services, (b) the London underground, (c) tram or light railway services and (d) buses in connection with his ministerial duties. [142017]

Departments: Publicity

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which (a) advertising agencies and (b) other organisations supplied consultancy services for advertising campaigns for (i) his Department and (ii) its agencies in each of the last five years; and what the cost of these services was. [139433]

Barry Gardiner: From its inception in 2001 to 2003-04, the Department did not record separate advertising costs as part of its overall communications expenditure. The figures for key advertising campaigns from 2004-05 are as follows.

Personal food imports	2004-05	92,343
Personal food imports	2005-06	94,278
Personal food imports	2006-07	81,732
Avian flu	2005-06	185,976

The Department procures its advertising services from the Central Office of Information (COI). Advertising agencies are selected from the COI rosters and supply their services to the COI, not to Defra directly. Personal Food Imports advertising was conducted by Media Moguls and Avian Flu advertising was conducted by Barkers.

No other organisations have supplied advertising services to the Department.

For costs for Defra's delivery bodies, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Cheltenham (Martin Horwood) on 6 March 2007, Official Report, columns 1819-22W.

Domestic Wastes: Waste Disposal

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will publish the most recent figures from WasteDataFlow showing the net cost of household waste collection for each local waste collection authority in England in the most recent period for which figures are available. [143483]

Mr. Bradshaw: Data held on WasteDataFlow for 2005-06 on the cost of local authority waste collections in England are incomplete, due to low response rates for this particular question.

While 100 per cent. of authorities reported tonnage data required under the Landfill Allowance Trading Scheme, not all authorities completed the voluntary financial questions. However, local authorities are required to provide annual spending and financing data to the Department for Communities and Local Government (DCLG), and their Revenue Outturn data include the cost of waste collection and disposal (RO5). The DCLG should therefore be able to provide complete data on the net costs incurred by local authorities for their waste collection services.

Further information is available on the Local Government Finance Statistics website at the following address:

http://www.local.odpm.gov.uk/finance/stats/index.htm

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research and statistical data gathering has been conducted by his Department and its agencies into the proportion of household rubbish collected for recycling that is not recycled. [143484]

Mr. Bradshaw: Local authorities are required to report quarterly data on municipal waste (encompassing household waste) to WasteDataFlow. When reporting data, authorities should specify the amount of waste collected for recycling that is subsequently rejected, at the point of collection, at a Materials Recycling Facility (MRF), or at the gate of the reprocessor. The data reported to WasteDataFlow are used by the Environment Agency (EA) and Defra to monitor the Landfill Allowance Trading Scheme.

The EA has also carried out a survey on Household Waste Materials Reclamation Facilities in England and Wales. The EA identified and visited about 80 candidate sites to ascertain recovery and reject levels at each site, verifying this information via a visual inspection of bale quality and the overall state of each facility. The overall typical spread of reject rates for MRFs was from 5 per cent. to 25 per cent., with 10 to 15 per cent. being an average. Around one million tonnes of municipal waste were reported to WasteDataFlow as being processed by an MRF.

Analysis by the Waste and Resources Action Programme, based on a range of data sources, suggests that a conservative estimate of the amount of household waste collected for recycling which is not recycled, is around 5 to 10 per cent. In 2005-06, a total of 6.87 million tonnes of waste from household sources was collected for recycling.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the appropriateness of alternate weekly collections of household rubbish for (a) urban, (b) rural and (c) suburban communities. [143485]

Mr. Bradshaw: No such assessment has been made by my Department.

The Environmental Protection Act 1990 places a duty on all waste collection authorities to arrange for the collection of household waste, but it does not stipulate how often collections should occur.

Decisions on the best way to collect waste are rightly a matter for local authorities, not central Government. Local authorities are therefore free to choose how they fulfil their waste collection duties, including the frequency, priority, degree of effort and resources required. In practice, local authorities considering alternate weekly collection of household waste are expected to take into account factors such as the type of housing stock in the local area, as well as processing facilities available.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how much the Waste and Resources Action Programme has paid to the Eunomia consultancy; and for what purpose; [143487]

(2) what the procurement process was by which the Eunomia consultancy was selected to undertake research into charging for the collection of household rubbish; [143488]

(3) how much the Eunomia consultancy was paid for its research into new waste charges for the collection of household rubbish. [143489]

Mr. Bradshaw: Since its inception in 2001, the Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) has awarded work to a total value of £349,000 (including VAT) to Eunomia Research & Consulting Ltd. This has covered a number of projects as follows:

i) 'Managing Biowastes from Households in the UK: Cost Benefit Analysis' (June 2007), and the related study, 'Dealing with Food Waste in the UK' (March 2007).

ii) Technical support to two local authority partners under WRAP's Food Waste Collections Trials project.

iii) Technical support to local authorities under the WRAP ROTATE programme—seven projects in total.

iv) Technical report: 'Resources from waste in the UK: A Forward Look' (2005).

v) Technical report: 'Development of Recycling and Material Markets in the UK' (2002).

vi) Technical report: 'The Size of the UK Recycling and Re-use Industry' (2002).

Eunomia Consultancy was selected following a competitive tendering exercise under the call-off contract established as part of Defra's Waste Implementation Programme. The purpose of the call-off contract is to provide consultancy support for projects requiring specialist input over a short working programme timescale. Three contractors available under the call-off contract submitted tenders for the work. These were analysed using Defra's standard tender appraisal procedure.

The total cost of work undertaken by Eunomia Consulting on the project 'Modelling the Impact of Household Charging', was £41,615.00, excluding VAT.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what records (a) his Department and (b) the Waste and Resources Action Programme holds of the number of local authorities which have introduced alternate weekly collection of household rubbish and then switched back to weekly collections. [143490]

Mr. Bradshaw: No records are held, either by this Department or by the Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP), specifically on local authorities (LAs) which have introduced alternate weekly collection of household waste and subsequently reverted to weekly collections.

WRAP is aware of a number of LAs providing alternate weekly collection (AWC) of household waste and provides support and guidance to these LAs on best practice in operating such a service.

WRAP's records represent our best understanding of LAs operating or implementing AWC schemes. However, due to the often rapid changes in this area, they are unlikely to be completely up to date.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance (a) his Department and (b) its agencies have given to local authorities in relation to their powers to inspect the contents of household rubbish bins. [143499]

Mr. Bradshaw: No specific guidance has been issued either by my Department or its agencies on inspecting the contents of household rubbish bins. Section 46 of the Environmental Protection Act (ERA) empowers local authorities to specify the conditions of their waste collection service and places a duty on them to inform householders of those conditions. This usually takes the form of a section 46 notice. Under these powers, local authorities can specify the number, size, construction and maintenance of receptacles, what can be placed in each, and where and when they are to be placed for collection. Authorities can also require household waste to be treated prior to placing it in a receptacle.

Any person found in breach of the conditions set in a section 46 notice can be prosecuted and, if convicted, is liable to a fine of up to £1,000. The Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005 also gives local authorities the power to issue fixed penalty notices to those breaching a section 46 notice, as an alternative to prosecution under section 46(6) of the EPA.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what scientific research has been conducted by (a) his Department and (b) its agencies into alternate weekly collections of household rubbish. [143500]

Mr. Bradshaw: An independent, DEFRA-funded research study was carried out by Enviros Consulting and Cranfield university in 2006 to assess the health impacts of alternate weekly collection (AWC).

The final report, "Health Impact assessment of alternate week waste collections of biodegradable waste", identified no evidence of adverse health impacts resulting from AWC of household waste.

No scientific research has been conducted by DEFRA's agencies on AWC. However, the Waste and Resources Action Programme is currently updating its guidance to local authorities on the design and implementation of AWC services and will be drawing on the experiences of authorities that have already implemented such schemes.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of fly-tipping incidents recorded on the Flycapture database in the last year for which figures are available were for (a) householders putting out their rubbish on the wrong day and (b) householders breaching a no side collection policy. [143538]

Mr. Bradshaw: The data requested are not available. Flycapture does not record incidents of householders putting their waste out on the wrong day (in breach of notices issued under section 46 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990) separately from other incidents of fly-tipping.

Flycapture does not record details of householders breaching a no side waste collection policy.

Domestic Wastes: Waste Management

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the amount of waste produced per person in local authorities operating (a) alternate weekly collections, (b) no side waste policies and (c) traditional weekly collections. [142617]

Mr. Bradshaw: No such estimates have been made by my Department.

Data on waste produced per person are collected as part of local authorities' statutory performance monitoring. However, the Government do not keep data on the waste collection policies chosen by individual authorities. It is, rightly, the responsibility of individual local authorities to decide on the most appropriate waste collection policies for their communities.

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations he has received on the incidence of flies and vermin in areas that have introduced an alternate weekly collection of household waste. [142776]

Mr. Bradshaw: Some representations, in the form of parliamentary questions and correspondence, have been received by my Department from people concerned about possible links between the alternate weekly collection of waste and increases in flies and vermin.

There is no evidence in published studies to indicate a causal link between an increase in flies or rodents as a result of alternate week collection. The characteristics of a location will influence the rodent population and simple hygiene practices can directly prevent or reduce rat and fly populations. An independent, DEFRA-funded research study on the use of alternate weekly collection services, carried out by Enviros Consulting and Cranfield university in 2006, drew the same conclusions.

Proper design of an alternate weekly collection service should avoid any increase in nuisance to householders. The waste and resources action programme is currently updating its guidance for local authorities on the design and implementation of alternate weekly collection services, in order to minimise nuisance and health risks.

Energy: Conservation

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on green workplace initiatives. [143149]

Ian Pearson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, and Defra Ministers, have held discussions recently with colleagues from other Departments, such as the Department of Trade and Industry and the Department for Work and Pensions, on the subject of greening the workplace, as part of the wider discussions on climate change. In addition, Defra co-chairs the Trade Union Sustainable Development Advisory Committee (TUSDAC) with the General Secretary of Prospect. Green workplace, energy and climate change issues are raised through this forum.

Energy: Manufacturing Industries

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on development of a green manufacturing strategy. [143150]

Ian Pearson: Defra Ministers and officials hold regular discussions with the Department of Trade and Industry on various aspects of the greener business agenda and promoting a low carbon, low waste economy. This is reflected in the Energy White Paper and Waste Strategy which build on the Government's broader Sustainable Development Strategy.

The Secretaries of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs and for Trade and Industry jointly chair the Commission on Environmental Markets and Economic Performance. The commission was established to advise the UK on the opportunity that environmental protection can present for wealth creation and employment growth.

Environmental Protection: Consultants

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much his Department and its agencies spent on commissioning research or consultancy from Be-Environmental in the last three years; and for what purposes. [142379]

Barry Gardiner: DEFRA and its agencies have spent £242,949 on commissioning research or consultancy from Be-Environmental since the beginning of the 2004-05 financial year. This was for work in the waste sector including: support to local authorities to improve their waste management services; research; performance reviews of DEFRA programmes and projects; the planning and facilitation of events and focus groups to improve DEFRA programmes; website development; and support to DEFRA's Waste and Resources Research and Development Strategy.

Fisheries: EC Action

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures he plans to take to assist the recovery of the stock of the European eel; when he expects them to be (a) approved by the European Council and (b) implemented; and if he will make a statement. [142285]

Mr. Bradshaw: On 11 June at the Agriculture and Fisheries Council European Ministers accepted unanimously a recovery plan for the European eel. This plan has been in development since 2003 and its agreement at Council was vital if we are to see a recovery of a stock that has seen recruitment drop to 1-5 per cent. of historic level (pre-1980s).

Under the recovery plan member states must, in the long term, achieve 40 per cent. escapement of silver eel from each river basin district (or as an average across the member state) compared to the level before man's intervention. They must also cut fishing effort/catches in Community maritime waters by 50 per cent. and reserve, over time, 60 per cent. of glass (juvenile) eel for restocking in European waters.

Fishing for eel can continue if a member state can reliably demonstrate that the rivers within its river basin district allow—or a recovery plan is in place to allow—the management target to be met.

Member states must submit an eel management plan for each eel river basin to the European Commission by 31 December 2008, then have them approved by the Scientific, Technical and Economic Committee for Fisheries, and implemented by 1 July 2009.

Fisheries: Quotas

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what stocks fished by the UK (a) over-10 metre fleet and (b) under-10 metre fleet are (i) within safe biological limits and (ii) outside safe biological limits, and if he will make a statement. [143560]

Mr. Bradshaw: The following table records the status of the 47 finfish stocks of most interest to the UK for 2006. The complete picture for 2007 will not be available until after the second instalment of the annual ICES advice is produced in October. Since both segments of the fleet (under-10 and over-10 metre vessels) tend to target similar species, no distinction is made between the stocks fished by each.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when he expects to publish proposals to change the way that fishing quota is allocated in the UK for (a) the under-10 metre fleet and (b) the over-10 metre fleet. [143562]

Mr. Bradshaw: Fisheries administrations are currently considering the future quota management arrangements for both the over and the under 10 metre fleets and expect to consult interested parties on options later this year.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when he expects the European Commission to publish its 2008 fishing opportunities proposals for stocks fished by UK vessels. [143563]

Mr. Bradshaw: The latest information from the Commission is that they intend to prepare two proposals for regulations concerning fishing opportunities: one relating to stocks in the Baltic sea to be presented in September 2007; and the other covering stocks in the Northeast Atlantic in November 2007, following receipt of the second instalment of the annual scientific advice from ICES in October. New proposals about deep-sea stocks are unlikely, as Council Regulation (EC) No. 2015/2006, concerning fishing opportunities for deep-sea species, already covers both 2007 and 2008.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether it is his policy to support proposals to reduce total allowable catch and fishing opportunities for fish stocks outside safe biological limits at a rate in excess of 15 per cent. per year; and if he will make a statement. [143564]

Mr. Bradshaw: In most cases, the UK seeks to follow the scientific advice from ICES on the appropriate catch level for a particular stock. However, there are some cases where, while accepting the ICES stock assessment, the UK does not agree with the management advice suggested by ICES. For example, additional information may be available from other sources, which suggests a different approach.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the proposals in the Commission Communication, Fishing Opportunities for 2008: Policy Statement from the European Commission (COM(2007) 295 final). [143598]

Mr. Bradshaw: The European Commission have asked for responses from member states by 31 July. Fisheries Departments are currently considering the text whilst consulting relevant stakeholders and the UK intends to provide a full response within the deadline.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whom he will consult before submitting his response to the European Commission on its Communication, Fishing Opportunities for 2008: Policy Statement from the European Commission (COM(2007) 295 final). [143599]

Mr. Bradshaw: My Department is currently consulting a range of fishing industry representatives (including those in the catching, processing and marketing sectors), scientists and environmental and consumer interests. Equivalent consultations are also being carried out in other parts of the UK by the Fisheries Departments in the Devolved Administrations.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the appropriate level for total allowable catch in 2008 in the North Sea for (a) herring, (b) cod, (c) haddock, (d) whiting, (e) plaice and (f) sole; and if he will make a statement. [143600]

Mr. Bradshaw: ICES advice on the North Sea stocks mentioned was published on 8 June. The Government are considering that advice carefully and has not yet made an assessment of it.

Food: Prices

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the farmgate price of (a) apples, (b) beef, (c) cabbages, (d) carrots, (e) chicken, (f) eggs, (g) lamb, (h) onions, (i) pork, (j) potatoes, (k) tomatoes, (l) wheat and (m) milk was in each year since 1995. [142514]

Barry Gardiner: The farmgate prices from 1995 up to 2006 for the listed commodities are shown in the following table. The prices for 2006 are provisional.

Lessons Learned from Foot and Mouth Disease Outbreak Inquiry

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost was of the 2001 inquiry into Foot and Mouth disease. [143709]

Mr. Bradshaw: There were two independent inquiries into the 2001 Foot and Mouth Crisis: a Lessons Learned Inquiry, chaired by Dr. Iain Anderson, and a scientific review by the Royal Society, chaired by Sir Brian Follett. The costs of the inquiries were as follows:

Royal Society Inquiry	425,000
Anderson Inquiry	526,000
DEFRA/MAFF Inquiry Liaison Unit	290,000
Treasury Solicitor	13,787
Total	1,254,787

Livestock: Transport

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance or regulations his Department has issued for the maximum and minimum acceptable temperatures for the rearing and transportation of livestock. [143567]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Welfare of Farmed Animals (England) Regulations 2000 do not specify a maximum and minimum temperature for the rearing of livestock, but do require temperatures to be kept within limits which are not harmful to the animals.

Council Regulation (EC) No 1/2005 on the protection of animals during transport and related operations, implemented in England by The Welfare of Animals (Transport) (England) Order 2006, requires all transporters of livestock to avoid animals suffering from extremes of temperature. For journeys of more than eight hours, vehicles must be designed to maintain temperatures of between 5°C and 30°C (+/- 5°C). However, for journeys solely within the UK, we have a derogation from the lower end of the scale until the time the vehicle is first moved and during any loading/unloading at intermediate points. This is because livestock often housed outdoors are accustomed to cold weather and the animals' body heat quickly raises the temperature above 0°C.

Animal Health will write to transporters of farm livestock and horses with additional hot weather advice and to remind them of their responsibilities.

Lorries

Mr. Bacon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether his Department plans to take steps to prevent supermarket chains from stipulating that deliveries to their stores are made by HGVs of at least 7.5 tonnes gross weight; and if he will make a statement. [142642]

Ian Pearson: I have no plans to do so.

National Bee Unit: Finance

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the budget of the National Bee Unit at the Central Science Laboratory was in each of the last five years for which records are available; and if he will make a statement. [142277]

Barry Gardiner: The budget for the Central Science Laboratory National Bee Unit for the last five years is as follows:

Financial year	Budget
2003-04	1,496,172
2004-05	1,493,567
2005-06	1,691,470
2006-07	1,832,180
2007-08	1,822,142

Notes:
1. Budget (= income) comprises DEFRA and Welsh Assembly government expenditure under memorandums of understanding with the CSL, DEFRA commissioned research plus an element of commercial income.
2. Income for 2007-08 is estimated.

National Bee Unit: Manpower

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people were employed in the National Bee Unit at the Central Science Laboratory in each of the last five years for which records are available. [142280]

Barry Gardiner: The number of people employed in the Central Science Laboratory National Bee Unit in the last five years is as follows:

Financial year	Numbers of staff	FTE
2002-03	51	30.53
2003-04	51	32.12
2004-05	50	27.36
2005-06	48	24.34
2006-07	54	27.12
2007-08	48	27.64

Notes:
1. FTE is full time equivalents. Numbers of staff are expressed as FTEs as a number of the NBU staff including inspectors work seasonally or part-time during the course of the year.
2. Data for 2007-08 are forecast figures.

Nuclear Decommissioning Authority

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the Government intend to publish the legal advice they have received on the decision to merge Nirex and the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority. [141783]

Ian Pearson: The fact and substance of legal advice to the Government is confidential. It is covered by legal professional privilege. To enable the Government to obtain full and frank legal advice it is not disclosed. Therefore, the Government do not intend to publish the legal advice they have received on the decision to merge Nirex and the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority.

Pigs: EC Action

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with EU Ministers about the use of farrowing crates for nursing pigs; and if he will make a statement. [144002]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have regular discussions with European Union (EU) ministers on a range of issues, including animal welfare. DEFRA would prefer to avoid the close confinement of all sows, but there are currently no free-farrowing systems suitable for widespread commercial adoption. Farrowing crates protect piglets from being crushed by the sow—one of the largest causes of pig mortality. It is equally important to maintain the welfare of the piglet as that of the sow.

There is a time limit on how long sows may be kept in farrowing crates: from seven days before the predicted day of farrowing until the piglets are weaned. After this period sows in the UK must be moved back to loose housing accommodation in which they are free to turn around easily.

We have funded research to test and develop commercially viable farrowing systems that provide adequate protection to piglets but do not closely confine the sow. As yet, the risk of piglet mortality in alternative systems remains unacceptably high. Our research will contribute to the European Food Safety Authority's examination of a range of issues, including farrowing systems, leading up to the next review of the EU Directive on pig welfare.

Radioactive Wastes: Waste Management

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make it his policy to amend the Energy Act 2004 as it relates to the responsibilities of the Nuclear Decommissioning

Authority in response to the Fourth Report of the House of Lords Science and Technology Select Committee: Radioactive Waste Management: an Update. [141780]

Ian Pearson: We are considering the report and will respond within the normal timetable.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if the Government will review the proposed relationship between the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority and the successor body to the Committee of Radioactive Waste Management in response to the Fourth Report of the House of Lords Science and Technology Select Committee: Radioactive Waste Management: an Update, HL 109. [141782]

Ian Pearson: We are considering the report and will respond within the normal timetable.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how members of (a) the Criteria Proposals Group and (b) the Criteria Review Panel responsible for deciding the scientific criteria for initial screening of areas unsuitable for a geological repository for long-lived radioactive waste were chosen; what criteria were used in selecting the membership; and what budget has been allocated to service each group and panel. [143770]

Ian Pearson: The Criteria Proposals Group (CPG) and Criteria Review Panel (CRP) were established on the basis of recommendations from the Royal Society, the Royal Academy of Engineering, the Geological Society, and the DEFRA Chief Scientific Advisor, Professor Sir Howard Dalton. Both were ad-hoc groups charged with developing criteria for inclusion in the forthcoming Managing Radioactive Waste Safely consultation document. CPG, led by Professor Peter Styles of Keele university, developed draft criteria. Its proposals were independently reviewed by CRP, led by Professor Howard Wheater of Imperial college, London. Selection of members of the groups was made on the basis of the need to involve high calibre expertise across the range of earth science and related disciplines. Members of the two groups were paid a daily rate for their work. The cost of the work is currently estimated to be of the order of £40,000.

Waste Management: Standards

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what savings have been achieved on each of the business resource efficiency and waste efficiency targets in 2006-07; and if he will make a statement; [143214]

(2) what the cost per tonne was for reductions made by the business resource efficiency and waste programme in (a) waste to landfill, (b) hazardous waste and (c) water; and how much carbon dioxide has been saved under the programme since its inception. [143215]

Mr. Bradshaw: Delivery bodies conducting programmes under the wider business resource efficiency and waste programme (BREW) report on a number of environmental and business-based 'metrics' covering: .

Environmental:

i) reduction of greenhouse gas or equivalents

ii) virgin raw materials saved

iii) reduced hazardous waste arisings

iv) decreased water usage

v) waste diverted from landfill

Business:

vi) cost savings

vii) new business sales

The metrics system was developed during the first year of the programme and is still being worked on to ensure a greater level of consistency in the methodologies used by different delivery bodies. As the methodology has not yet been perfected, the year one (2005-06) results are being viewed with caution and should only be used to give an indication of the savings being made. There are areas of the programme where the work cannot be measured against the metrics. For example, the Environment Agency work to reduce flytipping, if successful, could increase the amount of waste sent to landfill.

The aggregated results for 2005-06, for the delivery bodies which reported in-year savings against some or all of the metrics, are shown in the following table. It is important to note that there will also be savings from these interventions in future years not counted here:

Metric	In-year result	Cost per unit reduction for these in-year results (£)
Increased sales	£14.6 million	1.27
Cost savings to business	£88 million	0.21
Virgin raw material savings	682,000 tonnes	27.24
Carbon savings	87,300 tonnes of carbon[1]	212.77
Water savings	5,630,000 cubic metres	3.39
Waste diverted from landfill	675,000 tonnes	27.52
Hazardous waste savings	120,000 tonnes	154.79

[1] For consistency, the delivery bodies that have reported in carbon dioxide have had their figures converted to carbon. Their carbon dioxide figures were multiplied by 12/44.

Work is currently underway to assess the impact of programme spending in 2006-07.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the Business Resource Efficiency and Waste Organisation's budget was for 2005-06; and what it is planned to be in 2006-07. [143258]

Mr. Bradshaw: DEFRA's business resource efficiency and waste (BREW) programme is returning £284 million raised from the landfill tax escalator back to businesses between 2005 and 2008 to improve their resource efficiency and to minimise the levels of waste that are unnecessarily sent to landfill.

Funds are awarded to a number of regional and national BREW delivery bodies. A total of £33 million was allocated in 2005-06 and £100.7 million was allocated in the 2006-07 financial year for spending on business resource efficiency activities in England.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Departments: Data Protection

Grant Shapps: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many times his Department has been found to have been in breach of the Data Protection Act 1998 since its establishment; and if he will make a statement. [139235]

The Deputy Prime Minister: My Department is not aware of having been found to be in breach of the Data Protection Act since its establishment.

Joint Ministerial Committee

Mr. Heald: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he last attended a meeting of the Joint Ministerial Committee. [140842]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The Joint Ministerial Committee (JMC) exists in both function and plenary formats. It has met in various functional formats to discuss specific policy areas such as Health, Poverty, the Knowledge Economy and Europe. Of these four subject areas, the JMC on Europe meets most regularly and is serviced by staff from the Cabinet Office. The UK Government have always been represented at JMC plenary and functional meetings.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Civil Servants: Foreign Workers

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many civil service posts in each department have been designated as reserved posts. [144128]

Mr. McFadden: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him on 28 March 2007, Official Report, column 1621W.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many certificates under the Aliens Employment Act 1955 permitting employment of aliens in the civil service are in force; how many there were in 2006-07; and in which departments those holding such a certificate work. [144129]

Mr. McFadden: The total number of aliens' certificates in force during 2006-07 was 66.

The Departments and agencies employing aliens and the numbers of aliens' certificates in force during 2006-07 were:

	Number
ACAS	1
Crown Prosecution Service	2
Department for Culture, Media and Sport	1
Ministry of Defence	37
Department for Education and Skills	3
Foreign and Commonwealth Office	6
Government Actuary's Department	1
Department of Health	1
Home Office	1
Meat Hygiene Service	4
Meteorological Office	2
Office for National Statistics	1
Scottish Executive	1
HM Treasury	2
Department for Work and Pensions	1
Total	66

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether posts in HM Revenue and Customs concerned with the collection of taxes are considered to be in the public service and thus restricted posts to European Economic Area nationals; and if she will make a statement. [144130]

Mr. McFadden: With very few exceptions, posts in HM Revenue and Customs concerned with the collection of taxes are not considered to be public service posts and are therefore open to applicants from the European Economic Area.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many civil service posts are reserved to UK nationals; how many she estimates it is operationally necessary so to reserve; and if she will make a statement. [144131]

Mr. McFadden: It is estimated that 27,000 civil service posts are currently reserved to UK nationals under the criteria specified on the face of the European Communities (Employment in the Civil Service) Order 2007. They are all operationally necessary as a post cannot be reserved if it does not fall within these criteria.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what percentage of civil service posts in the UK are (a) available to Commonwealth, Irish and European Economic Area nationals and (b) designated as public service posts entirely reserved for UK nationals. [144132]

Mr. McFadden: It is estimated that 95 per cent. of all civil service posts are available to Commonwealth, Irish and European Economic Area nationals following the European Communities (Employment in the Civil Service) Order 2007. The remainder, designated as public service posts, are reserved for UK nationals.

European Communities (Employment in the Civil Service) Order 2007

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster pursuant to the answer of 28 March 2007, Official Report, column 1622W, on the European Communities (Employment in the Civil Service) Order 2007, whether the revisions to which she refers have been completed; and if she will place copies of the revisions in the Library. [144127]

Mr. McFadden: Work on the various documents is still in progress. Once finalised, they will be freely available on the Cabinet Office website.

Social Exclusion Unit: Pilot Schemes

Danny Alexander: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what pilot projects have been (a) initiated and (b) supported by the Social Exclusion Unit and the Social Exclusion Task Force; and which of those have since been implemented on a national basis. [143803]

Hilary Armstrong: 'Reaching Out', the Social Exclusion Action Plan, published last September announced three sets of pilots: 10 Family Nurse Partnership (FNP) are now up and running; 12 Adults Facing Chronic Exclusion (ACE) were launched on 18 June; and up to 6 Multi Systemic Therapy (MST) for which the invitation to tender is due to take place in July. Progress on the pilots will be closely evaluated to provide lessons for cross-Government programmes tackling social exclusion.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Coastal Areas: Hampshire

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the likely effects of climate change on coastal areas of Hampshire in (a) 2020, (b) 2050 and (c) 2080; and if she will make a statement. [142407]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

The Hampshire coast is covered by two Shoreline Management Plans. Once reviewed, these plans will provide a large-scale assessment of the risks associated with coastal processes taking account of climate change and other factors. They will also provide a policy framework to manage risks in a sustainable manner, looking ahead over the next 100 years and based on up to date guidance. The reviews will include full consultation with those likely to be affected.

DEFRA published revised guidance for operating authorities on future rates of sea level rise in November 2006. This recommended the following allowances for the east and south east of England, including the effects of vertical land movement:

4.0 mm rise per year from the baseline of nominal 1990 levels to 2025

8.5 mm from 2025 to 2055

15.0 mm from 2085 to 2115.

Estimates of future sea level rise vary. The aforementioned guidance has been published solely for the purpose of informing flood and coastal erosion risk management decisions and is kept under review. The assumptions and qualifications on which the recommendations are based are included in the guidance which is published on the DEFRA website.

DEFRA policy has been guided by the Government's 2004 Foresight Report which presented possible future flood and coastal erosion risk scenarios. DEFRA, the UK Climate Impacts Programme and Met Office Hadley Centre will publish updated climate change scenarios for the UK in 2008 which should improve understanding of how climate change may affect sea level rise and storm surge over the next 100 years.

Conveyancing: Fees and Charges

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what figures her Department holds on the average cost charged by individual local authorities for property searches. [140862]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of Fair Trading 2005 report "Property Searches—A market study" showed the range of prices for LA searches from £55 to £269 with a median price of £119. We are currently looking at ways of updating these data. 50 local authorities have recently reduced the cost of their searches by an average of 20 per cent. in advance of the introduction of Home Information Packs.

Council Tax

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the estimated total revenue from parish precepts on council tax in England is for 2007-08. [141776]

Ruth Kelly: Levels of council tax set by local authorities in England in 2007-08 were set out in the Communities and Local Government Statistical Release published on 27 March 2007 on the Department's website. The release may by accessed at http://www.local.odpm.gov.uk/finance/ctax/ctax078.pdf and a copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

Departments: Marketing

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much her Department has spent on (a) advertising, (b) publicity and (c) marketing for (i) home information packs, (ii) licensing of houses in multiple occupation and (iii) the tenancy deposit scheme. [128530]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 24 May 2007, Official Report, column 1527W, for Home Information Packs. For the licensing of HMO's and the tenancy deposit scheme, please see the following table.

	£ million
Tenancy deposit scheme	1.4
Houses of multiple occupancy	1.4

All three campaigns have been carried out to inform the public of changes in law and to encourage them to find out more information about their duties and obligations under those laws.

East Midlands Regional Plan

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) which local authorities have made formal submissions to the consultation on the Draft East Midlands Regional Plan; [110988]

(2) how many official submissions were made in response to the public consultation on the Draft East Midlands Regional Plan. [110989]

Meg Munn: The formal consultation on the draft East Midlands Plan (Regional Spatial Strategy for the East Midlands) ended on 20 December 2006. During the consultation 1284 responses were submitted and a list of all the respondents and a summary of representations is posted on the East Midlands RSS website:

http://www.planning-inspectorate.gov.uk/pins/rss/east_midlands/index.htm.

Among the responses were 110 representations from Parish and Town Councils, 59 from local authorities (including all 46 local authorities in the East Midlands Region) and 23 from Government departments and other official agencies (including Regional Assemblies).

The local authorities that submitted formal representations included:

Amber Valley BC, Ashfield DC, Aylesbury Vale DC, Bassetlaw DC, Bedford BC, Bedfordshire CC, Blaby DC, Bolsover DC, Boston BC, Broxtowe BC, Cambridgeshire CC, Charnwood BC, Cherwell DC, Chesterfield BC, Corby BC, Daventry DC, Derby City, Derbyshire CC, Derbyshire Dales DC, East Lindsey DC, East Northamptonshire DC, East Staffordshire BC, Erewash BC, Gedling BC, Harborough DC, High Peak BC, Hinckley and Bosworth BC, Kettering BC, Leicester City, Leicestershire CC, Lincoln City, Lincolnshire CC, Mansfield DC, Melton BC, Newark and Sherwood DC, North East Derbyshire DC, North East Lincolnshire council, North Kesteven DC, North Lincolnshire council, North West Leicestershire DC, Northampton BC, Northamptonshire CC, Nottingham City, Nottinghamshire CC, Nuneaton and Bedworth BC, Oadby and Wigston BC, Peak District National Park Authority, Peterborough City, Rugby BC, Rushcliffe BC, Rutland CC, Sheffield City, South Derbyshire DC, South Holland DC, South Kesteven DC, South Northamptonshire DC, Staffordshire CC, Wellingborough BC and West Lindsey DC.

Fire Services: Urban Areas

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what factors are taken into account when considering the merging or amalgamation of fire stations in urban areas; and if she will make a statement. [144089]

Angela E. Smith: Fire and rescue authorities (FRAs) are required by the Fire and Rescue Service National Framework to have in place and maintain an Integrated Risk Management Plan (IRMP) which reflects local need and sets out plans to tackle effectively both existing and potential risks to communities. The IRMP enables the authority to tailor cover to fire and other incidents to local circumstances by evaluating where risk is greatest and allocating resources accordingly.

Home Information Packs

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the cost to the public purse has been of (a) stakeholder events and (b) consultants on home information packs, broken down by main budget heading. [128597]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 24 May 2007, Official Report, column 1527W.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what (a) oral and (b) written representations her Department has received from the right hon. Member for Greenwich and Woolwich on Home Information Packs. [140852]

Ruth Kelly: My right hon. Friend the Member for Greenwich and Woolwich has sent two letters on Home Information Packs. The first was written on behalf of a constituent and was dated 30 November 2005. The second was a request for a meeting to discuss the implementation of Home Information Packs with representatives of the Construction Industry Council and was dated 26 July 2006. The meeting was held on 30 November 2006 with the Minister for Housing and Planning. I have frequent meetings with my colleagues during which a variety of issues are discussed.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether the cost of local authority searches will become liable for VAT if they are included in a home information pack. [140859]

Yvette Cooper: Charges for searches provided by local authorities for inclusion in home information packs are currently not subject to VAT, and therefore they will not become so when included in a home information pack.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what expenditure has been incurred on marketing, public relations and communications relating to home information packs. [143498]

Yvette Cooper: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 24 May 2007, Official Report, column 1527W.

Housing: Valuation

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the classification is of a greenhouse located with the curtilage of a domestic dwelling for the purposes of a Valuation Office Agency dwellinghouse or value significant coding. [141737]

Ruth Kelly: Greenhouses are not classified separately within the Valuation Office Agency's coding system.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will place in the Library a copy of the Valuation Office Agency's Dwellinghouse Code Validation Matrix as listed in CT IA 241005. [141774]

Ruth Kelly: A copy of this matrix has been placed in the Library of the House. This was an internal guide made available to VOA staff during the mass data capture exercise that took place in preparation for the (now postponed) council tax revaluation in England.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government on what date the Valuation Office Agency's Dwellinghouse Coding Guide was last updated on the agency's intranet. [141775]

Ruth Kelly: 27 January 2005.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will place in the Library a copy of the Valuation Office Agency's document Mass Data Capture of Dwellinghouse Codes—FAQ. [141812]

Ruth Kelly: A copy of the document has been placed in the Library of the House and it can also be found on the Valuation Office website:

www.voa.gov.uk.

Land: Databases

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what use the Automated Valuation Model of the Valuation Office Agency makes of the National Land and Property Gazetteer. [143476]

Angela E. Smith: The Valuation Office Agency's Automated Valuation Model makes use of grid co-ordinates supplied from the National Land and Property Gazetteer to identify the location of properties and their relative geographic position.

Local Government: Pay

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the average increase in local government employee wages was in each year since 1996-97; and what the cost of the local government wage bill was in each year since 1996-97. [141823]

Ruth Kelly: Information on local government wages is not held centrally. However, the increase in the local government employee pay bill and the cost of the local government employee expenditure in each year is published in Local Government Financial Statistics or in National Statistics Releases as available from:

http://www.localcommunities.gov.uk/finance/stats/index.htm

All figures are for England only.

Parish Councils

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether district and unitary councils will have powers to direct parish councils to change their names under her proposals for reform of local government. [129745]

Ruth Kelly: Under the terms of the Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Bill there are no powers available to principle authorities to change the geographical name of a parish council. However, the principle authority is able to direct a parish council to change the way they refer to their area. The alternative terms of reference are "community", "neighbourhood" or "village".

Planning Gain Supplement

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether she expects planning gain supplement to apply to new (a) farm buildings, (b) mobile phone masts and (c) ATM cash machines, where such developments require planning permission. [141816]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

The Government set out the proposed scope of the Planning-gain Supplement in paragraphs 3.121 and 3.122 of the 2006 pre-Budget report.

Planning: Teesside

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the suitability of Tees Valley being used as a pilot area for a Multi Area Agreement. [143427]

Mr. Woolas: Multi-Area Agreements (MAAs) are being taken forward through the review of sub-national economic development and regeneration. As a result we are still refining our thinking about how MAAs will operate and have not made any formal assessment on which sub-regions would have MAAs.

However, officials have been working closely with colleagues in Tees Valley who have established a very effective sub-regional partnership. Officials are continuing to work with the Tees Valley Partnership to further develop their city region business case as well as their thinking to develop a MAA. We are learning from their approach already and will continue our dialogue with them as we take this policy forward.

Public Sector Relocation Independent Review

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which Government agency or department now holds the documents produced by the Lyons Review of Local Government; and what plans the Government has to transfer this material to the National Archives. [142361]

Ruth Kelly: A copy of the Lyons Inquiry website has been captured to form part of the UK Government Web Archive at The National Archives. Other documents from the Inquiry are now held by the Department for Communities and Local Government. We will hold discussions with The National Archives about these documents in due course.

Second Homes: Taxation

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what representations she has received on the proportion of receipts from local taxation on second homes that should be spent in the district in which the home is located. [143805]

Mr. Woolas: The decision to change the council tax on second homes from between 50 per cent. to 90 per cent. lies with the local authority. The increased council tax receipts accrue to the local authority.

Communities and Local Government does not therefore hold a record of representations received about the proportion of receipts from the local taxation of second homes that should be spent in the district in which the home is located.

Travelling People

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will give directions to those local authorities, whose plans will not deliver land allocations for Gypsy and Traveller accommodation within the target framework, to meet unmet need. [144059]

Meg Munn: The Secretary of State may direct a local authority to amend its local development scheme to allocate land for Gypsy and Traveller accommodation, where she considers it appropriate. Directions in this regard have been given to two local authorities.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will require local planning authorities to report, upon receipt of pitch requirements from the relevant regional planning board on plans for delivery of those pitches, with a timetable. [144060]

Meg Munn: Local authorities must allocate sufficient sites in site allocation development plan documents to meet the pitch requirements allocated to them by Regional Assemblies in Regional Spatial Strategies. Section 35 of the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act requires every local authority to make an annual report to the Secretary of State containing information on the implementation of the local development scheme, which includes development plan documents, and the extent to which policies set out in local development documents are being achieved.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will instigate a review of caravan counts and the methods of ascertaining the size of the Gypsy and Traveller population for local authority biannual caravan counts. [144062]

Meg Munn: The caravan counts provide a snapshot of the number of caravans owned by Gypsies and Travellers situated in a local authority area on a single day. As such, it does not include Gypsies and Travellers living in bricks and mortar housing, and does not provide a record of the total Gypsy and Traveller population within a local authority area. There are no plans to review the caravan count at this time.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of the spectrum required for high definition television; and what safeguards are in place to ensure there will be sufficient spectrum available for such broadcasting. [143702]

Mr. Woodward: None.

HD can be provided on various platforms; it is essentially a matter for broadcasters and Ofcom. They are currently in discussion regarding the provision of HD on existing digital terrestrial television (DTT) capacity.

Nicholas Goodison

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether (a) she and (b) any Minister in her Department has met Sir Nicholas Goodison formally since the publication of his report to discuss his recommendations. [143291]

Mr. Lammy: Sir Nicholas Goodison's report was published in January 2004. The then Culture Minister, Estelle Morris, met Sir Nicholas Goodison on 11 October 2004 and I met Sir Nicholas on 18 January 2007 to discuss his report.

World Heritage Sites

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will take steps (a) to develop comprehensive visual studies and (b) to designate buffer zones in order to protect areas that hold World Heritage Site status from possible adverse impacts caused by the development of tall buildings. [143404]

Mr. Lammy: In March 2007 the Government published 'Heritage Protection for the 21st Century', which sets out proposals to strengthen and clarify protection for world heritage sites. These measures include a commitment to produce a planning circular which will clarify policy on world heritage sites including the use of buffer zones. This will be published for consultation later this year.

It is for each world heritage site steering group, in consultation with the relevant local authorities, to decide how best to protect the setting and outstanding universal value of the site in question. In some cases, a comprehensive visual study may be appropriate as a tool for achieving this. In some cases, also, buffer zones are one of the approaches which can be used for protecting the setting but they may not be appropriate for all world heritage sites.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Adoption

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the target is for each local authority classified by relevant Government office for numbers of adoptions from care in (a) 2006-07 and (b) 2007-08. [142137]

Mr. Dhanda: No adoption targets have been set by central Government for individual local authorities, though some authorities have chosen to develop adoption targets as part of the local area agreement/ local public service agreement process.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State at the Department for Communities and Local Government on 13 June 2007, Official Report, column 1073W.

Local public service agreements are based entirely around reward targets. They have now been largely merged into local area agreements, which contain non-reward and reward targets, and typically run for three years. No local authority has a reward target specifically on adoptions which is dependent on performance in either 2006-07 or 2007-08. There is no detailed central record of non-reward targets in local area agreements, although the agreements themselves are available on the Improvement and Development Agency (IDeA) website.

Apprenticeships

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 26 March 2007, Official Report, column 1272W, on apprentices, how many pupils in (a) apprenticeships and (b) advanced apprenticeships achieved separate technical certificates in each year since 1997. [131377]

Phil Hope [holding answer 16 April 2007]: Data on Apprenticeships and Advanced Apprenticeships are collected on the Learning and Skills Council's (LSC) Individualised Learner Record (ILR). As reported in the answer of 26 March 2007, Official Report, column 1272W, this can record all of the individual learning aims that an Apprentice is undertaking as part of the framework, including those identified as separate technical certificates. However, although in principle it is possible to identify those learners who have achieved both the full framework and a technical certificate, the required information is not contained on the framework record which is used to calculate success rates. The analysis would require the creation of a new methodology for bringing the information on technical certificates forward from the raw data to the framework record. The undertaking of this work would require a significant resource in terms of analyst time and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Additionally it is not possible to identify those learners who have already obtained the technical certificate through prior learning.

Children in Care

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many children were taken into care in each local authority in each of the last 10 years; [133507]

(2) when he will reply to question number 133507, on children in care, tabled by the hon. Member for North West Cambridgeshire on 18 April 2007. [143680]

Mr. Dhanda: The information requested is shown in the following table.

[2] Figures are taken from the SSDA903 return which in 1996-97, 2003-04, 2004-05 and 2005-06 covered all looked after children.
[3] Figures are taken from the SSDA903 one-third sample survey.
[4] Only the first occasion on which a child was taken into care in the year has been counted.
[5] "Children taken into care" are children who started to be looked after under the following legal statuses: interim or full care orders, and police protection or emergency protection or child assessment orders. They exclude children freed for adoption or for whom a placement order was granted, they exclude children under voluntary accommodation and they also exclude children under youth justice legal statuses.
[6] Historical figures may differ from older publications. This is mainly due to the implementation of amendments sent by some local authorities after the publication date of previous materials.
[7] To maintain the confidentiality of each individual child, data at national level are rounded to the nearest 100 if they exceed 1,000 or to the nearest 10 otherwise. At local authority level, data are rounded to the nearest five and at region level, to the nearest 10. Where the number was five or less (other than 0) this has been suppressed and replaced with '—'.

Children in Care: Death

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will put in place arrangements for collecting centrally details of all fatalities of young people in (a) foster and (b) residential care that take place in England. [143861]

Beverley Hughes: Both fostering service providers and the providers of children's homes are already required to notify the Secretary of State of particular events, including the death of a looked after child in their care.

However, in order to monitor and investigate child deaths more effectively, the Government are putting in place new child death review processes which will be the responsibility of Local Safeguarding Children Boards (LSCBs). Reviewing deaths will become mandatory in April 2008 though LSCBs have been able to do this since 2006. These arrangements include children in foster care and residential care.

There are two elements to the child death review process: firstly, a rapid response by a group of professionals who are responsible for inquiring into and evaluating each unexpected death of a child; secondly, the review of deaths of all children in the local authority area through Child Death Overview Panels (CDOPs). CDOPs will identify any trends or patterns in these deaths. This information will be used by LSCBs to prevent or avoid such deaths in the future. It will inform local strategic planning for children's services and policy at a local and national level. Detailed guidance on how these procedures work is set out in 'Working Together to Safeguard Children' (2006).

Children in Care: Standards

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the LILAC (Leading improvements for looked-after children) scheme for involving care-experienced young people in the inspections of local authority's care services. [142310]

Mr. Dhanda: I understand that an evaluation report of the LILAC scheme by A National Voice will be published shortly. We are fully committed to the policy of ensuring that young people in care are actively involved in the care planning process. The recent Green Paper, 'Care Matters: transforming the lives of children and young people in care', contains a range of proposals that aim to give young people a voice and more control over their lives while in care.

Council for Disabled Children

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he expects the Council for Disabled Children to publish its good practice guidance on transition; and if he will make a statement. [143409]

Mr. Dhanda: We intend that the Transition Support Programme will be piloted from 2008-09. Work is in progress on developing the pilots and more details will be available later this year. No decision has yet been taken on what parts of the country the pilots will take place.

The Council for Disabled Children has produced draft guidance on transition which will be published by the Department later this summer.

Children: Work Permits

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what plans he has to publicise the requirements for work permits for child employment; [143272]

(2) how many children who require work permits his Department estimates are in employment; [143273]

(3) whether the Head of Children's Services in a local authority is formally accountable for the implementation of child employment policy in that authority; and if he will bring forward proposals to require a named member to also have special responsibility. [143761]

Mr. Dhanda [holding answers 15 June 2007]: In 2005, the Government published "Statutory guidance on the roles and responsibilities of the Director of Children's Services and Lead Member for Children's Services". This guidance is clear that local authorities' functions relating to child employment under section 559 of the Education Act 1996 and sections 18(2) and 37 of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 fall within the Director of Children's Services areas of responsibility by virtue of section 18(2)(a) of the Children Act 2004. Directors of Children's Services are accountable to the elected members of their authorities for all aspects of their work.

Local authorities are responsible for granting child employment permits and for the enforcement of child employment legislation, including explaining and publicising its requirements. Information is not collected centrally about the numbers of children who require employment permits. The Government plan to help local authorities, employers, young people and other stakeholders to understand and operate the system by producing clear guidance.

Classroom Assistants: Visually Impaired

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps he is taking to ensure that there is a sufficient number of qualified teaching assistants able to help those children with a visual impairment. [133825]

Mr. Dhanda: Decisions on the number and deployment of teaching assistants are matters for local determination by individual schools and their local authorities.

All schools receive a School Development Grant which they are able to use to support improvements in any aspect of teaching and learning. This can be used to support staff training, including sending teaching assistants on specialised training courses. Local authorities may retain a proportion of this grant, in certain circumstances, to provide specific training and development in relation to special educational needs (SEN) and disabilities.

Support staff, including teaching assistants, play an important role in schools, often working closely with pupils with SEN and disabilities. In recognition of this, the Training and Development Agency for Schools, which now has responsibility for support staff training and development, has developed national occupational standards for teachers/classroom assistants to cover roles that support teaching and learning in schools. The revised standards have been strengthened to reflect the role of teaching assistants working with pupils with additional needs, including those with sensory impairment. Induction training material on SEN for teaching assistants working in both primary and secondary schools is also available, as is introductory training for other support staff, which contains a discrete module covering SEN and disabilities.

The standards for higher level teaching assistants (HLTAs), for which the TDA is also responsible, require HLTAs to know how to support learners in accessing the curriculum, in accordance with the SEN Code of Practice and disability legislation.

Departments: Delivery Unit

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills in which (a) policy areas and (b) projects his Department is (i) receiving support or advice from the Prime Minister's Delivery Unit and (ii) has received such support or advice over the last 12 months. [137065]

Mr. Dhanda: The Prime Minister's Delivery Unit (PMDU) works with my Department in the following policy areas: primary and secondary school standards; attendance and behaviour; targeted youth support; attainment at 19; those not in education, training or employment (NEETs); academies; trust schools; and extended schools. With regard to projects my Department has received support from the PMDU on over the last 12 months, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 116W. The PMDU is currently working with the Department on the impact of School Improvement Partners on raising standards.

Departments: Energy

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what strategy he has put in place for (a) the use of renewable energy and (b) meeting energy targets in his Department's buildings; and if he will make a statement. [125407]

Mr. Dhanda: DFES has recently introduced a Sustainable Operations Management System (SOMS), to help it meet the framework for Sustainable Development in Government's (SDiG) renewable energy and energy reduction targets on its office estate.

As part of DFES strategy within the SOMS and supporting action plans, DFES will conduct a feasibility study into on-site low and zero carbon heat and power generation systems. This will include a cost benefit analysis for sourcing more energy from renewables.

As part of DFES strategy within the SOMS and supporting action plans, DFES will set annual targets to meet SDiG energy efficiency targets, developing and communicating energy protocols incorporating short and long term energy management improvement actions (including Carbon Trust identified actions) and energy monitoring programmes to report on energy usage and trends.

Departments: Food

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps his Department has taken in response to the National Audit Office Report Smarter Food Procurement by the Public Sector. [142754]

Mr. Dhanda [holding answer 14 June 2007]: The Department worked closely with the National Audit Office (NAO) in establishing the facts published in its report 'Smarter Food Procurement in the Public Sector' and has consulted the NAO in taking forward action on the report's recommendations. It is also working closely with the Department for the Environment Food and Rural Affairs, the School Food Trust and the North East Centre of Excellence in taking forward the report's recommendations. The Public Accounts Committee (PAC) held a hearing on the NAO report on 11 October 2006 and published their report on 30 March 2007 (the 13th Report of the Public Accounts Committee). Details of the work being taken by this Department and other Government Departments in response to the PAC report is set out in the Treasury Minute published on 23 May 2007 (Cm 7077).

Departments: Legal Costs

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was spent by his Department on legal fees in each of the last five years. [139402]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department for Education and Skills spent £172,043 in 2002-03, £275,523 in 2003-04, £243,286 in 2004-05, £250,815 in 2005-06 and £192,594 in 2006-07 on external legal services (i.e. advice and some litigation services). The figures have been rounded to the nearest pound.

Departments: Manpower

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many staff funded by the public purse in his Department are classified as people without posts. [137718]

Mr. Dhanda: There are currently 61 members of staff who are without a permanent post in my Department. This number is broken down by site and grade as follows:

	Darlington	London	Runcorn	Sheffield	GIO	Total
EA	0	12	1	8	0	21
EO	0	10	4	3	0	17
HEO	0	1	0	2	1	4
SEO	0	3	0	2	0	5
G7	0	5	1	3	0	9
G6	0	2	0	3	0	5
Total	0	33	6	21	1	61

When staff find themselves without a permanent post, they are supported by their line manager and HR, and are deployed on projects or other meaningful work until they secure a permanent post. Our expectation is that all displaced staff will find a new post within a three month period.

Departments: Official Cars

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what visits he has made involving a mix of political and official engagements where Government Car Service vehicles were used in 2007; and whether the Government was reimbursed a proportion of the cost in each case. [142643]

Mr. Dhanda [holding answer 14 June 2007]: All travel is undertaken in accordance with Travel by Ministers and the Ministerial Code, copies of which are available in the House Library.

Departments: Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many staff in his Department received bonus payments in 2006-07; what proportion of the total workforce they represented; what the total amount of bonuses paid was; what the largest single payment was; and if he will make a statement. [143101]

Mr. Dhanda: Information for Executive Assistant to Grade 6 bonus payments received in 2006-07 is not yet available. Members of the Senior Civil Service will not receive their bonus payments until November 2007.

For my Department's most up to date information, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 8 November 2006, Official Report, column 1706W.

Departments: Postal Services

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which postal companies handle mail dispatched by his Department and its agencies. [128244]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department for Education and Skills use the following postal companies to handle mail dispatched from its head office buildings.

Royal Mail;

Parcel Force;

Copley Couriers;

Central Dispatch Couriers.

The Department could provide information in respect of its agencies only at a disproportionate cost.

Departments: Publicity

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which (a) advertising agencies and (b) other organisations supplied consultancy services for advertising campaigns for (i) his Department and (ii) its agencies in each of the last five years; and what the cost of these services was. [139434]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department for Education and Skills uses the Central Office of Information (COI) for "above the line" advertising campaigns; it does not keep separate information centrally on any subcontracted consultancy services that COI may employ relating to any advertising campaigns. The Department contracts with agencies for "below the line" publicity, including design agencies and PR agencies—but these are for services such as design and PR services, not consultancy.

The Department for Education and Skills does not have any agencies.

Departments: Sexual Harassment

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many complaints of sexual harassment have been investigated in his Department in the last 12 months; and how many complaints have been upheld. [135370]

Mr. Dhanda: No complaints of sexual harassment were investigated in my Department in the last 12 months.

The Department believes that each and every individual has the right to be treated fairly, with dignity and respect. As such, we do not tolerate unacceptable behaviour towards others. Formal complaints of sexual harassment would be investigated quickly and thoroughly and, where complaints were upheld, appropriate disciplinary action would be taken. All cases are treated seriously.

The overall aim of our harassment and bullying policy is to prevent such unacceptable behaviour occurring but, where it does occur, to ensure that appropriate and effective action is taken to deal with it and prevent it happening again. This applies to everyone in the Department. Every individual is personally responsible for their own behaviour, and every manager is responsible for enforcing the policy in accordance with the guidance and procedures set out in our Staff Handbook.

Departments: Sick Leave

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what average number of days per year was taken by staff in his Department as sick leave in each of the last five years for which records are available. [143107]

Mr. Dhanda: The information is set out in the following table.

2004	9.0
2001	8.4

The data are taken from the report 'Analysis of Sickness Absence in the Civil Service', which Cabinet Office publishes annually.

Departments: Working Hours

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many staff at each grade in his Department have opted out of the Working Time Regulations. [137679]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department is committed to reducing the number of employees who work in excess of the Working Time Directive maximum to an absolute minimum.

The current number and grade of employees who have signed a formal opt out from the Working Time Directive is set out in the table as follows:

Grade	Number
EO	12
HEO	12
SEO	6
Grade 7	7
SCSB1	2

The number of hours that each employee works per week is not kept centrally, therefore the number of hours in excess of the maximum allowed under the Working Time Directive could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Hurd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which executive agencies are the responsibility of his Department; what the function is of each agency; and what the budget was of each agency in the most recent year for which figures are available. [116746]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department for Education and Skills (DfES) is not responsible for any executive agencies.

Foster Care: North East Region

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children in the North East are (a) in recognised foster care and (b) subject to special guardianship or residence orders with friends or family other than their parents. [134887]

Mr. Dhanda: Information on the numbers of children that are (a) in recognised foster care and (b) subject to special guardianship or residence orders with friends or family other than their parents is not collected centrally by the Department for Education and Skills (DfES).

Information on looked after children who were taken into care is collected in the annual SSDA903 return which is completed by local authority social services departments in England. The SSDA903 return does not distinguish whether a foster care is recognised or not. The closest data available are the number of children in the North East of England that are in foster care at 31 March 2006. The information is available in table 4 at:

http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/VOL/v000721/TablesfinalRENAMED.xls

The data do not distinguish whether looked after children subject to special guardianship or residence orders are with friends or family other than their parents. The closest data available are the number of children who ceased to be looked after during the year ending 31 March 2006 in England by reason episode ceased and age on ceasing. Please note that the information only shows the number of children who ceased to be looked after because of the granting of a special guardianship or residence order who are living in all types of placement, and not just for those who are placed with friends or family other than their parents. The information is available in table AH at:

http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/VOL/v000721/All_National_Tables.xls

Pupils: Dyslexia

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children of (a) primary and (b) secondary school age in each local authority area were diagnosed with dyslexia in each of the last 10 years. [141219]

Mr. Dhanda: The available information has been placed in the House Library.

Information was collected from schools on pupils who are supported at School Action Plus and those pupils with statements of special educational needs (SEN) about their main or primary need and, if appropriate, their secondary need for the first time in 2004.

Information on the number of pupils with dyslexia alone is not collected centrally. Figures relating to pupils with Specific Learning Difficulties have been provided. Pupils with Specific Learning Difficulties have a particular difficulty in learning to read, write, spell or manipulate numbers and this includes pupils with dyslexia, dyscalculia and dyspraxia.

There are a number of sensitivities about categorising pupils by their type of SEN. It is important that anyone using the data should be aware of the concerns and also understand the limitations of the data's reliability and validity. There are a range of factors which may affect the data recorded, including:

Local interpretation of definitions

Classification of children with multiple needs

Statistics are based on school and local authority identification of need rather than a diagnosis by medical of psychological staff

Availability of special school provisions in Authorities

Respite Care

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what progress has been made on the issuing of best practice guidelines to local authorities on the provision of respite care to families with disabled children pursuant to the Government's commitment given on 23 February 2007; [141280]

(2) how the recently announced additional £280 million funding to increase respite care for families with disabled children will be spent; and if he will make a statement. [141281]

Mr. Dhanda [holding answers 11 June 2007]: The Council for Disabled Children has started to develop good practice guidance to help local authorities commission quality short breaks services for disabled children and their families. A first draft of the guidance will be submitted to the Department in the autumn and this will be trialled with a small number of authorities. The trial findings will be used to inform the final draft of the guidance for publication in spring 2008.

Implementation plans are being developed to deliver the step change in the provision of short breaks announced in the DfES/HMT report 'Aiming high for disabled children: better support for families' (May 2007). There is an expectation the £280 million made available for this purpose will be phased—with pathfinders in 2008-09 and 2009-10 and national roll-out in 2010-11. The priority is to support the development of sustainable short breaks services locally.

Our plans will need to take account of the NHS comprehensive spending review settlement later this year which will provide additional funding to provide short breaks for disabled children with complex health needs.

Special Educational Needs: Pupil Exclusions

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of current pupils with (a) statemented special educational needs (SEN) and (b) non-statemented SEN have received a fixed period exclusion from (i) maintained mainstream and (ii) other schools (A) once, (B) twice, (C) more than twice and (D) more than five times. [132386]

Vocational Guidance

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to require all publicly-funded providers of post 16 learning, other than universities, to put in place a programme of careers education. [143121]

Mr. Dhanda: We have no plans to place a statutory duty on providers of post 16 learning to provide a programme of careers education.

JUSTICE

Voting Age

25. Tom Brake: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what representations she has received since 2005 on lowering the voting age for elections in the UK. [143371]

Bridget Prentice: I have received a number of representations since 2005. These have included approximately 36 letters that were mainly from young people, nine letters from Members of Parliament and four Parliamentary Questions.

Children's Panel Solicitors

26. John Mann: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many children's panel solicitors there are in Nottinghamshire; and how many there were three years ago. [143372]

Vera Baird: The Law Society has informed me that there are 36 solicitors currently registered on the children's panel in Nottinghamshire. However they do not hold historical data on specific regions.

Departmental Responsibilities

27. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what matters concerning the establishment and operation of the Ministry of Justice remain under discussion between her Department and members of the senior judiciary. [143373]

28. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice if she will make a statement on her Department's working group with the senior judiciary on recent reorganisation of government departmental responsibilities. [143374]

Ms Harman: Discussions between the judiciary and the Lord Chancellor and officials in the Ministry of Justice are ongoing.

Postal Votes

29. Mr. Allen: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what provisions are being made to ensure that all those eligible who wish to do so are able to vote via postal voting. [143375]

Bridget Prentice: In 2001, postal voting on demand was introduced to encourage greater participation in the electoral process, by allowing electors to vote using a method that is convenient for them.

The Government continue to believe, given today's lifestyles and its popularity, that people should continue to have the choice of a postal vote available to them. However, the Government also recognises that the integrity of the electoral process must be maintained, and to that end, has introduced new security measures through the Electoral Administration Act 2006 and Regulations, including the introduction of personal identifiers for absent voters.

Court Staff: Regional Pay Rates

30. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice if she will make a statement on the introduction of regional pay rates for court staff. [143377]

Ms Harman: Regional pay is a reality in the economy as a whole-pay variations by location are not new. The system we are introducing offers greater coherence, greater transparency and enables us to target public money most effectively on those areas where there is greatest need. It will allow us to offer competitive salaries to attract and retain staff with the skills we need where we need them.

Prisons: Treatment Provision

31. Stephen Hammond: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what steps she is taking to increase provision for treatment in prisons. [143378]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Investment in prison health care has increased significantly from £118 million in 2002-03 to £200 million in 2006-07. This includes £20 million specifically available for mental health in-reach services each year from 2006-07. In 2007-08 the National Offender Management Service (NOMS) and the Department of Health are jointly investing £18.7 million in the introduction of the integrated drug treatment system (IDTS) in prisons.

Prison Swimming Pools

32. Mark Pritchard: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what the running costs are of maintaining swimming pools in prisons in England and Wales; and if she will make a statement. [143379]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my answer on 5 June 2007, Official Report, column 387W.

Legal Services Bill

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what assessment she has made of the likely impact of the Legal Services Bill, if enacted, on the right to practise of British lawyers (a) in Germany, (b) in other European jurisdictions and (c) outside Europe. [143165]

Bridget Prentice: Sir David Clementi considered the impact of his proposals, which form the basis of the Legal Services Bill, on the right of British lawyers to practise in other jurisdictions. Appendix 2 of his Report of December 2004, contained a legal opinion from Slaughter and May which concluded that:

"We believe that Model A and Model B+ are compatible with Community law, international norms and the European Convention on Human Rights".

Throughout the development of our proposals, we have consistently taken account of the international position, and remain confident that while the proposals in the Legal Services Bill are likely to increase the competitiveness of the legal services industry of England and Wales, they will also safeguard and strengthen its independence.

The only opposing evidence we have identified came from Bundesrechtsanwältskammer or BRAK—which is the self-regulatory body of the German legal profession and acts as the umbrella organisation which represents the 27 regional Bars and the Bar at the Federal Court of Justice. BRAK did make representations both to the Joint Committee on the draft legal Services Bill and to Lord Neill of Bladen who debated some of the issues raised by BRAK during Lords passage of the Bill.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what representations she has received on the impact of the Legal Services Bill on the right to practise of British lawyers (a) in Germany, (b) in other European jurisdictions and (c) outside Europe. [142623]

Bridget Prentice: I have received no representations from bodies which are responsible for the recognition or regulation of legal professions in other jurisdictions about the impact of the right of British lawyers to practise as a result of the Legal Services Bill. However, I am aware that the Bundesrechtsanwältskammer or BRAK—which is the self-regulatory body of the German legal profession and acts as the umbrella organisation which represents the 27 regional bars and the bar at the Federal Court of Justice—did make representations both to the Joint Committee on the Draft legal Services Bill and to Lord Neill of Bladen who debated some of the issues raised by BRAK during Lords passage of the Bill.

Of particular relevance in this context, appendix 2 of Sir David Clementi's report of December 2004 contained an opinion from Slaughter and May, which concluded that:

"We believe that both Model A and Model B+ are compatible with Community law, international norms and the European Convention on Human Rights."

Children: Abuse

John Battle: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what plans she has to bring forward proposals to make the (a) creation and (b) possession of (i) cartoon and (ii) computer generated graphic images of the sexual abuse of children a criminal offence. [143675]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government are consulting on the issues raised in respect of the possession of non-photographic visual depictions of child sexual abuse, including the option of creating a new offence of possession of such material. The consultation period ends on the 22 June 2007. The Government will publish a summary of responses and its conclusions.

Crime: Greater London

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice (1) how many crimes (a) were and (b) are alleged to have been committed in the Metropolitan Police District by offenders convicted of child abuse and wearing electronic tags in each London borough in each year since their introduction; [142624]

(2) how many crimes were (a) committed and (b) alleged to have been committed in the Metropolitan Police District by offenders wearing electronic tags in each London borough in each year since their introduction; [142625]

(3) how many offenders convicted of child abuse (a) re-offended and (b) are alleged to have re-offended in the Metropolitan Police District while wearing electronic tags in each London borough in each year since their introduction; [142627]

(4) how many offenders (a) re-offended and (b) are alleged to have re-offended in the Metropolitan Police District while wearing electronic tags in each London borough in each year since their introduction. [142628]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Data on re-offending committed by offenders wearing electronic tags are only collated centrally for those offenders released on to the Home Detention Curfew Scheme. However, the data are not broken down by the offender's original offence or by the local government area in which any subsequent offence was committed. To provide such information would involve a manual trawl of the data and would incur disproportionate cost.

Serious violent offenders and all sexual offenders are either statutorily excluded or are presumed unsuitable for release on HDC. In addition, prisoners convicted of other serious offences considered to be of particular concern to the public are also presumed unsuitable for release on HDC unless there are exceptional circumstances.

Crime: Schools

Mr. Watson: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of safer schools partnerships in reducing crime in schools. [143210]

Bridget Prentice: A University of York evaluation published in January 2006 showed that Safer School Partnerships (SSPs) are proving effective in improving behaviour and attendance, with truancy falling significantly and pupils feeling much safer. Unfortunately this evaluation was not able to measure any changes in offending because the appropriate data were not held. However, positive feedback on changes in behaviour and offending has also been received from many police officers, teachers and other local agencies that have been involved in SSPs.

Departments: Consultants

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how much the Department for Constitutional Affairs spent on consultancy and professional services in 2006-07. [143369]

Vera Baird: Expenditure by the Department for Constitutional Affairs to 30 November 2006 was £7.8 million on consultancy and £12.4 million on other professional services. Figures for the full year are currently being collated and I will write to the hon. Member as soon as they are available.

Industrial Health and Safety: Coroners

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what steps she has taken to ensure that health and safety regulations requiring employers to make a suitable and sufficient assessment of risks to health and safety to which employees are exposed while at work have been carried out by those responsible for coroners and coroners' officers. [144099]

Ms Harman: Coroners are appointed and funded by the relevant local authority. Their officers are employed by the relevant local authority or police authority. The issue of the health and safety in coroner's offices is a matter for the relevant local authorities and police authorities.

Legal Services Board: Public Appointments

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what representations the Government have received from consumers of legal services on the concurrence of the Lord Chief Justice in appointments of members to the proposed Legal Services Board. [142329]

Bridget Prentice: We have discussed the issue of the concurrence of the Lord Chief Justice in appointments of members of the Legal Services Board with the Secretary of State's Consumer Advisory Panel, established to advise on the Ministry's programme of reform of legal services regulation and delivery. The panel's view was that peers' amendments to require the concurrence of the Lord Chief Justice in appointments to and dismissals from the board should be overturned.

We have also had a number of separate meetings with a broad range of consumer organisations during the passage of the Legal Services Bill. The issue of concurrence has been discussed at several of those meetings and all such organisations were opposed to the amendments made in the House of Lords on Lord Chief Justice concurrence.

Life Imprisonment: North West Region

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what the profiled maximum number of prisoners with sentences of indeterminate imprisonment for public protection (IPP) and life sentences is in each prison in the North West Region; and what the number of IPP and life sentenced prisoners is in each of those prisons on the most recent date for which figures are available. [142457]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information on the numbers of prisoners sentenced to life or indeterminate sentences for public protection held in prison establishments in the North West prison region in England can be found in the following table:

Life/IPP population in prisons in NW region[1]

[1] Extract taken on 30 April 2007.

Note: These figures have been drawn from administrative IT systems, which, as with any large scale recording system, are subject to possible errors with data entry and processing.

The issue of what is acceptable as the maximum number of such prisoners held in prison establishments against the available resources for their treatment and training is currently the subject of court action in the form of a judicial review to be heard on 22 June and in these circumstances it would not be appropriate for me now to make a statement on this part of the question.

Mentally Disturbed Offenders

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice (1) what plans she has for improving the (a) treatment and (b) facilities for offenders suffering from (i) psychotic illnesses and (ii) other mental illnesses; and if she will make a statement; [143311]

(2) what plans she has to improve the screening of offenders for (a) mental illnesses and (b) drug addiction; and if she will make a statement. [143312]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Under the Mental Health Act 1983 the courts have powers to assess mentally disordered offenders before sentencing and to divert them to receive specialist treatment in hospital rather than punishment. The police also have the power under the Act to remove a person who appears to be suffering from mental disorder to a place of safety. The Government plan to publish guidance this year to the NHS and partner agencies which supports the development of local diversion services by building on current best practice.

The prison population has a disproportionately high prevalence of mental illness, and so it has been the policy of the Ministry of Justice, the Home Office and Department of Health to improve the provision of mental health services in our prisons.

Beginning in 2003, and completing in April 2006, the national health service took over the commissioning responsibility for all prison health services in public sector prisons. This was previously the responsibility of the Prison Service. One of the main reasons this transfer has made was to help ensure that prisoners had better access to mainstream health services.

All prisoners, both new prisoners and those transferred in from one prison to another, benefit from a new health screening process, introduced across the prison estate in 2004, that is designed to detect physical and mental health problems.

Prisoners who are identified as needing further help can be referred to a mental health in-reach team, who will arrange further assessment and follow up referral.

Investment in prison mental health in-reach services has been steadily increasing, with nearly £20 million invested in these services each year since 2004-05, and 360 whole time equivalent staff employed, more than the initial commitment in the NHS Plan to create 300 posts.

People who are mentally too ill to remain in prison should be transferred to hospital. We have introduced tighter monitoring to identify prisoners waiting an unacceptably long period for transfer to hospital, and a protocol was issued to prisons and primary care trusts in October 2005 setting out what must be done when a prisoner has been waiting for a hospital place for more than three months following acceptance by the national health service.

These measures have helped bring about positive results. In 2006, 33 per cent. more prisoners, with mental illness too severe for prison, were transferred to hospital than in 2002—up to 961 from 723. There has been a significant decrease in the number of people waiting over 12 weeks for a transfer—in the quarter ending March 2007, 40 prisoners were waiting, down from 51 in the same quarter in 2005.

The healthcare screening process also inquires about drug and alcohol use, and looks for evidence of dependence in those who report current or recent use. Reception screening should be focused to ensure that appropriate prescribed clinical management is undertaken by a doctor soon after reception. Clinical drug testing is used to establish the level of opiate dependence before clinical management begins. The new Integrated Drug Treatment System is introducing National Treatment Agency models of care to 49 prisons.

Northern Ireland Court Service: Interpreters

Lady Hermon: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many interpreters were employed by the Northern Ireland Courts Service in each of the last five years, broken down by language; and what the cost was in each year. [143294]

Mr. Hanson: The Northern Ireland Court Service (the Court Service) engages language interpreters required for criminal, civil and family proceedings on a fee paying basis, as such language interpreters are not employees of the Court Service.

The number of language interpreters engaged to work in criminal courts, broken down by language, and with costs for each of the last five years and the number of language interpreters engaged to work in the civil and family courts, broken down by language, and with costs for each of the last five years can be found in the table as follows.

Offensive Weapons

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice (1) how many and what percentage of people convicted of encouraging violent behaviour involving the use of a knife under the Knives Act 1997 received (a) a fine and (b) a custodial sentence of (i) less than six months, (ii) six to 12 months, (iii) 12 to 18 months and (iv) 18 to 24 months in (A) Suffolk, (B) Bedfordshire, (C) Cambridgeshire, (D) Essex, (E) Hertfordshire and (F) Norfolk in each year since the Act was introduced; [140687]

(2) how many people were found guilty of offences related to the illegal sale and marketing of knives in (a) Suffolk, (b) Bedfordshire, (c) Cambridgeshire, (d) Essex, (e) Hertfordshire and (f) Norfolk in each year since 1997. [140689]

Mr. Coaker: I have been asked to reply.

No persons convicted or sentenced under the Knives Act 1997 in the police force areas mentioned were reported to the Home Office court proceedings database during the years 1997 to 2005.

Orders and Regulations

Danny Alexander: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many statutory instruments were (a) made, (b) repealed and (c) amended in each of the last five years. [143802]

Vera Baird: The following table provides details of the number of UK statutory instruments made in each year from 2002 to 2006 and for the first five months of 2007:

	Number of UK General SIs made by UK Government Departments	Number of UK Local SIs made by UK Government Departments	Number of UK SIs made by the National Assembly for Wales	Total number of UK Sis
2002	1,592	1,365	314	3,271
2003	1,512	1,521	321	3,354
2004	1,495	1,660	297	3,452
2005	1,580	1,746	273	3,599
2006	1,430	1,766	313	3,509
2007 (to end May)	683	747	130	1,560

Updated statistics in relation to statutory instruments are also available on the OPSI website at: http://www.opsi.gov.uk/si-statistics.htm. No records are maintained centrally of the number of statutory instruments that have been repealed and amended and this information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Prison Accommodation

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what proportion of inmates detained in the prison estate are held in areas designated as dormitory accommodation in (a) the juvenile estate, (b) male prison establishments and (c) female prison establishments, broken down by category of establishment; and if she will make a statement. [142869]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The number of prisoners held in dormitory accommodation, as defined in Prison Service Instruction 09/2007 Smoke Free Legislation: Prison Service Application, is as follows:

Establishment	Male prisoners (closed conditions)[1]	Male prisoners (open conditions)[2]	Women prisoners	Total
Askham Grange	0	0	20	20
Brockhill	8	0	0	8
Dorchester	4	0	0	4

Norwich	3	0	0	3
Styal	0	0	6	6
Wormwood Scrubs	15	0	0	15
Total	180	130	261	571

[1] Male prisoners held in closed dormitory conditions are lower security prisoners, invariably category C.
[2] Male prisoners held in open dormitory conditions are category D prisoners.
[3] Dover is a Border and Immigration Agency removal centre managed by the Prison Service.

There is further accommodation that has been converted into cubicles from former dormitories, which may not have separate ventilation. The numbers of prisoners held in this accommodation is not recorded centrally.

No prisoners aged under 18 are held in dormitory accommodation.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what proportion of the space within the prison estate is designated as private residential space; and if she will make a statement. [142876]

Mr. Sutcliffe: An assessment of the proportion of the total prison estate used as private residential space could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. All cells containing up to four persons will be regarded as private residential space for the purposes of designation as places where smoking is permissible when occupied only by smokers.

Prison Officers' Association: Pay

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice whether the National Chairman of the Prison Officers' Association is entitled to receive the inner London local pay uplift; whether the post attracts this allowance; and if she will make a statement. [143415]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The remuneration of a Prison Service employee is determined by various factors, which takes into account their grade, location of their work and other relevant circumstances. It is not appropriate to disclose the remuneration details of individual employees.

Prison Service: Ethnic Groups

Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what percentage of prison officers in each prison are from an ethnic minority. [142711]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information on the percentage of officer grade staff recorded as Black and Minority Ethnic expressed as the percentage of officers who have declared their ethnicity is shown in the following tables.

Prison Service: Pay

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice whether the required hours allowance is consolidated into pay on the promotion to senior operational manager of an individual previously in a non-operational post within HM Prison Service and in receipt of that allowance on the discretion of the area manager; and if she will make a statement. [143414]

Mr. Sutcliffe: HM Prison Service policy is that managers in paybands E, F and G that are in receipt of required hours addition allowance and are promoted to senior manager have the allowance added to basic salary and the promotion increase calculated on the resultant salary.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice whether all heads of personnel at prison establishments are entitled to receive the regulations allowance; on what basis those so entitled have the entitlement; and if she will make a statement. [143412]

Mr. Sutcliffe: HM Prison Service does not pay a regulations allowance.

Prison Service: Sick Leave

Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what the average amount of sick leave taken by prison officers in each prison was in each of the last five years. [142710]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information on the average number of working days taken as sick leave by officer grade staff in each prison establishment over the past five years is shown in the following table.

Prisoners

Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what percentage of (a) male and (b) female prisoners in each region are not imprisoned in their home region, broken down by age. [142712]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested is provided in the following table.

Prisoners held in prisons outside of their region of origin by age band

Percentage

	Male
Prisoners from:	15-17	18-20	21+	Female

West Midlands	18	34	37	86
Yorkshire and the Humber	16	25	26	28
Total	45	44	40	60

Lorely Burt: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what estimate she has made of the percentage of prisoners either of whose parents were sent to prison during their childhood. [143065]

Mr. Sutcliffe: This information is not collected centrally. However, data from the 1991 National Prison Survey showed that 11.2 per cent. (341 of 3,050 prisoners interviewed) of convicted non-civil prisoners had experienced a parent in prison at some point (not necessarily during childhood).

Prisoners: Transport

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many prisoners were held in prisoner transport vehicles at Crown and magistrates courts (a) before their hearings and (b) after their hearings because of lack of room in court cells in the last month; and for how long in each case. [143010]

Mr. Hanson: There have been no reports of prisoners held in vehicles either before or after their hearings because of a lack of space in court cells.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many prisoners were returned to a prison or young offender institution after their court hearing different from that from which they were delivered to court in the last month; and how many who were not released from custody were not returned to prison but kept overnight or for longer in (a) police stations and (b) court cells. [143014]

Mr. Hanson: In May 2006 management information provided by our contractors show that there were 1,913 prisoners returned to a different prison or young offender institution after their court hearing to that from which they were delivered to court. The number of prisoners, escorted to court from prison, who following their court hearing were kept overnight or longer in police stations was 3,399; the figure for those kept overnight in court cells was 71.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many (a) male and (b) female prisoners aged (i) 21 or more and (ii) 18 to 21 were returned to prison after court hearings having spent more than (A) two, (B) three, (C) four, (D) five and (E) six or more hours in prisoner transport vehicles in the last month. [143015]

Mr. Hanson: The information requested is as set out on the following table:

Details of journey times from courts to prisons of over two hours—May 2007

	2 to 3 hours[1]	3 to 4 hours	4 to 5 hours	5 to 6 hours	Over 6 hours
Male aged over 21	437	187	38	16	11
Female aged over 21	137	40	8	1	3
Male aged 18 to 21	131	42	22	8	2
Female aged 18 to 21	25	7	0	0	0

[1] This excludes information on prisoners escorted from courts in the London and South East whose journeys were between two and three hours as this information is not available.

Prisons: Disciplinary Proceedings

Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many disciplinary proceedings took place in each prison in each of the last five years; and how many complaints were upheld. [142709]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information in the form requested is not readily available. Figures on the numbers and types of offences punished under the prison disciplinary system, and types of establishment, for years before 2002 were published in 'Prison Statistics, England and Wales, 2002' (Command Paper 5996), chapter 8 available at:

Figures on types of offence and punishments up to 2005 are published in 'Offender Management Caseload Statistics 2005', Home Office Statistical Bulletin 18/06 at:

www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs06/hosb1806.pdf.

The data only include proven adjudication offences nationally, and have not been analysed below this level. The tables on adjudications from chapter 9 of this document (including two tables not included in the bulletin itself) are also available at:

www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs07/hosb1806section9.xls.

Prisons: Smoking

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice for what reason dormitory accommodation within the prison estate is not considered exempt from the terms of smoking under Prison Service Instruction 09/2007; and if she will make a statement. [142878]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Non-smoking prisoners cannot be required to share accommodation with smokers. Designating dormitories for smokers or non-smokers would not provide sufficient flexibility in the use of accommodation.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many enforcement officers will be designated as responsible for ensuring compliance with Prison Service Instruction 09/2007 in (a) each regional area and (b) each prison establishment; what frequency is anticipated for deployment of enforcement officer visits at each prison establishment; from which budget source enforcement officers will be resourced and at what estimated cost; and if she will make a statement. [142859]

Mr. Sutcliffe: No enforcement officers are being deployed specifically to ensure compliance with Prison Service Instruction 9/2007. In public sector prisons, Prison Service Area Managers monitor compliance with all Orders and Instructions in the course of routine line management contacts and visits. In contracted prisons, the Home Office Controller on site monitors compliance.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how much has been allocated to (a) the preparation of risk assessments and (b) reviewing existing assessments on how the health and safety of

(i) employees, (ii) visitors and (iii) non-smoking inmates are best protected under the terms of Prison Service Instruction 09/2007; from what budget the funding will be drawn; and if she will make a statement. [142860]

Mr. Sutcliffe: No additional budget was required to carry out these risk assessments.

The Prison Service has in place policies and procedures for training staff to carry out risk assessments and for carrying out risk assessments to staff and others who may be affected by its undertakings. These have been used in (a) the preparation of risk assessments and (b) reviewing existing assessments on how the health and safety of (i) employees, (ii) visitors and (iii) non smoking inmates are best protected under the terms of Prison Service Instruction 09/2007.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice (1) what estimate she has made of the cost of compliance with Prison Service Instruction 09/2007; from what budget these resources will be drawn; and if she will make a statement; [142861]

(2) what estimate she has made of the likely costs arising from the exemption to smoke-free legislation under Prison Service Instruction 09/2007; from what budget this will come; and if she will make a statement; [142863]

(3) what budget is available for the (a) commission and (b) display of signs required under Prison Service Instruction 09/2007; from where the budget for these signs is sourced; and if she will make a statement. [142880]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The only visible cost of these arrangements will be a one-off cost for installing relevant signs which are manufactured in prison workshops. No estimate has been made of these costs, which are being met from existing local resources.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what mechanisms will be available to ensure that prison cell doors are closed when inmates are smoking, to ensure compliance with Prison Service Instruction 09/2007; and if she will make a statement. [142862]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Prison staff will ensure that cell doors are locked or fully closed when prisoners are smoking.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what estimate she has made of the cost of installing ventilation systems at each prison establishment in consequence of Prison Service Instruction 09/2007; from what budget such resources will be drawn; and if she will make a statement. [142864]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There are no plans to install additional ventilation systems.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how much has been allocated in (a) HM Prison Service headquarters budget and (b) individual prison establishment budgets for the implementation of stop smoking services under Prison Service Order 3200; and if she will make a statement. [142865]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The NHS has been responsible for commissioning prison healthcare services, including smoking cessation, for publicly run prisons in England since April 2006.

For each of the financial years 2003-2006, the Department of Health provided an additional £500,000 funding to bring smoking cessation services in line with National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence guidelines. Resources are now contained within the baseline funding of NHS primary care trusts.

Health care arrangements in private prisons are provided under their establishing contract. Information on expenditure on specific health services in these prisons is not collected centrally.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what advice she has provided to prison establishments on the provision of accommodation to inmates choosing to smoke during designated periods of association; and if she will make a statement. [142873]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The guidance is set out in Prison Service Instruction 9/2007, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what protection is available to prison officers required to intervene to protect (a) a prisoner or (b) a member of staff in danger of immediate harm where smoke has not cleared from the prison cell in question; and if she will make a statement. [142874]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Safe systems of work will be in place to allow smoke to clear from cells before routine entry by staff. Staff will be expected to enter cells in an emergency threatening life and limb, even if tobacco smoke is present.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what assessment she has made of the impact on (a) security and (b) discipline of the terms of Prison Service Instruction 09/2007 that, where an inmate is smoking in a cell, a prison officer is not required to enter the cell until the cigarette smoke has dissipated from the location; what representations she has received in consequence of that condition; and if she will make a statement. [142875]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The arrangements set out in PSI 9/2007, which are required to comply with the Smoke Free Legislation (Health Act 2006), were operationally impact assessed by a group of senior operational managers, chaired by the deputy director general of the Prison Service, prior to implementation. Ministers have not received any representations on this matter.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what facilities will be available under Prison Service Instruction 09/2007 for (a) pregnant inmates and (b) those detained in mother and baby units across the prison estate to smoke; and if she will make a statement. [142877]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Pregnant women and prisoners in mother and baby units will be permitted to smoke in cells occupied only by smokers, in the same way as all other prisoners.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what mechanism will allow an inmate designated at reception to a prison establishment as a smoker under Prison Service Instruction 09/2007 to change to become designated as a non-smoker; what assessment she has made of the number of cells at each prison establishment to be designated as (a) smoking and (b) non-smoking; what mechanisms will ensure that sufficient accommodation for each category of demand is provided; and if she will make a statement. [142879]

Mr. Sutcliffe: A prisoner who recorded their status on reception as a smoker and wishes to change their status to non-smoker, or vice versa, may make an application to wing staff.

Under PSI 9/2007, all cells containing up to four persons will be designated as places where smoking is permissible when occupied only by smokers. Smokers must not be required to share cells with non-smokers who are actively smoking, but these arrangements enable governors to use accommodation flexibly to meet the changing needs of the prison population.

Reoffenders

Justine Greening: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what the re-offending rates were (a) in each of the last five years and (b) over the five-year period for those issued with a (i) community rehabilitation order, (ii) supervision order, (iii) community punishment order, (iv) attendance centre order, (v) community punishment and rehabilitation order, (vi) curfew order, (vii) reparation order, (viii) action plan order, (ix) drug treatment and testing order, (x) referral order and (xi) community order; and if she will make a statement. [144100]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The following tables show the available figures for reoffending rates for adult and juvenile offenders who started their community penalty in England and Wales in the first quarter of each year. Reoffending rates for adults are calculated over a two-year period and for juveniles over a one-year period. Community orders were introduced in 2005 and therefore data are not yet available for this type of disposal.

The relationship between disposal and reoffending is complex; the disposal given depends on the characteristics of the offender, which will also affect their chances of reoffending. Further information is available in the most recent Statistical Bulletins on adult and juvenile re-offending which can be found at the following addresses:

Justine Greening: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what the re-offending rates were (a) in each of the last five years and (b) over the five-year period for those issued with intensive supervision and surveillance programme orders; and if she will make a statement. [144101]

Bridget Prentice: Information on reoffending rates from ISSP is not available in this form. ISSP tackles the most persistent offenders who are often damaged and deprived, and who suffer from mental health problems. This is, therefore an exceptionally difficult group of offenders who present a major challenge to ISSP teams. Nevertheless, despite the report showing 91 per cent. of young people given an ISSP were reconvicted at least once in the two years starting the programmes, it also showed that young offenders on ISSP committed 39 per cent. fewer crimes in the two years after starting the programme and that the seriousness of those crimes reduced by 13 per cent.

Victim Support Schemes: Expenditure

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what the grant allocation was for the support of victims and witnesses in each year since 2002; what proportion of that grant allocation went to Victim Support in each year; and whether she plans to make a simila: proportional allocation in the future. [144098]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government funds a wide range of projects and organisations to support victims of crime, such as Sexual Assault Referral Centres and Independent Sexual Violence Advisors for victims of sexual violence, the POPPY scheme for victims of trafficking, and Support After Murder and Manslaughter for homicide victims.

The Government's main mechanism for delivering emotional and practical support services to victims is through the £30 million grant to Victim Support. In addition, since 2004, the Victims Fund has distributed £5.25 million in grants to support and develop specialist organisations. A further round of the Victims' Fund was opened on Friday 15 June, dedicated to organisations that support homicide and hate crime victims.

It is expected that the surcharge on fines will raise £16 million in a full year to be spent on a range of services for victims of crime and witnesses.

The main national grant allocations since 2002 and the proportion, as a percentage, which goes to Victim Support are as follows. Future funding decisions will be made in the light of available resources.

	Funding to victim support (£ million)	Proportion as a percentage to victim support	Compensation paid by CICA (£)	Funding to the victims' fund (£ million)

Wetherby Young Offender Institution: Smoking

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice if she will publish the report of the review into the smoking ban at HM Young Offenders Institution Wetherby conducted in 2005. [142871]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The review into the smoking ban at Wetherby was completed in August 2005. A copy of the report is available in the House Library.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Access to Work Programme

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total budget is for the Access to Work scheme in 2007-08; what discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on developing the scheme; and if he will make a statement. [140673]

Mrs. McGuire: The budget for the Access to Work programme for 2007-08 is £64 million. The Secretary of State has regular discussions with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on funding for the Department's priorities, including Access to Work. Over the past 10 years the programme's budget has increased four-fold and the programme now helps nearly three times as many people as in 1997.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total expenditure was on the Access to Work scheme in 2005-06; and how much of that expenditure was spent on promoting the scheme to (a) employers and (b) disabled jobseekers. [140674]

Mrs. McGuire: The total expenditure for Access to Work in 2005-06 was £59.8 million.

The promotion of Access to Work comes under the wider Jobcentre Plus marketing budget. The Department does not record specific marketing expenditure on Access to Work.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many disabled people were supported by the Access to Work scheme in 2005-06. [140675]

Mrs. McGuire: In 2005-06, 28,514 people were supported by Access to Work.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people with hearing impediments were supported by the Access to Work scheme in 2005-06. [140676]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available.

Access: Disabled People

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the levels of (a) coverage throughout England of, (b) usage of and (c) compliance with requirements and recommendations arising from (i) disabled access statements and (ii) disabled access audits. [142421]

Mrs. McGuire: Design and access statements are required for most types of planning application. While no formal assessment has been made of their use, unless a statement accompanies a relevant application and meets the requirements as to what it includes, a local planning authority in England cannot determine that application.

Access audits are not a statutory requirement, but may be conducted as a matter of good practice. No assessment has been made of the usage of, and compliance with the recommendations of, access audits. My Department has, however, conducted a series of surveys to monitor how employers and service providers are responding to their duties to make reasonable adjustments under the Disability Discrimination Act. The findings of the most recent research[1] show that levels of physical adjustments for disabled people are increasing. Among employers, there has been a slight increase in those having made adjustments since 2003 (from 42 per cent. to 45 per cent. for adapting the work environment). There has been a larger increase in changes made to physical accessibility by those providing goods, facilities and services (from 47 per cent. to 61 per cent.). Not all disabled people will require physical adjustments to be made to the workplace, or to the premises of a service provider, nor will it always be reasonable for an employer or service provider to make a physical adjustment.

Carers' Allowances: Preston

Mr. Watterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the likely effect of the removal of 180 posts at the Carers' Allowance Unit in Preston on services provided by the unit. [138034]

Mrs. McGuire: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Disability and Carers Service, Mr. Terry Moran. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Terry Moran, dated 19 June 2007:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what assessment he has made of the likely effect of the removal of 180 posts at the Carers' Allowance Unit in Preston on services provided by the unit.

The Minister for Disabled People, Anne McGuire MP, promised you a substantive reply from the Chief Executive of the Disability and Carers Service.

As you will be aware, as part of the Efficiency Challenge all government departments have imposed headcount targets for the period ending March 2008. The headcount target for the Disability and Carers Service for 2007/08 is 5063. The headcount allocation for the Carers Allowance Unit (CAU) for 2007/08 is 723. This represents a reduction of 180 on current headcount.

Along with all government departments, we are modernising our service delivery and we have specific targets to improve efficiency and reduce the number of people we employ. We are well on the way to meeting both these objectives and, in the CAU, we are doing so by comprehensively reviewing our organisational structure, workflow processes and our handling of customer enquiries. Additionally, we believe we can make further improvements to our productivity and the quality of the work that we do.

In support of this stretching agenda, we have employed lean' techniques. These have been used in recent years in HMRC, where they have supported a successful efficiency programme. Early trials in the CAU this year have been successful and we have decided that we will now roll out the lean' approach right across the unit. The approach includes additional checking to ensure right first time quality, thus preventing rework, and improving service to customers. Although there may be short-term disruption as staff are trained and adapt to new ways of working, we expect to standardise and improve the service, rather than allow any deterioration.

We are an agency that continues to focus on delivering improved services to disabled people and carers, and we will ensure that any such short-term disruption to service as a result of headcount reductions is kept to a minimum through constant monitoring of the situation and acting upon what our customers tell us.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what commitments he has made to the Public and Commercial Services Union in relation to the Disability and Carers Service for Carers' Allowance in Preston, Lancashire. [144006]

Mrs. McGuire: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Disability and Carers Service, Mr. Terry Moran. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Terry Moran, dated 18 June 2007:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what commitments he has made to the Public and Commercial Services Union in relation to the Disability and Carers Service for Carers' Allowance in Preston, Lancashire.

The Minister for Disabled People, Anne McGuire MP, promised you a substantive reply from the Chief Executive of the Disability and Carers Service.

Managers in the Disability and Carers Service (DCS) are committed to full consultation with the Public and Commercial Services (PCS) Union on all issues that affect the members of that Union.

As you will be aware, as part of the Efficiency Challenge all government departments have imposed headcount targets for the period ending March 2008. The headcount target for the Disability and Carers Service for 2007/08 is 5063. The headcount allocation for the Carers Allowance Unit (CAU) for 2007/08 is 723, which represents a reduction of 180 on current headcount.

To help achieve that target we looked to employ lean' techniques in the CAU and, following a successful trial, the 'lean' approach is now being implemented across the Unit. This approach includes additional checking to ensure right first time quality and improving services for customers.

Managers in the CAU have held a number of meetings with representatives of PCS to discuss 'lean' techniques since the work started in December 2006, and other meetings have been held to discuss the headcount reductions in the CAU. Since 1st April 2007, CAU managers have met PCS representatives on 6 occasions and a further 2 meetings are planned for later in June. In addition, following a request from PCS representatives, the CAU Manager attended a meeting of PCS members organised by the Union to discuss 'lean' and answer questions.

The CAU managers consult PCS on various other issues, and in addition to the meetings described above consultation has taken place through written communications on over 30 occasions since 1st April 2007.

I hope this is helpful.

Council Tax Benefits: Pensioners

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to revise the savings threshold for eligibility to council tax benefit for pensioners. [142881]

Mr. Plaskitt: There are no plans to change the savings threshold for eligibility to council tax benefit.

We keep the capital limits under review as we do for the other income-related benefits. Any changes would have to be considered alongside other priorities.

Departments: Carbon Emissions

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what methodology is used by his Department to account for its carbon emissions. [140793]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department reports on its carbon emissions, in line with the targets for Sustainable Operations on the Government Estate, via the Sustainable Development in Government Report and its own annual Sustainable Development Report.

The Department measures its carbon emissions based on the amount of energy required to run the buildings that it occupies, and to undertake the main elements of its business travel. DEFRA standard conversion factors are used uniformly throughout.

For energy use (that is electricity and fossil fuels), actual consumption data is submitted on an annual basis to the Buildings Research Establishment (BRE), which is then weather corrected and the appropriate conversion factor applied by BRE.

For DWP fleet vehicles, there are two methods used; fuel type, fuel consumption and engine size information is used where it is available; otherwise the appropriate DEFRA conversion factor is applied to mileage data. For business travel that staff undertake in their own vehicles, information on mileage travelled is collected and the relevant DEFRA standard conversion factor, assuming an equal split between petrol and diesel engined vehicles is applied. Mileage for hire cars will be included within this year's calculation.

The Department participates in the Government's carbon offsetting scheme. Data are collected on the number of miles undertaken by staff on official air travel and the DEFRA conversion factor is applied.

Data are currently not available for rail travel and taxi journeys but the Department is now investigating the feasibility of collecting and including this into our carbon emission calculations.

Departments: Homeworking

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in his Department have been allowed to work from home for part of the week in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on home working. [143873]

Mrs. McGuire: DWP employees may work from home in two categories:

(a) Permanently, on a contractual basis; and

(b) On an ad hoc basis.

The number of employees who have contracted as permanent home workers are:

As at March each year	Contracted home workers
2004	4
2005	5
2006	6
2007	6

DWP does not collect statistical data about ad hoc home working arrangements.

Managers may exercise discretion and authorise ad-hoc home working for a variety of reasons.

The Department recognises the advantage of having a range of different working arrangements, which both meet business needs and enable its employees to balance work and their personal life. Home working is only one of a range of flexible working arrangements that are available to DWP employees.

Departments: Postal Services

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on what date the decision was (a) taken and (b) enacted to move his Department's post opening and distribution services in Kent from Haden Building Management to the Royal Mail. [141432]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is as follows:

(a) The decision to move the Department's post opening and distribution services in Kent from Haden Building Management to the Royal Mail was a consequence of DWP's review of office services. The outcomes from this review were approved by the Department's Executive Team in January 2005.

(b) Following competition, Haden Building Management won the contract to deliver the entire Department's Office Services requirements and commenced delivery of these services under the contract from 1 March 2007. Royal Mail is a subcontractor to Haden, opening post at Royal Mail Centres, in secure mail opening units. The new contract commenced on 1 March 2007 and offices within the Kent area moved to the Royal Mail between 16 April 2007 and 7 May 2007.

Departments: Property

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was received by his Department from the letting of its properties in each of the last five years. [139323]

Mrs. McGuire: The information requested is in the following table.

The receipts shown include payments made by other Government Departments and in respect of third party service providers working from our premises.

2002-03	56.708
2003-04	58.532
2004-05	59.518
2005-06	55.337
2006-07	64.432

Receipts for the Health and Safety Executive and the Rent Service are excluded, as Commercial and Estates Directorate does not hold this information. The Appeals Service is included in the receipts after April 2006, when, as the Tribunal Service, it became part of the Department for Constitutional Affairs.

Departments: Translation Services

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much has been spent by his Department on translating (a) documents and (b) website content into other languages in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [142409]

Mrs. McGuire: This information is not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Travel Agents

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much his Department and its agencies paid in travel agencies' fees in each year since 1997. [139918]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department utilises OGC Buying Solutions frameworks for the provision of these services and pays travel agencies' fees for air, rail and ferry bookings. However the information requested is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate costs. The Department obtains a discount from every business travel booking made through the contracted agents which would not be available should we book directly with the operators. All bookings will attract a commission for the agent from the operator which will be returned to us, the customer, by way of a discount and the discounts negotiated are in excess of the fees charged. These discounts appear on invoices having had any fees deducted, therefore, the fee element is not identifiable from invoices. To identify the fees individually would require an extensive clerical exercise involving officials and the suppliers.

Disability Living Allowance

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many households there are in England and Wales where both spouses or partners claim the higher rate disability living allowance; [140679]

(2) how many households there are in England and Wales where (a) a child and (b) two or more children claim disability allowance in addition to (i) a parent and (ii) both parents or legal guardians; [140680]

(3) how many households there are in England and Wales where every member of the household claims both disability allowance and carer's allowance. [140681]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 26W, on disability living allowance, (1) in what format information relating to (a) the method of claim and (b) the time taken to process claims for disability living allowance is held; and what categories of information relating to disability living allowance claims are held centrally; [141754]

(2) in what format information is held relating to (a) the method of claim and (b) the time taken to process claims for attendance allowance; and what categories of information relating to attendance allowance claims are held centrally. [141942]

Mrs. McGuire: Information is held about disability living allowance (DLA) and attendance allowance (AA) claims that are received on-line. The computer systems also calculate the average actual clearance times for all claims processed within the month.

Information is held centrally on the number of DLA and AA cases received that are processed and outstanding each month. Information is also held centrally on the type and/or rate of the award and the evidence used in determining the claim.

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many claimants receiving disability allowance have been diagnosed with (a) stress and (b) back pain. [144081]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available in the format requested. The available information is in the following table.

Disability living allowance recipients whose main disabling condition is stress or back pain—November 2006

Main disabling condition	Number in receipt
Back pain
D02—Spondylosis—including disc disease, cervical/lumbar etc.	106,560
D03—Back pain—not specified	108,510
D05—Disease of the muscles, bones or joints	211,870
Stress
D45—Psychoneurosis—including anxiety, depression, phobia and hysteria	181,190
D46—Personality Disorder	8,560

Notes:
1. Figures have been rounded to the nearest 10.
2. Totals may not sum due to rounding.
3. Some additional disclosure control has also been applied.
4. Figures are compiled using the broad categories for the main disabling conditions that would include stress or back pain. These categories will therefore include people who do not suffer from stress or back pain.
5. Totals show the number of people in receipt of an allowance, and exclude people with entitlement where the payment has been suspended, for example if they are in hospital.

Financial Assistance Scheme

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the compatibility of the Financial Assistance Scheme with the judgement of the European Court of Justice in cases where a scheme member's expected pension is greater than £52,000 per year. [136026]

James Purnell: The judgment of the European Court of Justice did not deal directly with the question of a cap for high earning pensioners. However, we do consider that the cap of £26,000 is consistent with the social purpose behind the 1980 Directive.

Incapacity Benefit: Cognitive Behavioural Therapy

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps his Department took to implement cognitive behavioural therapy provision for incapacity benefit claimants in the UK in each year since 2005. [142215]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 12 June 2007]: Cognitive behavioural therapy (CBT) is a practical therapy that helps people to manage their health condition. Jobcentre Plus delivers a CBT-based approach through its condition management programmes. However, it is not designed to replace treatment available to people through the NHS. Where the programme is available, it forms an important element of the range of help available through our Pathways to Work Choices package. Condition management programmes are currently provided in collaboration with the NHS and Jobcentre Plus.

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many incapacity benefit claimants have undertaken cognitive behavioural therapy in each of the last three years. [142216]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 12 June 2007]: The information is not available.

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many practitioners of cognitive behavioural therapy have been recruited by his Department to work with incapacity benefit claimants in each of the last three years. [142217]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 12 June 2007]: This Department does not recruit practitioners of cognitive behavioural therapy. Condition management programmes (CMPs) are provided in collaboration with the NHS and Jobcentre Plus as part of the range of support in Pathways to Work areas. The NHS/primary care trusts are responsible for delivering on CMP contracts in those areas. The numbers of cognitive behavioural therapy-trained staff in each area varies according to local needs and how the programmes are delivered.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people claimed jobseeker's allowance in (a) 2004 and (b) 2006 in each parliamentary constituency. [143824]

Mr. Plaskitt: The available information has been placed in the Library.

National Insurance Contributions: Rebates

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) a Minister in which Department made the decision not to implement in full the recommendations of the Government Actuary on the level of contracted-out national insurance rebates from April 2008; and if he will make a statement; [141173]

(2) on how many occasions since May 1997 his Department has not accepted recommendations from the Government Actuarial Department; and if he will make a statement. [141174]

James Purnell: Decisions on the level of contracted-out national insurance rebates are a matter for the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions. The current contracted-out rebate rates were set out in the Secretary of State's report laid before each House of Parliament on 1 March 2006 and reflected in the rebate Order made on 30 March 2006. This report gave due consideration to the report of the Government Actuary and to other considerations such as the fiscal conditions which prevailed at the time. As with all decisions which have a major impact on public expenditure, including previous rebate reviews, the recommended rates were agreed with HM Treasury.

The Secretary of State has departed from the rebate rates recommended by the Government Actuary on two occasions in the period covered by the question, in addition to the one where the Government Actuary's recommendation for rebate rates from 2007 was not fully implemented. The two occasions were the application of a 9.0 per cent. cap on age-related percentages for contracted-out DC schemes for the period 1999-2000 to 2001-02 tax year, and the application of a 10.5 per cent. cap from 2002-03 to 2006-07.

Pension Credit

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what easements of pension credit procedures there were within the Pensions Service in each year from April 2001 to April 2007; and if he will make a statement. [138125]

James Purnell: Pension credit was introduced in October 2003. A number of revisions to standard operating processes were introduced between October 2003 and March 2004 to ensure applications were dealt with effectively during the initial take on period. These revisions covered the following areas:

means of verifying the uprating of second pensions; treatment of unanswered questions on the claim form;

acceptance of photocopies of certain documents;

acceptance of claim forms signed in the wrong place;

evidence required for the backdating of a claim;

a reduction in the amount of visiting to support programme protection, allowing Local Service to concentrate on pension credit take-up and alleviating pensioner poverty; reductions in checking. Our experience of the reduced levels of checking during this period subsequently led to the removal of seven checks and a reduction in the checking level of another six.

These revisions ended with effect from April 2004 and Pension Centres returned to standard operating procedures.

Pension Credit: Blackpool

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Blackpool North and Fleetwood constituency are in receipt of pensions credit. [143977]

James Purnell: As at February 2007, 6,670 households in Blackpool North and Fleetwood constituency were receiving pension credit.

James Purnell: As at February 2007 4,890 households in West Lancashire constituency were receiving pension credit.

James Purnell: The information is in the following table.

Pensions

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will place in the Library the figures which form the basis of the charts in the two pensions White Papers published in 2006 which are on his Department's website. [141547]

James Purnell: The figures which form the basis of the charts in the two pensions White Papers have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will update and expand chart 3.11 of the Purple Book using information from additional scheme returns since it was published. [143548]

James Purnell: This is not a matter for the Secretary of State.

The Purple Book, published in December 2006, was a joint study by the Pensions Regulator and the Pension Protection Fund (PPF). The statistics were generated through analysis of information collected by the Pensions Regulator from pension scheme returns. Some of this information was further processed by the PPF in collaboration with the Government Actuaries' Department so that valuation information was as at a common date.

This will be an annual publication.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest estimates are of the number of individuals in contracted out (a) defined benefit and (b) defined contribution pension schemes for each year from 1996-97 to 2007-08; and if he will make a statement. [144079]

James Purnell: The information is in the following table.

Pensions: EC Countries

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the most recent Eurostat projections are of the financial costs of pension provision for member states of the EU. [143991]

James Purnell: The information requested is not available.

Pensions: Females

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many women submitted forms to apply for home responsibilities protection in the last 12 months for which figures are available; how many of these women were already drawing a state pension; what proportion of such applicants in each case were successful; and if he will make a statement. [139933]

James Purnell [holding answer 4 June 2007]: The information requested is not available.

Pensions: Financial Assistance Scheme

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which companies and associated pension funds are eligible for the Financial Assistance Scheme (FAS); on which date each company and pension fund were placed in administration; whether a pension holiday had been previously declared in each case; and which funds' members have received payments from the FAS. [141057]

James Purnell: The Information has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many occupational pension schemes which are in wind up are in the formal Financial Assistance Scheme assessment stage; and what the longest time is for which such a scheme has been under assessment. [141880]

James Purnell: The Financial Assistance Scheme (FAS) do not use the term "Assessment Phase".

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which piece of data is most often cited by the financial assistance scheme as the reason for delay in commencing financial assistance. [141881]

James Purnell: Non receipt of acceptable data from pension scheme trustees and administrators is the main reason for the delay in assessing pension scheme members' entitlement to the FAS. This could be because the data are incomplete, incorrect or are ambiguous, (for example containing additional information which needs to be clarified).

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many members of the Financial Assistance Scheme approved for assistance schemes (a) are not claiming the assistance which they are entitled to and (b) do not receive assistance because they fall under the de minimis level. [141884]

James Purnell: The information is as follows:

(a) Nine people who are entitled to FAS assistance have advised the FAS Operational Unit (FASOU) that they do not wish to receive payment. There are also 20 people who have been advised by FASOU that they are entitled, but whose reply to the FASOU to confirm the arrangements for payments has been outstanding for two months or more.

(b) 1,355 people are not receiving FAS assistance because they fell under the de minimis level. This figure includes members assessed for both initial and annual payments.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many occupational pension schemes in wind up cannot begin the financial assistance scheme assessment process because they are affiliated members of a body of pension schemes some of which are not in wind up. [141885]

James Purnell: We are not aware of any such schemes.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the unfunded liability under the financial assistance scheme is of (a) Gloystarme and Co., (b) Hydra Tools and (c) United Engineering Forgings. [143268]

James Purnell: All three pension schemes have qualified for the Financial Assistance Scheme (FAS) and are still winding up. The unfunded liability under FAS will not be known until winding up is completed.

Pensions: Insolvency

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest estimate is of the number of occupational pension schemes winding up with a solvent employer which did not reach compromise agreements between 1997 and 2005 which will not be eligible for help from the financial assistance scheme as proposed to be amended by the Pensions Bill; and what his latest estimate is of the number of members involved. [136017]

James Purnell: The number of pension schemes with solvent sponsoring employers which have commenced winding up during the period from 1 January 1997 to 5 April 2005 (the period of eligibility for the financial assistance scheme) is not known. As a result we have made no estimate of the number of members involved.

The review of scheme assets I announced on 28 March will be looking into the circumstances of those pension schemes (in addition to those with compromise agreements) where although the sponsoring employer did not undergo an insolvency event, it would not be reasonable to expect the employer to have a continuing responsibility for supporting an under funded scheme. The review team has also invited representation from schemes which feel they might be covered under the recently announced extension of FAS and will be reporting to the Secretary of State on these issues later this year with an interim report provided in summer and a final report before the end of the year.

Pensions: Regulation

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects to publish regulations permitting protected rights to be held in self-invested personal pensions. [141665]

James Purnell: Draft regulations permitting protected rights to be held in self invested personal pensions will be issued for consultation later this year.

Personal Accounts Savings Scheme

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the impact of the changes to the upper earnings limit for national insurance contributions from 2009 on the proposed personal accounts savings scheme. [140359]

James Purnell: There is no impact. The personal accounts earnings band thresholds will be unrelated to the annual announcements made in the budget on tax and national insurance. As we announced in our response to the consultation on 'Personal Accounts: a new way to save', these will be set between around £5,000 and £33,500 (in 2006-07 terms), uprated thereafter in line with average earnings.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether he intends to increase the upper earnings limit for contributions to the proposed personal accounts saving scheme in line with the proposed increase in the upper earnings limit for national insurance contributions from 2009 which was announced in the 2007 Budget. [140360]

James Purnell: The personal accounts earnings band thresholds will be set at around £5,000 and £33,500 (in 2006-07 terms), uprated thereafter annually in line with average earnings. This will establish the thresholds in their own right. The level of the thresholds will be unrelated to the annual announcements made in the budget on tax and national insurance.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest estimate is of the additional number of employees who would be eligible for the proposed personal accounts savings scheme if the upper earnings limit for contributions were increased to £43,000. [140361]

James Purnell: There would be no impact on the number of employees who would be eligible for the proposed personal accounts savings scheme if the upper earnings limit for contributions were increased to £43,000. This is because in companies that opt for personal accounts all employees earning above the lower limit are automatically enrolled into the scheme. Changing the upper limit only changes the earnings on which contributions would be paid not eligibility for automatic enrolment.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on what date he plans to publish the Government's final proposals on the level of the annual cap on personal contributions to the new personal pension accounts; and if he will make a statement. [141837]

James Purnell: The White Paper, 'Personal accounts: a new way to save' consulted on an annual contribution limit of £5,000. The summary of responses, published on 14 June 2007, contains detail on both the level of the limit and how it is to be designed. After further analysis, the Government believe that a contribution limit of £3,600 better balances the need to focus personal accounts on the target market with the need to allow individuals to save flexibly for their retirement. The £3,600 limit will be based on 2005 earnings levels, and will be uprated with earnings from 2005 to implementation in 2012 and beyond.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the Personal Accounts: A New Way to Save, page 25, whether the Government expects that the default fund will invest in a wide range of (a) classes of asset and (b) equities and bonds. [141535]

James Purnell: The Personal Accounts Delivery Authority will be tasked with applying its expertise to develop an investment strategy for personal accounts. In doing so, it will consider a wide range of assets classes, including a range of different equities and bonds. Once in operation, scheme trustees will be ultimately responsible for investment decisions, as they would in any other defined contribution occupational scheme.

Remploy: Land

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the present market value is of the land and property of each Remploy site. [139961]

Mrs. McGuire: The total market value of Remploy's land and property for this year has not yet been audited. The figure at 31 March 2006 after audit was £51.5 million.

We are not in a position to give the market value of each site, as this information is commercially confidential.

Smith Institute: Finance

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 16 April 2007, Official Report, column 249W, on the Smith Institute: finance, what the (a) title and (b) location was of the staff training course in August 2003; how many staff attended; and from what teams those staff came. [139920]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available.

State Retirement Pensions

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the yearly value has been of the basic state pension for (a) couples and (b) single pensioners in each year since April 1997. [143539]

James Purnell: The information requested is in the following table:

1. These rates are the real terms (prices) value of the Category A and Category A + Category B(L) and BSP and were calculated using the Retail Prices Index. The amounts are rounded to the nearest 10p. These are not the cash values.
2. There is no such thing as a "couples rate", though the sum of the Category A and Category B(L) pension is often referred to as such. Similarly there is no such thing as a "singles rate" though the maximum rate of the Category A pension is commonly referred to as the singles rate.
3. The couples rate is calculated as 160 per cent. of the full Category A.
4. The Category B (lower) pension is about 60 per cent. of the full-rate basic Category A Pension. It is payable by virtue of a spouse's qualifying years or earnings.

Unemployment: Carlisle

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people were unemployed and claiming benefit in Carlisle on (a) 1 April 1997 and (b) 1 April 2007; and if he will make a statement. [143216]

Mr. Jim Murphy: In April 1997 there were 3,060 jobseeker's allowance claimants in the Carlisle local authority area, and in April 2007 there were 1,240.

Winter Fuel Payments: Overseas Residence

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners living outside the UK received winter fuel payments in each year since such payments were introduced, broken down by country of recipients' residence. [142588]

James Purnell: Since 2002, following discussions with the European Commission about the effect of Community law, winter fuel payments have been made to eligible former UK residents living elsewhere in the European economic area or Switzerland provided they qualified for a winter fuel payment before leaving the UK. Although in some cases payments may be made for years before 2002, a separate breakdown of payments for the earlier years is not available. Information on payments made from 2002-03 is in the following table.

3. Figures rounded to the nearest five.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was spent on making winter fuel payments to pensioners living outside the UK in the 2006-07 financial year, broken down by country of recipients' residence. [142589]

James Purnell: Total winter fuel payments paid to pensioners living outside the United Kingdom in 2006-07 is in the following table.

DEFENCE

Abbey Wood Railway Station

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contribution his Department made to the construction of the railway station at Abbey Wood, Bristol. [143332]

Mr. Ingram: The total MOD contribution to the construction costs of Filton Abbey Wood Railway Station (including platform and footbridge) was £400,000 inclusive of VAT.

Afghanistan: Peace Keeping Operations

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether all the Mastiff vehicles procured for use in Afghanistan will be delivered by spring 2007. [142106]

Mr. Ingram: Mastiff protected patrol vehicles have been delivered to Afghanistan and Iraq and are being used in operations.

I am withholding information on delivery schedules of numbers of vehicles on operations as it would, or would be likely to, prejudice the capability, effectiveness and security of armed forces.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many members of HM armed forces (a) returning from action in and (b) injured whilst serving in (i) Afghanistan and (ii) Iraq have been checked for post-traumatic stress disorder; and how many were in (A) the Army, (B) the Royal Navy and (C) the Royal Air Force; [142296]

(2) how many members of HM armed forces injured while serving in (a) Afghanistan and (b) Iraq have been checked for post-traumatic stress disorder; and how many were in the (i) Army, (ii) Royal Navy and (iii) Royal Air Force. [142297]

Derek Twigg: During the operational period from January 2003 to December 2006, 2,333 mobilised British military personnel (regular and reservists) who deployed to Iraq under Operation TELIC were assessed by, and received treatment from, the Defence Medical Services for mental health conditions thought to be related to their deployment. This represents around 2 per cent. of personnel deployed to Op TELIC over the same period.

Of this number, 363 servicemen fulfilled the diagnostic criteria for post traumatic stress disorder. This represents around 0.3 per cent. of personnel deployed to Op TELIC over the same period.

Information on the Service of each individual is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Since 2003 we have collated figures on the incidence of mental health diagnoses for Service personnel returning from Iraq. However, at a time when a growing number of personnel have been deployed to other operational theatres in addition to Iraq, it has become increasingly clear that it is difficult to attribute a subsequent mental health condition (which in many cases may not present itself until months or even years later) to Service on a specific deployment. We are currently, therefore, reviewing our methods of collating figures on Service personnel who are diagnosed with a mental health condition.

We aim to provide first-class medical care on deployed operations in the most challenging of circumstances and surroundings. Commanders and their medical staff can call upon mental health professionals who can provide assessment and care. Operational Theatres are regularly visited by consultant psychiatrists who audit the service provided by the in-theatre mental health professionals.

There are 15 military Departments of Community Mental Health (DCMH) across the UK (plus satellite centres overseas), which provide out-patient mental healthcare.

The DCMH mental health teams comprise psychiatrists, mental health nurses, clinical psychologists and mental health social workers. The aim is to see referred individuals at their unit medical centre and, with the patient's permission, to engage with general practitioners and their chain of command to help manage mental health problems identified in personnel.

A wide range of psychiatric and psychological treatments are available (including psychological therapies, environmental adjustment and medication) where appropriate. The Defence Mental Health Services have particular expertise in psychological treatments for mental health problems in general, and psychological injury in particular.

The "King's Centre for Military Health Research: Ten Year Report," published by Kings College, University of London on a decade's worth of research concerning the health of UK veterans, stated that:

Mental health screening after deployment is practised in other countries, but is not supported by evidence of benefit and is costly.

Afghanistan: Opium

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what volume of (a) opium and (b) other narcotics were (i) seized and (ii) destroyed in Afghanistan by UK forces in each of the last three years. [142992]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 15 June 2007]: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 14 May 2007, Official Report, columns 493-95W, to the hon. Member for Ceredigion (Mark Williams).

Aircraft Carriers: Procurement

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to announce a decision on proceeding with the construction of the two new aircraft carriers for the UK. [143443]

Des Browne [holding answer 18 June 2007]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State with responsibility for the armed forces on 22 May 2007, Official Report column 1181W to the hon. Member for Brecon and Radnorshire (Mr Williams).

Ammunition: Testing

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate his Department has made of the rate of failure to detonate or self-destruct of M85 submunitions used in the L20A1 artillery shell on impact (a) on hard surfaces and (b) soft terrain. [142526]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence does not separately test the rate of failure of M85 submunitions on hard and soft surfaces. I also refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 20 April 2007, Official Report, column 800W, to my right hon. Friend the Member for Oxford, East (Mr. Smith) for the detail on L20A1 testing.

Armed Forces: Dental Services

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 6 June 2007, Official Report, column 488W, on the Joint Ministry of Defence and Department of Health Partnership Board, if he will place in the Library the minutes of the last three board meetings. [142857]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 14 June 2007]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 174W.

Armed Forces: Electoral Register

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the timetable is for his Department to complete and publish its revaluation survey into electoral registration among members of the armed forces. [142187]

Derek Twigg: I am considering the report of the survey. I will write to the hon. Member indicating our intention to publish it in due course.

Armed Forces: Food

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of (a) all food, (b) beef and (c) lamb supplied to forces based in (i) the UK, (ii) Germany, (iii) Iraq and (iv) Afghanistan is sourced from United Kingdom producers. [142134]

Mr. Ingram: Under the MOD's food supply contract, which commenced on 1 October 2006, approximately 68 per cent. of food items (excluding fresh produce, which is affected by seasonality) supplied to UK forces based in the UK, Germany, Iraq and Afghanistan are sourced from suppliers within the UK. Approximately 55 per cent. of beef and 13 per cent. of lamb and mutton supplied to UK forces in these locations is of British origin.

Armed Forces: Health Services

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will investigate the speed and level of recovery of injured service personnel when they are treated (a) alongside civilian patients and (b) within dedicated military hospital wards. [142295]

Derek Twigg: The treatment offered to Service personnel is based on their clinical needs. This applies to operational and non-operational casualties. All patients who require admission to hospital are treated in the most appropriate clinical environment according to their clinical need.

The MOD recognises that, under certain circumstances, the recovery of injured Service personnel can be assisted if they are treated alongside Service colleagues. That is why we have established a Military Managed Ward (MMW) at Selly Oak Hospital, the main receiving hospital for our operational casualties, where military patients can be grouped together when it is clinically appropriate to do so. Equally, however, in some cases their clinical condition will dictate that they be placed in a different location.

Injured service personnel requiring rehabilitation after hospital treatment can receive this in the Defence Medical Services' (DMS) own facilities, whether at the Defence Medical Rehabilitation Centre (DMRC) or one of our Regional Rehabilitation Units (RRUs).

Armed Forces: Housing

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost was of ensuring that unoccupied family accommodation at Pirbright barracks was secured against vandalism and squatters in the latest year for which figures are available; and what it is likely to be in the 2007-08 financial year. [141850]

Derek Twigg: For 2006-07 the cost of ensuring that unoccupied service families accommodation at Pirbright barracks was secured against vandalism and squatters, was approximately £30,000. This included the cost of boarding-up, changing the locks and fencing off of empty properties.

It is too early to estimate a figure for the current financial year.

Armoured Fighting Vehicles

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what plans there are to replace each of the variants of Land Rover used by the armed forces; and whether replacements will be part of the Future Rapid Effects System programme; [141038]

(2) what consideration has been given to track width of vehicles fulfilling the armed forces Land Rover commitments in the future. [141040]

Mr. Ingram: It is intended that in future most of the roles currently fulfilled by Land Rover based vehicles will be undertaken by vehicles procured under the Operational Utility Vehicle System (OUVS) programme, which is separate from the FRES programme, or by vehicles such as the Panther command and liaison vehicle. The OUVS requirement will cover a range of vehicle attributes, including wheel base.

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of each variant of Land Rover are available for pre-deployment training; and how many Land Rovers turned over during pre-deployment training during the last four years. [141039]

Mr. Ingram: The Army and Royal Navy have approximately 7,000 WOLF, 5,000 Defender, 5 WMIK and 100 SNATCH Land Rovers available for training, including pre-deployment training. These figures exclude items which are in deep maintenance and repair, in storage, on loan and with the design authority, used for reference, training aids and specific trials; items deployed on, deploying to or returning from operations and items taken out of use temporarily in order to be converted to Bowman or to be fitted with equipment procured under the Urgent Operational Requirement process. Information relating to the RAF is not held centrally and can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

The number of Land Rovers recorded as having 'overturned without first colliding' worldwide is shown in the following table. The figures exclude Iraq and Afghanistan but our reporting system does not record whether the accident took place during pre-deployment training and further information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what the cost per mile, excluding crew costs, was of operating the Panther Command and Liaison vehicle in the latest period for which figures are available; [141042]

(2) to which units the first batch of Panther Command and Liaison vehicles was delivered; and when they were delivered. [141044]

Mr. Ingram: The Panther Command and Liaison vehicle has not yet entered service. I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 7 March 2007, Official Report, column 1982W.

Bombs

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which cluster munitions held by the UK are designated as (a) dumb and (b) smart; and what criteria are used to determine such designation. [142527]

Mr. Ingram: The UK's understanding of so-called 'dumb' cluster munitions, are those containing numerous sub-munitions, each with an explosive content but without either a target discrimination or self-destruct, self-neutralization or self-deactivation function. As stated in the written ministerial statement on 20 March 2007, Official Report, column 36WS, by my hon. Friend the Defence Secretary, the two systems that met this definition, the RBL-755 and MLRS M26, have now been withdrawn from service. We retain our other cluster munition, the 'non-dumb' ERBS L20A1 M85.

Defence Storage and Distribution Agency

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what the estimated cost is of centralising the Defence Storage and Distribution Agency at Donnington and Bicester; and what the projected annual effect on costs is following the closure of eight regional distribution centres; [142011]

(2) what the estimated cost is of closing the Defence Storage and Distribution Agency site at Colchester; and what the projected annual effect on costs is following its closure. [142012]

Mr. Ingram: The estimated cost to close eight Regional Distribution Centres (RDCs) and centralise transport operations mainly at Bicester and Donnington is £512,000, plus an amount for any compulsory redundancy payments that might prove necessary where affected staff cannot be redeployed.

The projected annual cost saving of closing the eight RDC's is £2.44 million.

The costs of closure of the Colchester RDC will arise mainly from redundancy payments should they be required. There may also be some minimal costs associated with relocating vehicles and mechanical handling equipment. The annual cost saving after closing the Colchester RDC will be £260,000 per year.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many staff will be made redundant when the Defence Storage and Distribution Agency site at Colchester closes; and what action he is taking to provide alternative employment at the Colchester Garrison for those staff who do not seek voluntary redundancy. [142013]

Mr. Ingram: There are now 15 permanent Defence Storage and Distribution Agency (DSDA) staff based at Colchester potentially affected by the proposals to close the Regional Distribution Centre, however this is still subject to TU Consultation. The Future Defence Supply Chain initiative announcement in July 2005 stated that 12 posts would be lost.

DSDA is actively engaging with the Colchester Garrison and other local government establishments, to identify possible posts within their organisations for DSDA staff not wishing to seek voluntary redundancy. A preference exercise will identify individuals wishing to secure early release and voluntary redundancy, with compulsory redundancy being the last option.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the Defence Storage and Distribution Agency site at Colchester to close. [142015]

Mr. Ingram: The closure of the Regional Distribution Centre at Colchester is projected to be complete by April 2008. However, the decision is still subject to TU Consultation and final ministerial endorsement.

Defence: Procurement

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what military equipment was purchased off-the-shelf from non-UK suppliers in each year since 1997; and what the cost was of each purchase. [142528]

Mr. Ingram: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: BAE Systems

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what the total cost to the public purse was of each of the contracts between BAe Systems and his Department in each of the last five years; [141313]

(2) which defence procurement contracts are in place between his Department and BAe Systems; [141314]

(3) what the value is of each defence procurement contracts in place between his Department and BAe Systems. [141315]

Mr. Ingram: Central records indicate the Ministry of Defence currently has some 785 separate direct contracts in place with BAE Systems. These are listed in an extensive table which I have placed in the Library of the House. The number excludes small-value local purchase orders, contracts placed on behalf of other nations and other Government departments and those where BAE Systems is a subcontractor or a member of an industry consortium. The approximate value of each contract is indicated in the table placed in the Library by reference to a value band.

The combined value of the 785 contracts, as at 8 June 2007, was some £24,893 million. I am withholding the precise value of individual contracts and the total cost to the public purse as its release would, or would be likely to, prejudice commercial interests. The scale of total payments made to major BAE Systems divisions over the past five financial years on all direct contracts, as published by the Defence Analytical Services Agency, is shown in the table.

Departments: ICT

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to assess the views of those responsible for using the defence information infrastructure system on the effectiveness and operability of the design; and if he will make a statement. [141675]

Mr. Ingram: The contract for DII(F) is based upon a user requirement document (URD) which corralled users' capability requirements for DII(F) from across all MOD's top level budgets. A systems requirement's document was produced from the URD, converting the users capability and performance requirements into a systems view of the overall requirement. MOD will then measure the performance of the delivered DII(F) solution against the performance conditions laid down in the URD to ensure it meets our requirements.

User concerns are raised through the chain of command and top level budgets; those which cannot be resolved at lower levels are considered at the Joint User Working Group led at senior level by the DII programme director. There is a single point of contact which functions as the DII(F) help desk to support individual users' day-to-day operation of DII(F).

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the defence information infrastructure design system is (a) operational and (b) systems assured; and if he will make a statement. [141676]

Mr. Ingram: The operational status of DII(F) is declared on a site-by-site basis and is defined in terms of first user live. The first user of the DII(F) system went live on 31 January 2006.

The DII(F) programme is being delivered in three contractual increments covering delivery of terminals and networking capability. It also involves a number of releases, which improve functionality via software tools and associated hardware.

Each release is assured before it becomes operational. Assurance confirms that the solution satisfies functional requirements—the user's needs; key performance indicators—it runs the way it should and is reliable; service management requirements—it is supported adequately by help desks and similar services; it meets national security requirements.

Departments: Official Residences

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the official ministerial residences allocated to Ministers in his Department; and what the total annual cost is of running each. [141970]

Derek Twigg: No Ministers in the Ministry of Defence are allocated a ministerial residence.

Departments: Property

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was received by his Department from the letting of its properties in each of the last five years. [139338]

Derek Twigg: Rental income from external customers is disclosed separately in the Departmental Resource Accounts which have been laid before the House of Commons. A copy of the accounts for each year is available in the Library of the House.

In addition the Department receives income from service personnel for the occupation of both single living and families accommodation. Although readily available only for the last three years, income in respect of Service Families Accommodation was as follows:

Financial Year	Income (£)
2003-04	170,894,000
2004-05	178,321,000
2005-06	180,779,000

With effect from 2005-06 these amounts are disclosed separately in the accounts.

Income from Single Living Accommodation was not, until 2006-07, held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The 2006-07 Departmental Resource Accounts are currently being audited by the National Audit Office and, following presentation to Parliament, a copy will be placed in the Library of the House.

Firearms: Training

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact on marksmanship of the cancellation of all Division Skill at Arms Meetings until further notice. [143823]

Mr. Ingram: While the cancellation of Divisional Skill at Arms Meetings will have some impact, shooting competitions will continue to run at unit and Brigade level. This complies with new army shooting policy; shooting remains a critical skill and the cancellation of Divisional Level meetings will not affect TA operational capability.

Iraq: Peace Keeping Operations

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) suicides and (b) attempted suicides there have been of members of HM armed forces (i) while serving in and (ii) after returning from service in (A) Iraq and (B) Afghanistan. [142293]

Derek Twigg: The Ministry of Defence has centrally compiled and verified records of coroner-confirmed suicides or open verdict deaths among UK regular Service personnel up to 31 December 2006.

Table: Number of suicides of UK armed forces

Theatre of operation	Dates	On deployment	Post-deployment
Iraq	18 January 2003 to 31 December 2006	[1]5	16
Afghanistan	7 October 2001 to 31 December 2006	1	—
Afghanistan	15 October 2005 to 31 December 2006	—	[2]1

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make an assessment of the adequacy of medical supplies and resources to armed forces in Iraq and Afghanistan. [142967]

Derek Twigg: There are presently no known shortfalls in the provision of medical equipment or materiel to deployed UK forces in Iraq or Afghanistan. Medical equipment and supplies are deployed in the quantities requested by operational commanders to support their deployed requirement. Medical capability is continually reviewed by Defence Consultant Advisers to ensure medical equipment and capability delivers optimal clinical care, embracing best practice, wherever possible.

Over the last three years, 97 fixed wing, and 19 rotary wing aircraft have been sold in the UK, and one fixed wing aircraft has been sold overseas. It is not possible to provide a complete breakdown of the sales

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the publication RAF News. [142619]

Derek Twigg: There are no planned changes to the publication RAF News. However, the team is planned to relocate from RAF Innsworth to RAF High Wycombe later this year as part of the formation of Air Command. As with all publications, RAF News is routinely reviewed for relevance, style and content.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions (a) he and (b) other Ministers have had with the employees of the publication RAF News; and what the outcomes were. [142620]

Derek Twigg: There have been no discussions between Ministers and the employees of the publication RAF News.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people were employed by the publication RAF News in each of the last five years; and what the job title was of each. [142621]

Derek Twigg: Over the last five years the publication RAF News has had an establishment of six posts. The job titles are Editor, Deputy Editor/Chief Sub Editor, Sub Editor, Reporter, Business Manager, and Office Manager.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department has allocated to spend on the publication RAF News in (a) 2007-08 and (b) each of the last five years. [142622]

Derek Twigg: The publication RAF News was allocated £153,000 for financial year 2007-08. In previous years, the allocation was £149,000 in FY 2006-07, and £144,000 in FY 2005-06. These allocations are net of target income from sales of the publication.

I will write to the hon. Member with any available information prior to 2005-06 and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Reserve Forces

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact of the decision to cancel one exercise executive stretch in financial year 2007-08 and one in financial year 2008-09 on employer support for the Territorial Army. [143820]

Mr. Ingram: The decision to postpone a number of executive stretch exercises is not judged likely to have a significant effect on employer support for the Army, although we recognise that this has caused some inconvenience and adverse reaction in those regions affected. Those affected by these postponements may be able to participate in other executive stretch exercises being run in adjoining regions, should there be spare capacity.

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact of (a) the decision to delay until 1 April 2009 the establishment of the Territorial Army units (i) 2nd Sqn, 6 AAC (V), (ii) 24 Sqn, 71 Regt RE (V), (iii) 129 Sqn, 73 Regt RE (V) and (iv) 280 Sqn, 162 MC Regt RLC

(V) and (b) the delay in the development of further capability before 1 April 2009 of (A) 155 Tpt Regt RLC (V) and (B) 381 Med Sp Sqn, 166 Sup Regt RLC (V). [143821]

Mr. Ingram: The decision to delay the establishment and development of further capability of those TA units listed is not expected to have an effect on the TA's ability to reach Full Operational Capability under Future Army Structures in line with my statement on TA rebalancing on 23 March 2006, Official Report, columns 427-28.

Reserve Forces: Recruitment

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact of the decision to stop recruiting in Territorial Army units that are not making a significant contribution to operations in financial year 2007-08 on (a) unit manning levels and (b) unit effectiveness. [143819]

Mr. Ingram: It is fully recognised that ceasing recruitment in selected TA units for one year will have an effect on the TA's ability to develop operational capability in the short term; both in term of manning levels and unit effectiveness. Work is continuing to ensure that mitigating strategies can be put in place if required.

Reserve Forces: Training

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact on training of Territorial Army personnel of (a) the cancellation of the Nijmegan marches and (b) the removal of any Territorial Army participation in the Cambrian Patrol in financial year 2008-09. [143822]

Mr. Ingram: We recognise that participation in both these events is important to members of the TA. Competitions that make a more direct contribution to the development of operational capability will continue to run.

Submarines: Manpower

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the Royal Navy are currently serving on board a submarine, broken down by rank. [143609]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 18 June 2007]: At 1 October 2006, the total number of naval personnel assigned to submarines was 2,450. The following table shows the split by rank.

Paid rank	Total
Officer
OF-5-Captain	[1] —
OF-4-Commander	20
OF-3-Lieutenant Commander	80
OF-2-Lieutenant	180
OF-1-Sub Lieutenant	[1] —
Officer total	280
Rank
OR-9-Warrant Officer Class 1	10
OR-8-Warrant Officer Class 2	110
OR-7-Chief Petty Officer	430
OR-6-Petty Officer	370
OR-4-Leading Hand	410
OR-2-Able Seaman	850
Rank total	2,170
Total	2,450

[1] Denotes rounded to zero.

Due to the introduction of a new Personnel Administration System (JPA) in October 2006, Navy location data from October 2006 are not yet available for publication. However initial investigations into JPA data suggest the total figure for April 2007 to be similar to the total figure provided.

Submarines: Pay

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the rate of submarine pay is for each rank. [143608]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 18 June 2007]: Daily rates of submarine pay effective from 1 April 2007 are:

Level 1	Payable on qualification	11.27
Level 2	Payable after five years on level 1	14.64
Level 3	Payable after five years on level 2	17.46
Level 4	Payable after five years on level 3	19.72
Level 5	Payable to officers qualifying advanced warfare course or in charge qualified positions	24.79

Note:
Levels 1 to 4 are paid to officers and other ranks and level 5 to officers only.

Further details are contained in the 2007 Armed Forces' Pay Review Body report, a copy of which is held in the Library of the House.

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the Royal Navy are in receipt of submarine pay, broken down by rank. [143610]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 18 June 2007]: As at 15 June 2007 the number of Royal Navy personnel in receipt of submarine pay by rank is:

	Number
Captain	30
Commander	166
Lieutenant Commander	342
Lieutenant	385
Sub Lieutenant	9
Warrant Officer 1	134
Warrant Officer 2	202
Chief Petty Officer	831
Petty Officer	664
Leading Hand	623
Able Seaman	884
Total	4,270

Territorial Army

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what (a) recruiting, (b) training, (c) capability and (d) other activities are expected to be reduced to deliver the planned reduction in funding for the Territorial Army in financial years (i) 2007-08 and (ii) 2008-09; [142676]

(2) what representations he has received regarding the planned reduction in funding of the Territorial Army in years 2007-08 and 2008-09. [142677]

Mr. Ingram [holding answers 15 June 2007]: A number of measures will be implemented in order to deliver the reduction in funding for the Territorial Army (TA) over the next two financial years. Recruiting for those TA units that are not contributing to, or have not contributed significantly to current overseas operations will cease for one year. Work is still ongoing to determine which units will be affected by this measure. The creation of a small number of the new units that have been planned under future army structures (Territorial Army) and the recruitment of a small number of non-regular permanent staff for new support roles within TA units will be delayed. There will also be a number of reductions in TA activities not directly related to the delivery of operational capability, including a reduction in the number and frequency of TA competitions, a reduction in TA support to employers' events and the cancellation of annual TA conferences.

Ministers have received no representations regarding the planned reduction in funding of the Territorial Army in years 2007-08 and 2008-09.

Terry Lloyd

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) correspondence and (b) discussions his Department has had in response to the finding of the coroner in October 2006 that ITN correspondent Terry Lloyd was killed unlawfully; and if he will make a statement. [140909]

Des Browne: As a UK civilian killed abroad, the responsibility for progressing Mr. Lloyd's case was taken up by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Attorney-General's Office.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Anti-Semitism

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effect of the activity of extremist imams and radical islamists on the incidence of anti-Semitic attacks in the UK. [142127]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The Department for Communities and Local Government does not carry out assessments on the effect of the activity of extremist imams and radical islamists on the incidence of anti-semitic attacks in the UK. However, these issues are a matter for the police both in their assessment of risk in communities and in tackling individuals that break the law.

Biometrics: Databases

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many records are held on the National DNA database, broken down by reason for their inclusion; and how many of those records are of individuals who (i) were not charged and (ii) were charged and found not guilty of an offence. [143118]

Joan Ryan: As of 10 June 2007, there were an estimated 3,976,090 individuals on the National DNA Database (NDNAD).

The purpose of the National DNA Database is to hold a record of a person's DNA which can be matched against DNA taken from crime scenes. It does not hold data on arrests, charges and convictions—that is held on the police national computer (PNC). Current information on the number of individuals who were not charged, or charged and not found guilty, could be obtained only at disproportionate cost by cross-searching the NDNAD profiles against records held on PNC.

However, information is available from a cross-searching exercise carried out on the police national computer on 14 July 2006. This showed that at that date, 79.3 per cent. of those on the NDNAD who also had an entry on PNC had a conviction or a caution (ie a criminal record). The remaining 20.7 per cent. are persons who have been arrested for a recordable offence where no further action was taken; persons who have been charged with a recordable offence where proceedings are ongoing; and persons under 18 who have a formal warning or reprimand recorded on PNC.

Crime Prevention

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress since his meeting with the hon. Member for Nottingham North and George Hosking of Wave Research on 6 December 2006 regarding crime prevention and early intervention. [139874]

Mr. Coaker: The Home Office is supportive of the early intervention work my hon. Friend and others are taking forward in Nottingham. However, regretfully we are unable to provide direct funding for his proposals at this time.

The Government are already doing a great deal to support similar activity through the Respect and the Social Exclusion Action Plans, including strands led by the DfES and the YJB. Nottingham has benefited significantly from this, and it is likely that there will also be further opportunities to bid for other funding to support this work in Nottingham in due course.

Crimes of Violence: Sussex

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to reduce levels of violent crime in Sussex police authority area. [141828]

Mr. Coaker: The Government are currently taking forward a wide range of work which will continue to reduce violent crime. We have, for example, recently passed the Violent Crime Reduction Act, which gives the police and local communities the powers they need to tackle guns, knives and alcohol-related violence.

There are currently a number of violent crime operations being taken forward in Sussex, including: Operation Jardon, tackling football-related crime, and based on experience from the 2004 Euro Championship—penalties are used for anyone drunk and behaving in an antisocial manner, and for licensees serving alcohol to drunk and underage customers; and Operation Columbus, designed to ensure the safety and wellbeing of visiting international language students. Across East and West Sussex, a range of activities have been implemented in support of District Plans, such as CCTV in taxis in Eastbourne. Specifically in Brighton, a number of successful projects, including the Safe Haven project, have been taken forward in conjunction with the Centre for Public Innovation. Brighton hopes to repeat this particular experience this summer.

Domestic violence is also a priority. The WORTH project provides immediate support to people experiencing domestic violence. Hospital staff in A&E and midwifery are fully trained, and a team of fully trained caseworkers respond immediately to victims needing help. An Individual Support Programme for children (WISP) has also been successfully introduced. A pilot project is also under way, introducing a "routine enquiry" process about DV to GP surgeries and sexual health clinics. Work to introduce specialist domestic violence courts in Sussex continues. And Sussex police are currently seeking to bring the National Centre for Domestic Violence charity to Sussex. This charity works to deliver, on a next-day basis, the protection of civil orders to victims of domestic violence without any charge to the service or the victim.

Sussex police have been engaging with other partner agencies in introducing updated child protection and safeguarding procedures for Sussex. They are working with the East Sussex, West Sussex and Brighton and Hove city council local Safeguarding Children Boards, which provide information, advice and guidance for all professionals working in child protection. East Sussex is also one of the eight pilot counties for the development of Child Death Review Panels.

Neighbourhood policing across Sussex is continuing to develop, and practitioners are working up increasingly sophisticated strategies to engage with, and meet the needs of, local communities. Problem-solving with partners is becoming further established, with good use being made of analytical products to identify crime and incident hotspots. And improving community consultation is enabling neighbourhood specialist teams to tackle the problems of most concern to communities.

Crimes of Violence: West Midlands

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to reduce levels of violent crime in the West Midlands police authority area. [138779]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 23 May 2007]: The Government are currently taking forward a wide range of work which will continue to reduce violent crime. We have, for example, recently passed the Violent Crime Reduction Act, which gives the police and local communities the powers they need to tackle guns, knives and alcohol-related violence.

Domestic violence is a particular priority. In December 2006, it was announced that Birmingham, Coventry, Dudley, Sandwell (Warley and West Bromwich magistrates courts), Solihull and Walsall (Walsall and Aldridge magistrates courts) had been selected as Specialist Domestic Violence Court areas. These specialist courts promote a joint approach to tackling domestic violence, with the police, crown prosecutors, magistrates, courts and the probation service working together with specialist support services for victims. Agencies collectively identify, track and risk assess domestic violence cases, and better share information so that more offenders are brought to justice, victims are protected and better supported, and further violence is prevented.

The Government, through the Government office for the west midlands, supports key partners in the statutory and voluntary sector in tackling gun crime and gang-related violence. For example, Birmingham Reducing Gang Violence has continued to be a focal point for activities and partnership work to reduce gun crime. It is chaired by the West Midlands police, and supported by a range of agencies and voluntary sector groups, including Birmingham city council, West Midlands Probation, Victim Support, Increase the Peace UK, Mothers in Pain and Street Pastors.

The West Midlands is also well represented in the Tackling Violent Crime Programme, through which the Home Office works intensively with practitioners in local areas with high levels of more serious violent crime, to support their efforts to reduce, in particular, alcohol-related crime and domestic violence, to improve police and other agencies' performance and partnership working, and to improve local strategies. Currently four West Midlands police basic command units are funded to utilise a variety of interventions, including the greater use of fixed penalty notices for alcohol-related offences, routine visits to "hotspot" licensed premises, and the use of bus and taxi marshals at peak times.

West Midlands police have also been particularly active over the past 12 months in addressing robbery. Three of the 28 areas nationally which became subject to special focus during the recent Robbery Initiative are in the West Midlands (Solihull, Wolverhampton and Coventry). These areas were required to produce an action plan, which would produce long-term, sustainable interventions and not rely purely on short-term police activity to yield short-term results.

Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994: Greater London

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many orders under section 60 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 were made in London in each of the last five years; which officer signed each order; what locality was specified by each order; and for what duration the order was enforced. [143066]

Mr. Coaker: The Home Office does not hold the information requested about authorisations of the use of powers under section 60 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994. An authorisation is an operational matter for the police and I have therefore asked the Metropolitan Police Service to collate the information for me. I shall write to the hon. Member when that information is available.

Driving Offences: Insurance

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what discussions he has had with the police on the trend in incidences of staged and induced motor accident fraud along the M1 corridor; [144003]

(2) what discussions he has had with the Insurance Fraud Bureau on the subject of staged and induced motor accident fraud; [144004]

(3) what discussions he has had with the insurance industry on the subject of a national strategy to tackle staged and induced motor accidents. [144005]

Mr. Coaker: I have recently met with both Commissioner Bowron (City of London police) who is the ACPO lead for Economic Crime, and with representatives of the Association of British Insurers. At both of these meetings the issue of staged motor accident fraud was among the issues discussed.

The recent cross-Whitehall review of fraud recommended in favour of a national strategy on fraud, overseen by a National Fraud Strategic Authority. The review and its recommendations was not specific to insurance fraud but a national strategy would cover this type of fraud. Work on the fraud review recommendations is being taken forward through an overall Programme Board and a number of working groups which will produce detailed business cases and costings for the various groups of recommendations. The Home Office and the Association of British Insurers are both involved in this process.

Driving Under Influence

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many drink driving tests were carried out by each police force in 2005. [143514]

Mr. Coaker: The information available relates to screening breath tests and is contained in the annual publication, Mooring Offences and Breath Test Statistics, England and Wales, available in the Library and at www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pubsstatistical.html. The latest figures are for 2004; figures for 2005 will be available later in 2007.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) drivers, (b) other road users and (c) pedestrians were killed in crashes involving drivers who had exceeded the alcohol limit in each of the last 10 years. [143566]

Dr. Ladyman: I have been asked to reply.

The available information is shown in the table.

Estimated number of fatalities from accidents involving illegal alcohol levels, by road user type: GB 1995 - 2004

	Estimated number of fatalities[1]

[1] Estimated figures are rounded to the nearest 10.
[2] Includes all car passengers, and car drivers who were not over the limit.
[3] Includes all road users except car occupants and pedestrians, including other motor vehicle drivers who were over the legal alcohol limit.

Drugs: Afghanistan

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what quantities of narcotics originating from Afghanistan were seized in transit by UK enforcement agencies in each of the last three years. [142993]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 15 June 2007]: Since 1 April 2006 to 31 March 2007, the Serious Organised Crime Agency (SOCA) has, with other partner law enforcement agencies, been involved in the seizure of 1.5 tonnes of heroin. While the source country has not been established, we believe that 90 per cent. of all heroin reaching the UK originates from Afghanistan.

Human Trafficking

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of Operation Pentameter. [143212]

Mr. Coaker: The Government are currently conducting a research study into Operation Pentameter. The lessons learnt will inform future human trafficking operations.

Identity Cards

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been spent on (a) the identity cards project in the 2006-07 financial year and (b) external consultants working on the identity cards project. [105584]

Joan Ryan: Since the merger of the Home Office Identity Cards Programme and the UK Passport Service to create the Identity and Passport Service on 1 April 2006, projects to deliver biometric passports, identity cards and other improvements have been necessarily combined. As much of the functionality needed to implement identity cards is also required for the implementation of biometric passports, this is the most cost-effective way to deliver these initiatives (e.g. both the implementation of biometric passports and identity cards will require a very similar application procedure as well the procurement of biometric recording equipment, data storage capability for biographical and biometric information and offices to facilitate enrolment).

As a result, much of the work conducted by Identity and Passport Service cannot be categorised, both financially and operationally, as contributing towards either the introduction of biometric passports or identity cards alone. The work is accounted for as future development projects.

In the 2006-07 financial year, the cost of such development projects was £32.7 million. The cost of external consultancy and contracted staff, attributed to these projects for that year was £21.4 million.

Even without the introduction of identity cards, a significant proportion of this expenditure would have been required in order to prepare for the introduction of second biometric passports. Overall, it is estimated that around 70 per cent. of the total cost of the scheme would need to be incurred in order to introduce the second biometric passport incorporating fingerprint biometrics.

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has made an estimate of the cost to date of researching and developing the identity cards scheme. [123939]

Joan Ryan: Between the financial years 2003-04 and 2005-06, £41.1 million was spent by the Identity Cards Programme in total.

Since the merger of the Home Office Identity Cards Programme and the UK Passport Service to create the Identity and Passport Service on 1 April 2006, projects to deliver biometric passports, identity cards and other improvements have been necessarily combined. As much of the functionality needed to implement identity cards is also required for the implementation of biometric passports, this is the most cost-effective way to deliver these initiatives (e.g. both the implementation of biometric passports and identity cards will require a very similar application procedure as well the procurement of biometric recording equipment, data storage capability for biographical and biometric information and offices to facilitate enrolment).

As a result, much of the work conducted by Identity and Passport Service cannot be categorised, both financially and operationally, as contributing towards either the introduction of biometric passports or identity cards alone. Overall, it is estimated that around 70 per cent. of the total cost of the scheme would need to be incurred in order to introduce the second biometric passport incorporating fingerprint biometrics.

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the second report on the cost of the identity cards scheme, how much his Department has spent in total on the scheme from its inception until 10 May 2007, broken down by (a) consultancy fees, (b) IT costs, (c) polling or opinion research and (d) other costs. [140019]

Joan Ryan [holding answer 4 June 2007]: Between the financial years 2003-04 and 2005-06, £41.1 million was spent by the Identity Cards Programme in total.

Of this expenditure, £31.6 million was spent on consulting and contracting services and £180,000 was spent on polling and opinion research. A further £180,000 was spent on specific IT software packages, although this figure excludes the cost of running standard hardware and software applications for desktop computers.

Since the merger of the Home Office Identity Cards Programme and the UK Passport Service to create the Identity and Passport Service on 1 April 2006, projects to deliver biometric passports, identity cards and other improvements have been necessarily combined. As much of the functionality needed to implement identity cards is also required for the implementation of biometric passports, this is the most cost-effective way to deliver these initiatives (e.g. both the implementation of biometric passports and identity cards will require a very similar application procedure as well as the procurement of biometric recording equipment, data storage capability for biographical and biometric information and offices to facilitate enrolment).

Overall, it is estimated that around 70 per cent. of the total cost of the scheme would need to be incurred in order to introduce the second biometric passport incorporating fingerprint biometrics.

The cost of external consultancy and contracted staff allocated to these projects for that year was £21.4 million, while IT costs allocated to these projects for that year total £1 million.

As contracts relating to opinion polling and research are based around providing services to projects or activities which can apply to both existing passport operational business as well as the future development of biometric passports, identity cards and future improvements, it is not possible to disaggregate the specific cost of opinion polling and research for the ID cards scheme. However, the total expenditure on all communications activities attributed to the budgets of projects for the future development of biometric passports, identity cards and associated initiatives was £145,000.

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what range of services (a) non-EU nationals and (b) UK residents will be able only to access by carrying their identity card with them. [140526]

Joan Ryan: Producing an identity card is likely to be the most convenient method of proving identity when accessing any public or private sector services. However, unless and until the specific requirements in section 16 of the Identity Cards Act are met, it will continue to be possible for individuals to use reasonable alternative methods of establishing their identity.

Identity Cards: Expenditure

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been spent on the identity cards scheme; what projections he has made of future costs; and if he will make a statement. [124194]

Joan Ryan: Between the financial years 2003-04 and 2005-06, £41.1 million was spent by the Identity Cards Programme in total.

Since the merger of the Home Office Identity Cards Programme and the UK Passport Service to create the Identity and Passport Service on 1 April 2006, projects to deliver biometric passports, identity cards and other improvements have been necessarily combined. As much of the functionality needed to implement identity cards is also required for the implementation of biometric passports, this is the most cost-effective way to deliver these initiatives (e.g. both the implementation of biometric passports and identity cards will require a very similar application procedure as well the procurement of biometric recording equipment, data storage capability for biographical and biometric information and offices to facilitate enrolment).

As a result, much of the work conducted by Identity and Passport Service cannot be categorised, both financially and operationally, as contributing towards either the introduction of biometric passports or identity cards alone. The work is accounted for as future development projects. In the 2006-07 financial year, the cost of such development projects was £32.7 million.

With regard to future costs, the Identity and Passport Service Business Plan, published in April 2007, indicates that the organisation plans to spend £473 million in the coming year. The estimate of expenditure relating to resource and capital expenditure for the introduction of second biometric passports incorporating fingerprint biometrics, identity cards and associated developments is £80 million.

Even without the introduction of identity cards, a significant proportion of this expenditure would have been required in order to prepare for the introduction of second biometric passports. Overall, it is estimated that around 70 per cent. of the total cost of the scheme would need to be incurred in order to introduce the second biometric passport incorporating fingerprint biometrics.

In addition, section 37 of the Identity Cards Act 2006 requires the Secretary of State to lay a report before Parliament every six months which details an updated figure for the cost of the National Identity Scheme over the following ten years. The latest cost report was laid before Parliament on 10 May 2007, Official Report, column 24WS and can be found at:

Immigrants: Detention Centres

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of (a) attempted suicide and (b) self-harm have been recorded in immigration detention centres in each of the last 12 months. [129793]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 26 March 2007]: We keep records of self-harm incidents which require some form of medical treatment but we are unable to determine whether any of these incidents are actual incidents of attempted suicide. Cases reported each month for the period May 2006 to April 2007 are reproduced in the following table.

Offenders: Deportation

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what factors are taken into account in making decisions on whether to return Algerian national prisoners held in UK prisons to Algeria. [143376]

Mr. Byrne: Algerian nationals are treated in the same way as other non-EEA foreign nationals who have committed crimes within the United Kingdom and received custodial sentences or been court recommended for deportation.

Current guidance on consideration of deportation is publicly available and may be found on the Border and Immigration Agency website.

Security: Heathrow Airport

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 27 March 2007, Official Report, column 1455W, on security: Heathrow airport, when the summary of the evaluation of the miSense schemes was placed in the Library. [137117]

Mr. Byrne: Further to the answer of 27 March, the summary of the evaluation of the miSense schemes is being written by BAA and is scheduled for completion in mid June. This will be placed in the House Library on completion.

Sexual Offences

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to ensure that there are adequate checks in place on sex offenders coming into the UK from the European Union. [141424]

Joan Ryan: The United Kingdom is actively involved in negotiations in the European Union to improve information sharing on sex offenders.

Last November, we established a formal arrangement with the Republic of Ireland which means that information on sex offenders travelling between the two countries is exchanged between UK and Irish police. This arrangement is the first of its kind and we hope it will be used as an example to encourage similar arrangements with other countries.

The UK has also played an active role in progressing work on the EU draft framework decision on the mutual recognition of disqualifications imposed on sex offenders. This work is still ongoing. Negotiations are also under way on a framework decision to allow for quicker and better exchange of information on criminal convictions, including disqualifications arising from convictions.

Arriving passengers are also routinely checked against the immigration watch list and the Police National Computer (PNC) database as necessary.

Speed Limits: Cameras

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment his Department has made of the (a) reliability and (b) effectiveness of the LTI 2020 speed camera. [144008]

Mr. Coaker: The Secretary of State has type approved the LTI 20.20 for use by the police in the enforcement of speeding offences. Before approval is granted, a device is subjected to operational testing in the field and to tests by the HO Scientific Development Branch and independent test houses to ensure that it complies with the type approval requirements. I am satisfied that if used in accordance with the manufacturer's operating instructions and the code of practice drawn up by the Association of Chief Police Officers the LTI 20.20 will produce evidence that can safely be relied on in court.

Written Questions

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will answer question (a) 129923 and (b) 129924, on illegal firearms, tabled on 21 March 2007 by the hon. Member for Taunton; when he will answer question 134389 following up answers to these questions, tabled on 24 April 2007; and what the reasons are for the time taken to answer each question. [139506]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 4 June 2007]: For parliamentary questions 129923 and 129924, I replied to the hon. Member on 11 June 2007, Official Report, column 891W.

For parliamentary question 134389, I replied to the hon. Member on 15 June 2007, Official Report, column 1401W.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to question number 134214 on Home Office Reviews, tabled by the hon. Member for North West Cambridgeshire on 23 April 2007. [143681]

John Reid: I replied to the hon. Member on 18 June 2007, Official Report, column 1507W.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

National Lottery

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what criteria are used to decide whether to grant funds to organisations or projects which apply to the National Lottery Fund; what weight is given to each criterion; and if she will make a statement. [144163]

Mr. Caborn: Lottery distributors are required to take into account National Lottery legislation and policy directions issued by the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport. Policy Directions set out the framework for the wider aims of lottery funding and do not specify detailed criteria. Distributors are required to publish policy directions in their annual reports and accounts (copies are available in the Library of the House).

Distributors also determine their own published criteria for funding programmes. These will be informed by consultation and take into account regional funding priorities and the need to promote access for people from all sections of society. Any weighting is a matter for the distributor.

Olympic Games: Greater London 2012

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will place in the Library a copy of the minutes of the brain-storming session scheduled by KPMG, referred to in note 3 of the minutes of the Olympic cost review steering group of 28 November 2005. [133641]

Tessa Jowell: I refer the hon. Member to the statement I made to the House on 15 March 2007, Official Report, column 450, in which I provided full details of the budget for the Olympic Delivery Authority and a number of issues including wider security, tax and contingency provision.

The specific advice relating to the brainstorming session remains pertinent to the formulation of government policy, and I cannot therefore place the minutes in the Library of the House.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will place in the Library a copy of the assessment of total costs made by KPMG, referred to in note 2 of the minutes of the Olympic cost review steering group of 28 November 2005. [133642]

Tessa Jowell: I refer the hon. Member to the response I gave to him on 18 December 2006, Official Report, column 1588W, and to that of 14 May 2007, Official Report, column 533W. In addition I gave Parliament a full explanation of the Olympic costs and funding in my statement of 15 March 2007, Official Report, column 450. KPMG's role was changed to one of providing ongoing advice on Olympic costs, and the report referred to in note 2 of the minutes of the Olympic cost steering group was therefore not produced.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when and for what reason KPMG was commissioned to provide ongoing advice on the cost of the Olympic Games in 2012; when the final report on the cost of the Olympics commissioned from KPMG for delivery by the end of November 2005 was provided to her Department; and if she will make a statement. [141375]

Tessa Jowell: I refer the hon. Member to the response I gave to him on 18 December 2006, Official Report, column 1588W, and to that of 14 May 2007, Official Report, column 533W.

KPMG were commissioned in October 2005 in order to provide advice to inform the development of cost plans and budgets for the Games. No report was produced, as KPMG's role was changed at the time to one of providing ongoing advice to the Department, as part of the more detailed cost review that we were undertaking.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what (a) reports, (b) other documents and (c) electronic presentations KPMG has produced for her Department in connection with that company's role in providing advice on the Olympics cost review; and on what date each was (i) submitted or presented and (ii) produced. [141382]

Tessa Jowell: I refer the hon. Member to the statement I made to the House on 15 March 2007, Official Report, column 450, in which I provided full details of the budget for the Olympic Delivery Authority and a number of issues including wider security, tax and contingency provision. This was informed by the thorough cost review I instituted after the bid win, for which KPMG provided advice on an ongoing basis. KPMG's advice will also inform the development of the Olympic Delivery Authority's Corporate Plan, which is due to be published later this year.

Advice provided by KPMG on the cost of the Olympic Games is being used on an ongoing basis in the management of the Olympic budget. This is pertinent to and informs the current formulation of government policy, and cannot therefore be provided.

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proportion of the land acquired for the Olympics 2012 Park has been decontaminated in situ; where the contaminated soils unsuitable for in situ treatment have been removed to; what quantities of contaminated soils have been removed; and whether the removal of Japanese knotweed from the site has been completed. [143309]

Mr. Caborn: Site investigation work on the Olympic Park has been focusing on the level of contamination and the required treatment. Initial on-site decontamination work will commence in late July 2007.

Treatment of Japanese knotweed has commenced and the range of treatments will take approximately three years to complete.

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will hold a London 2012: Your Games, Your Say question and answer session in Wales. [143782]

Mr. Caborn: In partnership with the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games and Paralympic Games (LOCOG), we have committed to conducting regular public meetings to give local people across the United Kingdom the opportunity to question those responsible for delivering the games about all aspects of preparations for 2012. I will be talking to Welsh Assembly Ministers about holding such an event in Wales.

Additionally, Lord Coe, as the Chairman of the London Organising Committee, visited Wales on 8 June and met with representatives of the Chamber of Commerce and spoke at the Welsh Local Government Association conference. This is part of regular engagement through the Nations and Regions Group.

Slavery Abolition: Bicentenary

Ms Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what support her Department has allocated to events marking the bicentenary of the abolition of the slave trade; and if she will make a statement. [144545]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport, together with the Department for Education and Skills, has given £925,000 to the Understanding Slavery Initiative, a partnership between the National Maritime Museum and a number of other cultural institutions which has been running since 2003-04, helping teachers to deal with the sensitive issue of slavery in the classroom.

The Department has also announced a £500,000 capital grant for the new International Slavery Museum (ISM) in Liverpool being developed by National Museums Liverpool. This funding builds on the £250,000 annual contribution to the ISM's running costs which the DCMS has already pledged. The ISM will replace the groundbreaking Transatlantic Slavery Gallery in the Merseyside Maritime Museum and will prove to be a magnificent new national institution and a worthy legacy of 2007.

The Department is principally working through the Museums, Libraries and Archives Council (MLA) to promote sector engagement in activities happening in 2007 and beyond.

MLA's Strategic Commissioning programme has supported a number of regional projects in 2007 between schools and museums and archives across the country. Organisations have worked with the MLA regional agencies to produce new learning resources' including exhibitions and websites that draw on local stories about the impact of slavery.

All 41 Renaissance Hub museums have engaged in events and exhibitions to mark the bicentenary. For example, in October 2007 the museum in Docklands will open the only permanent gallery in London that examines the city's involvement in transatlantic slavery and its legacy in the capital.

The MLA Partnership will also be supporting sector and community engagement with the visit of the Amistad replica to England: London (1-12 August 2007), Liverpool (20-26 August 2007) and Bristol (29 August to 6 September 2007).

The Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF) has awarded over £13 million to more than 140 projects related to the bicentenary of the abolition of the slave trade and the slave trade generally. In addition, HLF have given a grant of £10 million to Bristol city council for the Museum of Bristol: The People's Story, which will include a new gallery on Bristol and the slave trade.

Arts Council England has funded 44 projects related to the bicentenary, making grants totalling £1,234,549 so far this year.

The Big Lottery Fund (BLF) has so far committed £647,945 to projects looking at the bicentenary and modern forms of slavery. BLF has also set up the Abolition 200 website designed to let communities know about what is going on around the bicentenary, to develop project ideas, and to make links and look for funding.

The Department is also committed to ensuring a legacy from the bicentenary commemorations. We are working with MLA, ACE, HLF and the rest of the sector to improve the diversity of the staff employed by our museums and galleries, along with the audiences they reach.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Floods: Radioactive Wastes

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what consideration is given to the potential vulnerability to sea ingress from sea level rise or flooding inundation due to climate change of a site being considered for the suitability of its geology for a subterranean repository for long-lived radioactive waste; [143768]

(2) what progress has been made in deciding the scientific criteria for the initial screening out of areas unsuitable for a geological repository for long-lived radioactive waste. [143772]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 18 June 2007]: The Criteria Proposals Group (CPG) and the Criteria Review Panel (CRP) were established to develop draft criteria for the initial screening out of areas unsuitable for geological disposal of the UK's higher activity radioactive waste. These criteria will be included in the forthcoming Managing Radioactive Waste Safely consultation document. CPG and CRP have now completed their work. A joint report will be published on the DEFRA website later in summer 2007.

The potential impact of rising sea levels on coastal areas as a result of climate change was considered by CPG and CRP. Sea level rise could affect the location of repository access points and of surface facilities sited in coastal areas during the repository construction, operational and pre-closure phases. CPG and CRP concluded that, because of the potential to protect surface facilities from coastal flooding, for example by engineered means or, where possible, by relocating facilities to higher ground, risk of coastal flooding was not a general exclusion criterion. However, it would need to form part of the future process of site specific consideration.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Africa: Peace Keeping Operations

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she is making to members of the African Union to send troops to join the joint African Union and United Nations peacekeeping force. [143233]

Mr. McCartney: The UK is a strong supporter of the proposed UN/African Union (AU) hybrid force and of AMIS, the current AU force in Sudan. We have been encouraging key troop contributing countries in Africa to contribute to peacekeeping in general and to AMIS in particular. Although the AU and UN have not yet issued any formal requests for troop generation for the hybrid force, we will urge them to contribute forces. The UK also helps several African nations—through provision of military training—to allow them to send forces to join UN and AU peacekeeping missions.

China: Human Rights

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with China on its human rights record. [143447]

Mr. McCartney: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Dunfermline and West Fife (Willie Rennie) on 5 June 2007, Official Report, column 450W.

Departments: Foreign Relations

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Memoranda of Understanding are in force as a result of agreements with foreign governments entered into by Ministers in her Department; and what executive actions each entails. [144475]

Dr. Howells: Records of Memoranda of Understanding (MoUs) are not held centrally. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) has only maintained a collection of MoUs since 1997. The FCO database contains records of 352 MoUs, including both MoUs originating with the FCO and MoUs concluded by other Government Departments. However this record is not complete; although there is a widespread practice of other Departments depositing copies of MoUs with the FCO, it is not possible to confirm whether they have done so in every case. To produce a complete record of the MoUs entered into by the FCO and other Government Departments would require lengthy research and would be disproportionally costly. In some circumstances MoUs are deposited in the Library of the House, where hon. Members can consult them. This is a matter for the Department concerned.

Moldova: EU Enlargement

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has held with the Government of Moldova on the possibility of accession to the European Union. [144086]

Mr. Hoon: During my visit to Moldova in February, I made clear that the UK will continue to support Moldova's European aspirations and encouraged them to fully implement the measures set out in the jointly agreed EU-Moldova Action Plan, launched in February 2005. The European Neighbourhood Policy offers many opportunities for Moldova to move closer to the EU. We do not see the European Neighbourhood Policy as an alternative to full EU membership, but as a path towards accession. We will continue to work closely with Moldova and help focus their efforts on implementing the Action Plan and its successor. Successful implementation will be important for Moldova in pressing their case for a closer relationship with the EU.

The Government welcome Moldova's European aspirations and strongly support efforts to promote economic and political reforms, aimed at bringing Moldova closer in line with EU standards. The Re-uniting Europe Programme of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Global Opportunities Fund supports a number of capacity building projects to support these reforms, as do the Department for International Development through a £2.6 million assistance programme.

Palestinians Security Forces

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the UK will be taking additional steps to strengthen the Palestinian Security Forces following the formation of a new government in the West Bank; and if she will make a statement. [144327]

Dr. Howells: We remain committed to security sector reform and will continue to work with Palestinian President Abbas and Palestinian Prime Minister Fayyad to strengthen the Palestinian security forces. We are currently considering how best to do this, given recent events.

Somalia

Ms Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the effect on the humanitarian situation in Somalia of the continued presence of Ethiopian troops. [143516]

Mr. McCartney: The humanitarian situation in Somalia is primarily the product of 16 years of failed governance and is the prime responsibility of individuals in Somalia.

We are very concerned that, as the UN has reported, about 400,000 people have been displaced and more than 1,000 may have been killed. The UK is particularly concerned about obstacles to access for humanitarian workers wanting to give help to those who most need it. We have raised this in international forums such as the EU, the UN and the International Contact Group on Somalia, which met most recently in London on 5 and 6 June, and we have made our views very clear.

The UK was the Second largest humanitarian donor in Somalia in 2006. Since January, we have committed a further £6.3 million over and above our pre-budgeted funding to seek to help those worst affected by the fighting and the ongoing humanitarian needs.

The UK condemns the recent violence from whichever quarter it comes. We believe the Ethiopians should leave as soon as is practicable. They have told us they want to do so. But for them to leave before an effective alternative security force is in place would risk leaving a dangerous security vacuum and worsening the humanitarian situation still further.

Ms Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support the UK is giving to the process of national reconciliation in Somalia. [143685]

Mr. McCartney: The UK strongly supports the process of national reconciliation in Somalia. This process is a pre-requisite for lasting security in Somalia. We believe that the Transitional Federal Government (TFG) is the only body that can bring stability across Somalia, as envisaged by the Transitional Federal Charter, but it must be more inclusive and develop a broad base of clan acceptance if it is to succeed in this.

We believe the TFG should reach out to all Somalis who reject violence, regardless of clan, and that the National Reconciliation Congress (NRC), now scheduled to start in mid July, represents an excellent opportunity to do this. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, made this point in person to President Yusuf when he visited the UK in February and to the Somali Foreign Minister in London on 7 June. The meeting of the International Contact Group in London on 6 June sent the same strong message to the TFG through the Somali Foreign Minister. We will continue to work for this and are calling on all groups in Somali society to reject violence and to work together for national reconciliation.

The UK is providing financial support for the NRC, both bilaterally (over £250,000 for the initial stage) and through the EU.

Ms Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations her Department has made to (a) the Government of Ethiopia and (b) the Somali Transitional Federal Government on the situation in Somalia. [143686]

Mr. McCartney: The UK has had frequent contact with both the Government of Ethiopia and the Transitional Federal Government on the situation in Somalia, particularly on security and on humanitarian issues.

Sudan: Darfur

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who will represent the UK at the forthcoming international conference in France on Darfur; and what representations she is making to further the attendance of a representative of the Sudanese Government at the conference. [143230]

Mr. Hoon: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, will represent the UK at the international conference on Darfur to be held in Paris on 25 June. Our ambassador in Khartoum has raised with the Sudanese Government their attendance at the meeting. However, the Sudanese Foreign Minister has made it clear that the Sudanese Government will not attend.

Suharto

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will recommend to Her Majesty the Queen that the honorary knighthood (GCB) conferred on the former Indonesian dictator Suharto in 1974 be withdrawn. [143267]

Mr. McCartney: We have no plans to do so.

Venezuela: Press Freedom

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the freedom of the press in Venezuela. [143220]

Mr. Hoon: Along with EU partners, the UK has been closely monitoring recent events in Venezuela. We are concerned at the Venezuelan Government's decision not to renew the broadcasting licence for the private media organisation RCTV. The UK strongly supported the EU presidency's robust statement, which noted with concern the Venezuelan Government's decision, and recalled undertakings made by the Venezuelan authorities to hold an open competition for the successor licence.

My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, raised our concerns on freedom of expression and freedom of the press with the Venezuelan Vice-Minister for European Affairs on 14 June, noting the non-renewal of RCTV's licence. My noble Friend Lord Triesman stressed that the UK wanted to see as many broadcasters operating in Venezuela as possible, with as few restrictions as possible.

We will continue to monitor the situation closely, in consultation with our EU partners.

TRANSPORT

Bus Services: Peterborough

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions officials from his Department have had with Peterborough City Council on the (a) establishment and (b) cancellation of bus routes in Peterborough; and if he will make a statement. [144252]

Gillian Merron: The Department for Transport does not meet with local authorities on a regular basis to discuss the establishment or cancellation of particular commercial bus routes. However, the Government Office for the East of England regularly meets with Peterborough city council to discuss local transport performance and monitoring in relation to the Local Transport Plan, including bus patronage and bus punctuality targets.

Cycling

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department has spent on cycling infrastructure in each of the last 10 years. [144303]

Mr. Tom Harris: We have no data prior to 2001-02. I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 29 March 2007, Official Report, columns 1688-9W given to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Selly Oak (Lynne Jones) where the amount provided by the Department on cycling infrastructure for subsequent years can be found.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the proportion of people in each region for which his Department holds records who (a) owned a bicycle and (b) cycled regularly in each of the last 10 years. [144304]

Mr. Tom Harris: The information requested is in the following tables. These are based on data available from the National Travel Survey.

Table 1 shows data for 2000-01 to 2005 on the percentage of individuals aged five and over in each Government office region and country of Great Britain who own a bicycle. Data on bicycle ownership were not collected before 2000.

Table 2 shows data for 1999 to 2001, 2003 and 2005 on the frequency with which people in each Government office region and country of Great Britain use a bicycle. No data are held for other years in the specified time period.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the proportion of (a) male and (b) female cyclists aged (i) under 16 years and (ii) 16 years and over who wore helmets while cycling in each of the last 10 years. [144301]

Dr. Ladyman: Surveys of cycle helmet wearing rates have been carried out for the Department in 1994, 1996, 1999, 2002, 2004 and 2006. The findings from surveys from 1994 to 2004 are shown in the table. This shows that in 2004 cycle helmets were worn by:

10.8 per cent. of male cyclists under 16

28.7 per cent. of male cyclists 16 years and over

26.3 per cent. of female cyclists under 16

29.7 per cent. of female cyclists 16 years and over

The 2006 survey of cycle helmet wearing rates will be published in the autumn.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department spent on encouraging cyclists to wear helmets in each of the last 10 years. [144302]

Dr. Ladyman: Most spending on cycle safety in England is undertaken by local highway authorities. It includes revenue spending on cycle training, other educational initiatives and local cycle safety publicity. Revenue spending on road safety is not recorded centrally.

The Department for Transport produces cycle safety publicity and resources at national level, which may include the promotion of helmet wearing. Figures for annual spending are only available as far back as 2002-03. Our road safety challenge grant scheme, which has been running since 2002-03, has funded a number of projects that are wholly or partly to improve cycle safety and may also include the promotion of helmet wearing. Figures for spending on cycle safety projects under previous grant schemes are not available.

Departmental Projects

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which projects valued at more than £100 million are under consideration by his Department. [104404]

Gillian Merron: Schemes that have received an initial approval to proceed to the preferred option stage, which is equivalent to the Office of Government Commerce's Gateway Review 1, are listed as follows, apart from the local authority schemes stated that are being assessed for this approval. Schemes that have passed the approvals stage equivalent to Gateway Review 3, which gives approval for contracts to be signed and construction to begin, are also omitted, as they are no longer under consideration.

The following projects have received initial funding approval, but have yet to start construction, and cost in excess of £100 million. They are in development or procurement, but are not all under active consideration by the Department at this stage. The first four are referred to in the 6 July 2006 letter from the Secretary of State to the relevant Regional Assembly and Regional Development Agency on regional funding allocations.

Mersey Gateway Bridge

Carlisle Northern Development Route

Manchester Metrolink Phase IIIA

Manchester Metrolink Renewals on Phases 1 and 2

Nottingham Light Rail Phase II—referred to in a statement to the House of Commons by the Secretary of State on 25 October 2006.

Thames Gateway Bridge—referred to on the TfL website

Birmingham Highway Maintenance—referred to in the West Midlands Local Transport Plan 2006

The Department is currently assessing the following local authority schemes for an initial Government approval to proceed to the preferred option stage.

South East Manchester Relief Road

Finningley and Rossington Relief Road (Doncaster)

Birmingham Gateway (New Street Station improvements)

Blackpool and Fleetwood Tramway Upgrade

Heysham to M6 Link Road (Lancashire)

Tyne and Wear Metro Reinvigoration

All six of the schemes listed above are referred to in the 6 July 2006 letter from the Secretary of State to the relevant Regional Assembly and Regional Development Agency on regional funding allocations.

The Department is currently preparing the high level output specification for the safety, reliability and capacity it expects on the rail network for the years 2009-10 to 2013-14. This document will be published in July 2007, and is likely to contain many rail projects that cost in excess of £100 million. In particular, the Department continues to take forward the Thameslink programme, and has stated that it is considering when and how to proceed with it in conjunction with the high level output specification and the Spending Review. The Department is also continuing to take forward Crossrail, a Bill for which is currently being considered by a Select Committee of the House of Commons. In addition, the Department has given initial funding approval to proceed to the preferred option stage of the Intercity Express programme.

The following projects appear in the Highways Agency's programme, and have yet to start construction. All of these are referred to in the Highways Agency's Business Plan 2007-08.

In addition to these, the Highways Agency's programme includes the A30 Garland Cross to Chiverton Cross scheme, which is not currently expected to be funded in the next ten years, following advice received from the South West region. The A303 Stonehenge scheme is under review.

A further project is being led by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency, which issued a press release in May on the Search and Rescue Helicopters scheme being undertaken jointly with the Ministry of Defence.

Departments: Advertising

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much revenue his Department received from advertisements on its (a) public information leaflets and (b) public websites in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [142338]

Gillian Merron: We have not generated any revenue from third parties as the Department does not sell advertising space on its websites or public information leaflets.

Department for Transport's Executive Agencies do receive income for the services they provide, such as booking a driving test, selling vehicle registration numbers or promoting the UK ship register, and there are websites and literature that explain these services, but again, third party advertising is not permitted.

All these payments were for conferences/seminars.

No payments have been made to IPPR Trading Ltd during this period.

Departments: Marketing

Disability training for staff	1,249.03

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the number of (a) deaths, (b) serious incidents and (c) other accidents caused by persons driving while using hand-held mobile telephones in each police force area in 2006. [144305]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested for 2006 will be available on 28 June 2007. Details of forthcoming Department for Transport statistical publications' including "Road Casualties in Great Britain—Main Results" and "Road Casualties in Great Britain—Annual Report", can be found at:

http://www.dft.gov.uk/pgr/statistics/recentforthcoming publications/forthcomingstatisticalpublic5470.

East Coast Railway Line

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will discuss the East Coast Main Line franchise with (a) Peterborough City Council and (b) Opportunity Peterborough prior to its award; and if he will make a statement. [144291]

Mr. Tom Harris: The Department for Transport published a Consultation Document for the new East Coast Main Line franchise in December 2006. Peterborough city council was consulted, and submitted a response that was incorporated within a Stakeholder Briefing Document that was issued in March 2007.

Bids for the new franchise are currently under evaluation, and the Department does not intend to undertake further discussions in addition to opportunities that have already been available to stakeholders prior to the announcement of the award, expected later in the summer.

East Coast Railway Line: Franchise

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to announce the new franchise arrangements for the East Coast Mainline. [143727]

Mr. Tom Harris: The bids for the new franchise were received on 6 June and I expect to be able to make an announcement on the winning bidder later in the summer with the intention that the new franchise commences by the end of this year.

European Geo-Stationary Navigation Overlay System

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the European Geo-Stationary Navigation Overlay System to be fully operational. [141586]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 11 June 2007]: The European Geostationary Navigation Overlay Service (EGNOS) is a joint project of the European Space Agency (ESA), the European Commission and Eurocontrol, the European Organisation for the Safety of Air Navigation. ESA has overall responsibility for the design and development of the EGNOS system.

The integration of EGNOS into the Galileo programme was decided by the Transport Council in its conclusions of June 2003. The failure of the current concession negotiations for Galileo has also affected the EGNOS augmentation programme since the concessionaire was to provide the long-term management and funding structure necessary for the certification of EGNOS.

At 8 June Transport Council, Ministers agreed a Council resolution which invited the Commission to continue with the implementation of a certifiable EGNOS, with initial service availability by 2008. This is to be distinguished from a service agreed for aviation use. There is not yet a timetable for certification of EGNOS for aviation use because it will first be necessary to identify clearly the funding and management structure that will guarantee an operational system in the long-term. These guarantees are dependent on the decisions to be taken in the autumn on the future of the European GNSS Programme.

Galileo Project

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many meetings (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have attended to discuss the Galileo project since its inception; which Ministers attended; on what dates the meetings were held; what the grade was of the civil servants attending meetings to discuss the Galileo project alone and jointly with Ministers; and if he will place in the Library a paper on the proposed future financing, governance and exploitation of Galileo. [141021]

Dr. Ladyman: Ministers have attended all transport councils since 1999, when it was agreed at the Cologne European Council that Galileo 'should be given careful scrutiny'.

Departmental officials have attended all meetings of the Galileo Joint Undertaking (GJU) Supervisory Board, since November 2002, and all meetings of the European GNSS Supervisory Authority (GSA), since January 2005. Departmental officials usually attend council working groups where Galileo is discussed, in support of the UK representation. Transport officials have been involved with the meetings of the ESA programme board that deals with EGNOS and Galileo since its inception in July 1999 and have attended many of them. The British National Space Centre takes the lead on ESA.

Information could be provided at disproportionate cost only on the dates of all the meetings that Transport Ministers and officials have held or attended on Galileo, within the Department, with Government colleagues, or with the GJU, GSA, Commission, ESA, and EU or ESA member states. The grade of the civil servants attending meetings has varied as appropriate. Senior officials, including the permanent secretary, have been involved.

An explanatory memorandum on the Commission's Communication of 16 May 2007 has been submitted to the European Scrutiny Select Committee. The Communication is available at:

A number of other companies also provided ancillary consultancy, technical and administrative support to HMRC policy officials, as part of the day-to-day running of the lorry road user charge project.

Motorcycles: Rural Areas

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the number of quad bikes used in the agricultural and rural sectors. [144341]

Dr. Ladyman: No estimate has been made of the number of quad bikes used in these circumstances.

Motorways: Driving Offences

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport under what circumstances and to what extent highways officers who patrol motorways are expected or encouraged to report the commission of traffic offences; what guidance and training they get on this issue; and if he will make a statement. [144137]

Dr. Ladyman: Traffic Officers have the power to:

Stop and direct traffic and pedestrians
Place temporary traffic signs

They do not have an enforcement role. This responsibility remains with the police. Both the Highways Agency and the police support this position.

Traffic Officers support the police where there are fatalities or suspected criminality at an incident. The Traffic Officers' role is to manage traffic in the vicinity of an incident, and in doing this they may liaise with the police on matters of compliance with road-traffic law.

Highways Agency Traffic Officers have a general instruction to report acts of a criminal nature to their control office for reporting to the Police for possible prosecution. This is fully covered in our procedures and in the initial training that Traffic Officers receive.

Railways: Death

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many fatalities there were on railway lines in the UK in each of the last 20 years, broken down by rail line. [144174]

Mr. Tom Harris: This information is not held by the Department for Transport but by the British Transport Police, who can be contacted at: British Transport Police, 25 Camden Road, London NW1 9LN, E-mail: general.enquiries@btp.pnn.police.uk.

Railways: Portsmouth

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what criteria are used by the Highways Agency in deciding whether to utilise whisper quiet road surface technology on trunk roads as part of a planned maintenance programme; and if he will make a statement. [144102]

Dr. Ladyman: It is current Highways Agency policy to use quieter surfacing materials during all planned maintenance works on the network and when constructing new roads.

Skips

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discretion local authorities have in imposing the provisions of the Highways Act 1980; and whether he plans to make the conditions imposed on skips placed on highways the national standard. [143336]

Gillian Merron: There is no restriction on the discretion used by local authorities when imposing the provisions of the Highways Act 1980 on skips.

There are no powers under the Highways Act to set a national standard for the conditions imposed on skips placed on the highway.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) reviewed on the effectiveness of speed cameras in 20 mph zones. [144105]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department has not commissioned or reviewed any research into the effectiveness of speed cameras for 20 mph zones. The Department considers that, and have advised local authorities that, 20 mph zones should be self enforcing through proven traffic calming measures.

West Coast Main Line

Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment has been made of the suitability of the Cumbrian section of the West Coast Main Line to accommodate Virgin high speed trains. [144376]

Mr. Tom Harris: The West Coast Main Line between London and Glasgow, including the Cumbrian section, has been made suitable for the Virgin Pendolino high speed trains that currently operate along the route. Network Rail is responsible for the renewal, upgrade and maintenance of the rail infrastructure along the entire route.

Severn Barrage

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales who will be responsible for the decision on whether to go ahead with a Severn tidal barrage; and whether this project would be subject to decision by the proposed planning infrastructure commission. [142446]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

There is no specific proposal at present to build a Severn Barrage. The Sustainable Development Commission is however producing a report, with financial support from various parties including my Department, looking at various options for harnessing the potential tidal energy resource that exists around the UK, including within the Severn estuary. The SDC will, of course, be looking at the Severn Barrage proposal in detail as part of their report.

It is too early to speculate in detail about what might happen after the SDC have issued their report, expected in the autumn, or what role the Infrastructure Planning Commission might have. Clearly it would be for the private sector rather than the Government to lead in developing the concept into a specific proposal.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

ICT

Susan Kramer: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission (1) how many (a) desktop computers and (b) laptops provided by the House authorities are in use in the House of Commons part of the Parliamentary Estate; and what the estimated daily energy usage is of these computers; [143759]

(2) how many (a) servers, (b) printers and (c) computer display screens are in use in the House of Commons part of the Parliamentary Estate; and what the estimated daily energy usage is of these devices. [143760]

Nick Harvey: Records show that there are 250 servers in use within the House of Commons. Estimated energy consumption for the servers is 75k per day, based on an average server. There are approximately 1,300 printers and approximately 2,670 desktop computers in use in the House of Commons, most of which will have an attached display screen. It is not possible to provide a reliable estimate of the energy consumption for printers and computer display screens due to their varying use.

Electoral Registration

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment the Government has made of the effectiveness of individual electoral registration in reducing the scope for fraud in Northern Ireland. [141710]

Maria Eagle: The Electoral Commission commented on individual registration and other administrative matters to do with the March Assembly election in its statutory report which has just been published. The report comments that their findings

'reflect an increasing understanding of the electoral process in Northern Ireland, with individual registration and the requirement for photographic identification resulting in elections that are now largely free from allegations of electoral fraud'.

The detail of the report can be accessed online at www.electoralcommission.org.uk and I have placed a copy of it in the Library.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many drug searches were carried out at the Juvenile Justice Centre in the last 12 months; and what the result was of each search. [143299]

Maria Eagle: Regular searches are undertaken at the Juvenile Justice Centre for all types of contraband including drugs. Specific drugs detection equipment has been used on occasions in the last 12 months when drugs misuse has been suspected. Results were negative on both occasions.

DEFENCE

Armed Forces: Hospitals

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 16 April 2007, Official Report, column 139W, on the armed forces: Selly Oak hospital, what recent assessment he has made of the views of military patients treated at hospitals of the University of Birmingham Foundation Trust. [143756]

Derek Twigg: The latest analysis of the pilot patient survey (now covering the period from late December 2006 to 31 May 2007) confirms earlier findings that the overwhelming majority of military in-patients treated at the trust's hospitals who responded to the survey consider their overall care to have been "excellent", "very good" or "good". Questionnaires were returned by around three-quarters of in-patients surveyed over the period. Participation in the anonymous survey is voluntary.

Armed Forces: Housing

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many cases of infestation by vermin in forces' accommodation were reported in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [142102]

Derek Twigg: Recording of pest infestation information is the responsibility of the individual Heads of Establishments and Records only have to be retained for three years. Given the large number of establishments it will take a little time to ascertain what information can be collected and collated.

I will write to the hon. Member as soon as inquiries are complete and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Defence Housing Executive

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the Defence Housing Executive's Annual Report and Accounts for each year since 1999. [142524]

Derek Twigg: Copies of the Annual Report and Accounts are available in the Library of the House.

Departments: Advertising

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his Department's total spending was on advertising and promotional campaigns in each year since 1997; and what the cost of each campaign was, broken down by costs relating to (a) television, (b) radio and (c) print media. [128077]

Derek Twigg: The Ministry of Defence engages in a range of recruitment and public relations campaigns in order that the work of the MOD and armed forces is communicated to the general public. The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Gurkhas: Medical Treatment

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what access Gurkha soldiers have to medical treatment in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [143689]

Derek Twigg: Medical treatment for the individual Gurkha soldier is the same as that provided to his serving British counterpart.

Iraq and Afghanistan: Medical Suppliers

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what mechanisms are in place to monitor the provision of medicine and medical supplies to armed forces in Iraq and Afghanistan. [142968]

Derek Twigg: Highly effective procedures are in place, at all levels of the Ministry of Defence, to monitor the provision of medicine and medical supplies to deployed forces.

Specialist medical supply staff are deployed in both theatres to monitor usage on the ground and ensure timely and accurate re-supply demands to the UK base.

There are also specialist medical officers in the headquarters in both Iraq and Afghanistan and part of their role is to oversee the provision of medical supplies. Similarly, there are medical personnel within the permanent joint headquarters to advise senior commanders on medical matters, including if necessary, the provision of supplies.

Medical supplies are given a high priority and, in the case of medicines, are always transported by the fastest means.

Maritime Role Three Medical Capability

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what capabilities, infrastructure and equipment will be provided under the Maritime Role Three Medical Capability. [140996]

Derek Twigg: The Maritime Role Three Medical Capability will contribute to the medical care of UK personnel deployed on operations. The project is currently undertaking research to confirm the overall defence requirement. Accordingly, the precise nature of the capabilities, infrastructure and equipment to be provided have not yet been determined.

Princess Royal Barracks

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons the parents of Army recruits who died at Deepcut Army Barracks were not informed that Devon and Cornwall police had recommended a murder inquiry into the deaths; and if he will make a statement. [143402]

Mr. Ingram: The outcome and reporting of the review by the Devon and Cornwall police on the Surrey police investigation into the deaths of four recruits at Deepcut is entirely a matter for the police authorities involved and the Home Office.

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he was (a) informed about and (b) approved the closure of the website relating to the Deepcut Review conducted by Nicholas Blake QC; and if he will make a statement. [143403]

Mr. Ingram: No. The website was set up by Nicholas Blake QC for the duration of the review and closed recently, more than a year after the report was published in March 2006. The report is still available on the internet on Nicholas Blake's webpage at Matrix Chambers at:

http://www.matrixlaw.co.uk/WhoWeAre_Members_NicholasBlakeQC.aspx

A copy will also shortly be put on to the MOD's website at:

www.mod.uk

RAF Northolt

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions (a) the Prime Minister and (b) other Ministers of the Crown flew from RAF Northolt in each year since 2003. [137920]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 17 May 2007]: The following table details on how many occasions the Prime Minister and other Ministers of the Crown have flown from RAF Northolt in each financial year since 2003:

Financial year	Prime Minister	Ministers of the Crown
2003-04	21	118
2004-05	28	76
2005-06	20	108
2006-07	18	53

Somalia: Piracy

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assistance the UK is (a) sending and (b) planning to send to aid the United States' efforts to end piracy off the coast of Somalia in the Gulf of Aden and the Indian Ocean. [143234]

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action is being taken by the Royal Navy against piracy off the coast of Somalia. [143331]

Mr. Ingram: The UK currently has forces deployed as part of the Coalition Naval Task Force which operates in the Arabian sea and Indian ocean, including off the coast of Somalia. These assets are deployed on a range of maritime security tasks, and could respond to incidents of piracy should they arise.

Submarines: Pay

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total cost is of submarine pay being paid to Royal Navy personnel not currently serving onboard a submarine. [143607]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 18 June 2007]: The total cost of submarine pay is currently approximately £27 million per annum of which £12 million per annum is paid to personnel not currently serving on board a submarine.

Territorial Army

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how the figure for the planned reduction for funding for the Territorial Army in financial years 2007-08 and 2008-09 as a result of the Defence Programme 2007 was arrived at; and what factors were taken into account in deciding to make the reduction; [142678]

(2) when the Armed Forces Minister was first informed of the potential impact of the reduction of funding for the Territorial Army in financial years 2007-08 to 2008-09. [142908]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 15 June 2007]: A range of measures was considered collectively during the Department's Planning Round to balance the Defence Programme and ensure that all areas of Defence, including the Territorial Army, operate as efficiently and cost effectively as possible. It was judged that we could make a small adjustment to TA expenditure in order to ensure that resources were allocated in line with Defence priorities, while ensuring that TA support to current operations remained unaffected.

This measure formed part of the Defence Programme 07 submitted to Ministers in February 2007 for consideration and approval, as part of the departmental planning round process.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Developing Countries: Education

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) whether he expects the targets set at the recent G8 summit for education for every child to be met by 2015; [143773]

(2) what steps his Department is taking to ensure that targets set at the last G8 summit for education for every child will be met by 2015. [143773]

Hilary Benn: While the G8 did not agree additional long-term education targets at the Heiligendamm summit, the G8 did agree to implement the commitments on development made at Gleneagles. This includes support for long-term funding for education, and to continue to work with partners and other donors to meet shortfalls in all Education for All Fast Track Initiative (FTI) endorsed countries, estimated by the FTI Secretariat at around $500 million for 2007.

With regard to the Millennium Development Goal target of achieving universal primary education by 2015, faster progress and a concerted effort by all donors is needed. The UK has already made a long-term commitment to help achieve this target through our promise to provide £8.5 million over 10 years in support of education, announced in April 2006. The support for long-term funding agreed at Heiligendamm is welcomed and shows that the UK approach and example should be adopted. We will continue to use all opportunities to urge other donors to also meet their promises.

Malawi: Water

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether he expects UK funding for the World Bank's Second National Water Development Programme in Malawi to be allocated to one or more specific components of the World Bank project; what the time scale is of the UK contribution; and if he will make a statement. [143963]

Hilary Benn: The UK is looking to contribute to the World Bank's second National Water Development Programme in Malawi through the World Bank's Africa Catalytic Growth Fund (ACGF). The ACGF, part of the Bank's Africa Action Plan, aims to help Africa make faster progress in meeting the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) and increasing the rate of economic growth. Financed by voluntary contributions, the ACGF complements other sources of development financing, including those from the Bank's International Development Association (IDA). The UK has committed £200 million to the ACGF, of which £90 million has been paid to the Bank, to date, to support five projects. We are currently discussing with the Bank a proposed ACGF allocation of about $30 million (£15 million) to the Malawi National Water Development Programme, which would focus on strengthening the rural water supply and sanitation component, to be financed from the next UK contribution to the ACGF (due in April 2008).

Somalia: Overseas Aid

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the outcomes of UK financial support for the Somali Transitional Federal Government. [144178]

Hilary Benn: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 14 June 2007, Official Report, columns 1250-51W, which outlines the details, effectiveness and tangible examples of the UK's support to the Somali Transitional Federal Government.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his assessment is of the adequacy of the level of humanitarian funding to Somalia. [144180]

Hilary Benn: Our assessment is that funding for humanitarian activities is adequate, but we remain concerned about access issues for agencies trying to work on the ground, and about the continuing restrictions being placed on humanitarian actors by the Transitional Federal Government.

The United Nations appeal is $262 million (£132 million), of which 54 per cent. is currently funded. The ICRC appeal is 46 million Swiss francs (£18.7 million), of which 57 per cent. has been received and 72 per cent. pledged.

The UK is committed to addressing humanitarian needs in Somalia. So far in 2007, DFID has committed £6.3 million in additional funds to help those worst affected by the fighting and the ongoing humanitarian needs. We keep in close contact with UN agencies and our partners on the ground to ensure that DFID's humanitarian response fits the immediate needs of the most vulnerable.

Sudan: Asylum

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking to make aid available to refugees from Darfur in the Central African Republic. [143235]

Hilary Benn: Following the aerial attack on the southern Darfur town of Dafak in May, a total of 2,650 Sudanese refugees fled over the border to north-eastern Central African Republic. The United Nations humanitarian agencies have assessed the situation and have begun an airlift to deliver essential food, shelter and household items to those in need. This assistance is funded by the $100,000 from the UN's local Emergency Response Fund, to which DFID contributed £550,000 in April, in addition to the $6.4 million provided from the UN's global Central Emergency Response Fund (CERF) since 2006. DFID is the single largest donor to the CERF, providing $154 million since 2006.

DFID remains concerned about the deteriorating humanitarian situation in the Central African Republic, and the impact on refugees and other vulnerable people. In response, we have increased our humanitarian commitment to the country to £2 million in 2007.

Tanzania: Debts

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of the debt relief allocated to Tanzania by (a) the World Bank and (b) the African Development Bank has (i) been received by Tanzania and (ii) remains to be delivered in the latest period for which figures are available. [143743]

Hilary Benn: Tanzania completed the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative (HIPC) in 2001, receiving debt cancellation worth $861 million from the World Bank and $155 million from the African Development Bank. In 2006, Tanzania received a further $1,375 million of debt cancellation from the World Bank and $245 million from the African Development Bank under the Multilateral Debt Relief Initiative (MDRI). All figures are in 2005 Net Present Value (NPV) terms.

Tanzania's debt cancellation under HIPC and MDRI is irrevocable. Tanzania will not be required to make any payments on any debts disbursed by the World Bank before the end of 2003 and by the African Development Bank before the end of 2004. In their 2006 Status of HIPC and MDRI Implementation Report, the World Bank and IMF reported that $595 million of the debt cancellation at the World Bank and $102 million at the African Development Bank was yet to be delivered. The World Bank has advised us that this will be corrected in the 2007 report, which will show that all HIPC and MDRI debt cancellation for Tanzania and the other countries that have completed the HIPC Initiative has been delivered.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Clay

Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what tonnage of clay was (a) imported into the UK and (b) extracted in the UK for use in the construction industry in each quarter of (i) 2004, (ii) 2005, (iii) 2006 and (iv) 2007 to date; [143757]

(2) what tonnage of shale was extracted in the UK in each quarter of (a) 2004, (b) 2005, (c) 2006 and (d) 2007 to date. [143758]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 18 June 2007]: The Office for National Statistics publishes annual figures for Product Sales and Trade: Mining of Clays and Kaolin (PRA 14220). One table covers common clays and shales for construction use including for bricks, tiles, pipes, and cement but excluding bentonite (sodium and calcium smectite), attapulgite and sepiolite, fireclay, expanded clays, and kaolin and kaolinic clays; it does not separate clay from shale and while it provides annual figures for UK manufacturer sales, the most recent figure for volumes which has not been suppressed as disclosive was for 2003, namely 11.3 million tonnes, and in the same year there were UK manufacturer sales of fireclay of 0.5 million tonnes.

HM Revenue and Customs Overseas Trade Statistics give the following figures for imports of HS2508: clays, andalusite, kyanite and sillimanite whether or not calcined, mullite, chamotte or dinas earths (excluding kaolin and other kaolinic clays, and expanded clay):

Microgeneration

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the (a) rationing rules and (b) waiting times are for Government grants for householder solar heating and microgeneration schemes; and what steps he has taken (i) to increase financial allocations and (ii) to speed up processing times. [140181]

Malcolm Wicks: The Low Carbon Buildings Programme offers grants to householders for a range of microgeneration technologies including solar thermal hot water. There is no rationing of grants for any of the technologies supported, but we do have different grant levels with an overall cap of £2,500 per household.

The Chancellor announced in the Budget 2007 that an additional £6 million would be allocated to the household stream, taking the total available to £18.7 million. The scheme was then suspended so that we could work with key stakeholders to address operational issues encountered over recent months, and decide how to make best use of the new money.

Since the re-launch of the programme on 29 May, we have removed the cap on grants which means there are now no waiting times. Online applications are processed instantly, and paper applications are processed within five days in line with the terms and conditions of the programme.

Departments: Homeworking

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people in his Department have been allowed to work from home for part of the week in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on home working. [143877]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The information requested is not available as central records of instances of home working are not maintained. However, in the November 2006 Staff Survey, 246 staff (16 per cent.) reported that they had a regular home working arrangement (e.g. one day per week). In addition, 260 (18 per cent.) replied that they had access to occasional home working on request. 72 per cent. of respondents were satisfied with the Department's flexible working policies. 70 per cent. of all staff participated in the staff survey.

As part of policy on alternative and flexible working patterns, the Department is willing to consider home working arrangements where they are compatible with the work and business needs and with the skills and preferences of individual members of staff.

Departments: Manpower

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people granted (a) temporary part-time, (b) temporary full-time, (c) permanent part-time and (d) permanent full-time contracts of employment in his Department in each of the last three years were (i) male, (ii) female, (iii) registered disabled and (iv) aged 55 years or over. [143902]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The information requested in part (a) and (b), relating to temporary contracts is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Information on permanent staff recruited in each of the specified years is as follows:

Jim Fitzpatrick: Special advisers' involvement in party political matters is conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Code of Conduct for Special Advisers, including section 22 (iii), and the guidance issued by the Cabinet Secretary in December 2006 and May 2007, copies of which are in the Libraries of the House.

Jim Fitzpatrick: Central records indicate that no payments have been made to Peninsula Business Services in any of the last five financial years.

I have asked the chief executives of the executive agencies to respond directly to the hon. Member.

Further information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Drugs: Prices

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to publish the Government's response to the Office of Fair Trading report on the Pharmaceutical Price Regulations Scheme. [144048]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 19 June 2007]: Ministers are still considering the full implications of this important and complex report. Due to the need to assess all of the information provided by OFT, including detailed annexes published after the main report, the timing of the Government response has been delayed.

Electronic Equipment: Waste Disposal

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions his Department has held with electronic producers and product designers of electronic goods on the implementation of individual producer responsibility under article 8.2 of the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive. [143988]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government are committed to the principles of Individual Producer Responsibility (IPR) and ensuring that producers recognise the importance of design in the sustainability agenda and will continue to work with the business community on this issue.

As part of the WEEE system, the DTI will be establishing an independent WEEE Advisory Body to provide advice to Government on issues arising from the implementation of the WEEE Regulations and on how to encourage product design to assist with IPR. This will be one of the areas the DTI will ask them to address.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment his Department has made of the effect of the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive on product design. [143989]

Malcolm Wicks: The Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive encourage producers of electrical equipment to consider design of new products to facilitate environmentally sound treatment and reprocessing when equipment reaches its end of life.

The UK has addressed this issue through Regulation 59 of the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Regulations 2006 (SI 3289).

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions his Department has held with electronic producers on the implementation of the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive. [143990]

Malcolm Wicks: Regulations implementing the EU Waste Electrical and Electronic and Equipment (WEEE) Directive require producers to finance the treatment, recovery and environmentally sound disposal of WEEE. The Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Regulations 2006—were laid before the House on 12 December following extensive consultation with business, including a number of electronic producers.

Energy Supply

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his Department will consider the merits of publishing a low carbon milestone document to help Ofgem achieve its new role of analysing the long term energy outlook in order to address the concerns about security of supply as outlined in the recent Energy White Paper. [143865]

Malcolm Wicks: As set out in the Energy White Paper (paragraph 4.36) the new energy markets outlook is to be jointly managed by the Department of Trade and Industry and Ofgem and will provide energy market information relating to security of supply.

The Government's strategy to move towards a low carbon economy is also set out in the Energy White Paper, which explains how the domestic sector and planned new housing will play its part in meeting our climate change objectives. The Climate Change Bill will establish legally binding carbon budgets, and targets (or milestones) to help this country meet its commitment to tackle climate change.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many motorcycles manufactured in China of 50cc and under were imported into the UK in each of the last 12 months; and what their value was. [144320]

Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what tonnage of limestone was (a) imported into and (b) quarried in the UK in each quarter of (i) 2004, (ii) 2005, (iii) 2006 and (iv) 2007 to date. [143769]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 18 June 2007]: The Office for National Statistics publishes annual figures for Product Sales and Trade: Quarrying of Limestone, Gypsum and Chalk (excluding Uranium and Thorium Ores) in PRA 14120. However data on volumes of UK manufacturer sales of limestone are not available. UK manufacturer sales of crushed limestone aggregates are reported as part of crushed stone of a kind used for concrete aggregates, for roadstone and for other construction use excluding gravel, pebbles, shingle and flint in the ONS report Product Sales and Trade: Operation of Gravel and Sandpits in PRA 14210, but are not separated from many other aggregates.

HM Revenue and Customs Overseas Trade Statistics give the following figures for imports of CN25210000 limestone flux, limestone and other calcareous stone used for the manufacture of lime or cement, and of CN25171020 limestone, dolomite and other calcareous stone, broken or crushed for road metalling, railway or other ballast:

Mobile Phone Masts

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what advice the chief scientific adviser has provided in relation to mobile telephone masts. [143656]

Malcolm Wicks: To my knowledge, None.

In 2000, the Independent Expert Group on Mobile Phones chaired by Sir William Stewart undertook a comprehensive review of the scientific literature. It concluded that the "balance of evidence to date suggests that exposure to radiofrequency radiation below international guidelines does not cause adverse health effects to the general population" (www.iegmp.org.uk). A more recent report by the Health Protection Agency in 2004 on Mobile Phones and Health came to the same conclusion. This advice is available on the website of the Health Protection Agency

Nanotechnology

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what role he expects the Technology Strategy Board to play in nanotechnology research and knowledge transfer in the next 10 years. [143286]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government's 10-year Science and Innovation Investment Framework, published in July 2004, reaffirmed the commitment to support businesses investing in new and emerging technologies, such as nanotechnology. The delivery mechanism for this work is the Technology Strategy Board, comprising mainly experienced business leaders, which will identify the new and emerging technologies critical to the growth of the UK economy into which Government funding and activities can be directed.

Over the period 2005-08, £320 million is available to businesses in the form of grants to support research and development through the Technology Strategy Board.

This includes over £100 million already invested in nanotechnology on collaborative R and D and a network of development facilities. A new nanotechnology knowledge transfer network was established in May 2007 to take forward the work of the Micro and Nanotechnology Network. Future decisions on technology and funding priorities will lie with the new TSB.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps (a) to ensure that nanotechnology research activities receive long-term large grant support sufficient to enable sustained work to be carried out in the area and (b) to protect the existing UK research base. [143287]

Malcolm Wicks: The research councils provide funding in responsive mode for research including nanotechnology related activities. This is a flexible mechanism and can support larger longer term grants where this is appropriate. This will, by stimulating competition, ensure that the councils continue to support a healthy research base in the UK.

The Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council (EPSRC) is implementing a programme in nanoscience through engineering to application, in order to build on the platform of earlier investments and to realise the benefits of the technology for society and the economy. Key features will be:

strong partnership with the Technology Strategy Board (TSB) to achieve pull-through to a range of sectors;

the participation of science and techpology facilities council (STFC) and other research councils where relevant;

a grand challenge approach to identify the highest impact research areas; leadership and co-ordination by a senior strategy advisor from the community.

Over £100 million has already been invested in nanotechnology by the Technology Strategy Board over the period 2005-2008.

National Institute for Medical Research

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what consultations have taken place with Camden council on the future location of the National Institute for Medical Research. [143067]

Malcolm Wicks: The National Institute for Medical Research (NIMR) is a wholly owned institute of the Medical Research Council (MRC).

The MRC has met Camden council on three occasions relating to the fixture location of the NIMR.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects a final decision to be made on the future location of the National Institute for Medical Research. [143068]

Malcolm Wicks: The national Institute for Medical Research (NIMR) is a wholly owned institute of the Medical Research Council (MRC). The Medical Research Council is currently preparing a detailed business case for the relocation of the NIMR to central London.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what planning barriers exist to development of the Mill Hill site of the National Institute for Medical Research. [143069]

Malcolm Wicks: The National Institute for Medical Research (NIMR) is a wholly owned institute of the Medical Research Council (MRC).

The Mill Hill site of the NIMR is in a conservation area.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what consultations have been held with the British Library on the proposed move of the National Institute for Medical Research to the site near the British Library. [143070]

Malcolm Wicks: The National Institute for Medical Research (NIMR) is a wholly owned institute of the Medical Research Council (MRC).

The MRC has not consulted the British Library about the relocation of the NIMR to a site near to the British Library.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what factors were taken into account in deciding not to move the National Institute for Medical Research to the Temperance Hospital site. [143072]

Malcolm Wicks: The National Institute for Medical Research (NIMR) is a wholly owned institute of the Medical Research Council (MRC).

The MRC has not taken a final decision on the preferred site for the NIMR.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what the purchase price was for the Temperance hospital site intended as the new centre for the National Institute for Medical Research; [143073]

(2) how much has been spent on the process of purchasing and considering the development of the Temperance hospital site in Camden for the future location of the National Institute for Medical Research, excluding the direct purchase price of the site. [143105]

Malcolm Wicks: The National Institute for Medical Research (NIMR) is a wholly owned institute of the Medical Research Council (MRC). The MRC paid £28 million for the National Temperance hospital site and has spent an additional £0.8 million on development costs.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what consultations have taken place with National Institute for Medical Research staff on the decision not to move to the Temperance hospital site and to consider relocation to the British Library site; [143074]

(2) what planning and development restrictions apply to building on the British Library site intended as the future home for the National Institute for Medical Research. [143076]

Malcolm Wicks: The National Institute for Medical Research (NIMR) is a wholly owned institute of the Medical Research Council (MRC).

The interim Director of NIMR 'Sir Keith Peters' communicates regularly with NIMR staff about the development of a business case including the option of relocating NIMR to the National Temperance hospital site, as well as work to determine the feasibility of relocation to a larger site adjacent to the British Library. No decision has been made.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the current estimate is of the cost of relocating the National Institute for Medical Research from Mill Hill to Central London. [143075]

Malcolm Wicks: The National Institute for Medical Research (NIMR) is a wholly owned institute of the Medical Research Council (MRC).

The MRC is currently preparing a detailed business case for the relocation of the NIMR to central London. This will address the cost of various options.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate has been made of the area that would be available to the National Institute for Medical Research at the British Library site in light of the other organisations intended to be accommodated there. [143082]

Malcolm Wicks: The site adjacent to the British Library is approximately 3.5 acres of which about one third could be made available to NIMR.

Nuclear Decommissioning Authority: Finance

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what effect he expects the planned change in the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority's budget for 2007-08 and beyond to have on the release of decontaminated land for development at Harwell. [142652]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 14 June 2007]: The NDA's annual plan for 2007 sets out their proposals for cleanup at Harwell. And the NDA's budget for 2007-08 has been set. It is for the NDA, in discussion with the site, to prioritise cleanup in light of available funding. The NDA budget for 2008-09 and beyond is part of the CSR discussions which are in train.

Nuclear Power Stations: Decommissioning

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what effect he expects the reduction in the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority's budget for (a) 2007-08 and (b) the following three years to have on the timescales for decommissioning nuclear sites. [143337]

Malcolm Wicks: There has been no reduction in funding for the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA). The settlement for 2007-08 enables the NDA to operate a programme budget of some £2.47 billion, giving the NDA and its contractors the certainty they need without impacting on the planned programme of nuclear clean up work. The NDA's funding in respect of the Comprehensive Spending Review period (2008-09 to 2010-11) is under discussion and will be settled in the autumn.

Parental Leave

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he plans to table regulations to provide for additional paternity leave under section 3 of the Work and Families Act 2006; and if he will make a statement. [136530]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Government have made a commitment to introduce additional paternity leave and additional statutory paternity pay, which will give additional flexibility to families to make their own choice as to which parent is best placed to take the second six months of leave, before the end of this Parliament. A formal date for introduction is still to be decided, but it is intended to be brought in alongside the extension of statutory maternity pay, maternity allowance and statutory adoption pay from 39 weeks to 52 weeks. This will give families the choice for the first time on the best arrangements for their family when having a baby.

Political Funds

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate the Certification Office has made of the total revenue collected from political fund contributions by union members in the most recent year for which figures are available, broken down by each trade union. [142181]

Malcolm Wicks: This information is included within the annual returns of those trade unions with political funds. Their latest annual returns have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Post Office Card Account: Successor

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the written statement of 17 May 2007, Official Report, column 52WS, on the Post Office card account (successor), what his estimate is of the number of post office branches which will be operating in 2010; and what effect he expects the size of the personal teller network for the successor to the Post Office card account announced in his statement to have on the number of branches operating at that time. [139099]

Mr. Darling: The Government have announced a commitment to provide up to £1.7 billion in support of the post office network, on top of the £2 billion made available since 1999, together with policies aimed at creating a stable network following a managed programme of no more than 2,500 compensated closures by the end of 2008.

The number of post office outlets operating in 2010 will be dependent on a range of factors, including Post Office Ltd's efforts to introduce new financial services products and drive efficiencies within the business. The Department for Work and Pensions has announced that it requires in the region of 10,000 outlets to deliver the successor to the Post Office card account. There is no direct link between this number and the future number of post offices, but given the size of their network, Post Office Ltd should be in a position to make a strong bid.

Post Offices

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will undertake an analysis of the accessibility arrangements for Crown Post Offices transferred to branches of WH Smith in (a) England and (b) Worcestershire; and if he will make a statement. [138699]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Decisions on the management and location of individual post offices are operational issues for POL. The company is committed to local consultation on the service implications where Crown post offices are transferred to the management of a franchise partner, including WH Smith. In particular views are invited on access arrangements and facilities and WH Smith are committed to ensuring that customers continue to have access to Post Office services. The location of the new Post Offices within WH Smith stores will be fully compliant with the Disability Discrimination Act (DDA).

Post Offices: Cash Dispensing

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans the Post Office has to install a free cash machine in the Walker Post Office in east Newcastle upon Tyne. [143731]

Jim Fitzpatrick: This is an operational matter for which the management of Post Office Ltd. (POL) have direct responsibility. I understand that this branch currently has a fee paying ATM. The site has been assessed by POL and their venture partner the Bank of Ireland and this is a site where they want to place an external free to use ATM.

I also understand that the subpostmaster has been sent the contract and terms and conditions, and POL are currently waiting for them to return the signed paperwork.

Research: Tax Credits

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had on research and development tax credits and their potential extension to include money spent on the design process itself. [144038]

Malcolm Wicks: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has had no recent discussions on this subject. Research and development (R&D) tax credits are already available for qualifying costs of R&D, as defined under the DTI's guidelines of 5 March 2004. The Department has sought to make clear the scope of coverage of the guidelines, both in awareness-raising literature published last November (prepared in consultation with HM Treasury and HMRC) and during direct contacts with industry during the normal course of our work.

R&D takes place where an activity seeks to achieve an advance in science or technology through the resolution of scientific or technological uncertainty. Design can be R&D and when it is, R&D tax credits are available.

Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors: Females

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors on the number of women on the Institute's governing body. [140684]

Margaret Hodge: The Department has not held any discussions with the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors on this subject.

Technology: Expenditure

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of the Technology Programme budget announced in the 2006 Budget has been allocated; to whom; and in which sectors. [143264]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is as follows.

The spring 2007 competition is currently under way and has allocated funds across the following areas:

	£ million
Smart, Bioactive and Nanostructure Materials for Health	7
Plastic Electronics: Materials Processing and Systems Integration	5
Lightweight Materials and Structures	15
Design Engineering and Advanced Manufacturing	40
Oil and Gas Technologies	5
Low Carbon Energy Technologies	10
Networked Enterprise	8

There was no Budget announcement in 2006; however, since 2004 over eight collaborative research and development competitions have been held and the Technology Programme has allocated £438 million to 620 projects in the following technology priority areas:

Environmentally Friendly Transport

Bio Science and Healthcare

Advanced Materials and Micro/Nano Technology

Sensors, Displays and Imaging and Optoelectronics

ICT

Validation of Complex Systems

Zero (Carbon) Emissions Enterprises

Waste reduction and Sustainable Production and Consumption

This can be broadly recast (by number of projects) across the following sectors:

	Percentage
Advanced Materials (including Micro and Nanotechnology)	21
Bioscience and Healthcare	9
Design Engineering and Advanced Manufacturing	17
Electronics and Photonics	16
Emerging Energy Technologies	15
Information and Communications Technology	6
Sustainable Production and Consumption	16

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Lottery Funding

4. Mr. David Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what recent representations she has received on the impact of lottery funding for voluntary sector organisations of the 2012 Olympics. [143854]

5. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what recent representations she has received on the impact of lottery funding for voluntary sector organisations of the 2012 Olympics. [143855]

Edward Miliband: In the run-up to the Olympics decision, I received many representations from third sector organisations seeking assurances that money for the sector from the Big Lottery Fund would be protected.

As confirmed by the BLF, the additional funding to the Olympics announced on 15 March will come from money that would have gone to statutory programmes, not money set aside for the voluntary sector, and as the Chairman Sir Clive Booth said at the time:

"I am pleased that we will be able to protect existing programmes and the money earmarked for the third sector."

8. Tom Brake: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment she has made of the impact on third sector organisations of the diversion of lottery funding towards the 2012 Olympics. [143860]

Edward Miliband: As confirmed by the BLF, the additional funding to the Olympics announced on 15 March, will come from money that would have gone to statutory programmes, not money set aside for the voluntary sector. The other distributors contributing to the Olympics have said they do not expect existing commitments to be affected and will make specific announcements about future programmes in due course.

Charitable Status

6. Martin Horwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the implementation of the public benefit test for charitable status. [143857]

Edward Miliband: The Charities Act provides a robust and flexible framework for the Charity Commission, as an independent regulator of charities in England and Wales, to properly take forward the public benefit test. The Commission has recently completed consulting on its draft public benefit guidance, and will publish a response before the relevant provisions of the Charities Act come into force early next year.

Whitehall Departments

7. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what recent steps she has taken to improve the effectiveness of Whitehall Departments in formulating policy and delivering the Government's objectives. [143858]

Hilary Armstrong: Our main current initiative is the programme of Capability Reviews. This has now covered almost all Government Departments. The reviews are identifying the actions needed to improve their capability and performance including devising and delivering policies.

Civil Servants: Recruitment

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what proportion of senior civil servants are (a) from black or ethnic minority backgrounds and (b) women; [143734]

(2) what steps her Department is taking to improve representation of (a) black and ethnic minority groups and (b) women in the senior Civil Service; and what assessment she has made of (i) the effectiveness of those initiatives and (ii) levels of awareness of them among (A) potential recruits and (B) existing civil servants; [143735]

(3) what steps have been taken to ensure that aptitude and personality tests used in recruitment to the Civil Service are not biased against (a) people from black or ethnic minority backgrounds and (b) women. [143736]

Hilary Armstrong: The October 2006 senior civil service (SCS) statistics show that there were:

(a) 118 (3.2 per cent.) black or ethnic minority staff in the SCS; and

(b) 1288 (31.25 per cent.) women in the SCS, of those 249 (26.8 per cent.) were in topmanagement posts (i.e. at Director level or above).

The Cabinet Office launched the Civil Service wide diversity 10-Point Plan in November 2005, which is a robust and pro-active framework aimed at increasing representation of women, disabled people and BME staff at senior levels. A review of departmental progress against the 10-Point Plan has recently been conducted and further interventions/actions have been agreed to help accelerate progress towards further supporting and encouraging existing civil servants as well as attracting potential new recruits.

While departments are responsible for their individual recruitment practices, the 10 Point Plan, launched in November 2005, makes it clear that they should ensure recruitment practices are free from cultural bias in assessment processes.

For the Civil Service Fast Stream, which the Cabinet Office manages on behalf of the Civil Service, there are two key steps taken to counter unfair bias. These are:

(i) limiting the weight of any one selection method in the process (personality tests are not used); and (ii) subsequently evaluating these assessment methods for potential bias on an on-going and annual basis.

Child Maintenance

Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what recent discussions she has had with the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on the effect of tougher enforcement of debt collection, as proposed in the Child Maintenance and Other Payments Bill, on socially excluded groups with low levels of financial literacy. [143871]

Hilary Armstrong: I have regular discussions with ministerial colleagues at the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP). The Social Exclusion Task Force works closely with DWP and the Treasury (HMT) on many of initiatives to tackle social and financial exclusion.

Departments: Internet

Margaret Moran: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what measures she is taking to ensure that online feedback is integral to the transformational Government agenda. [143856]

Mr. McFadden: Designing public services around the needs of citizens and businesses is at the heart of the transformational Government agenda. Hundreds of thousands of people are discussing public services and public policy issues online. The Government has received a report from Tom Steinberg and Ed Mayo on the power of this information, especially for improving public services. The report has today been placed in the House Libraries. The Government hope to respond to the report in the near future.

Policy Review

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether the Government's policy review process is complete. [144607]

Hilary Armstrong: The policy review has now concluded and outputs from the process are available on the Cabinet Office website (http://www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/policy_review/index.asp).

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Northern Midlands Coalfields

14. Natascha Engel: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on progress on the regeneration of the Northern Midlands coalfields. [143846]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I am very proud of the progress that has been made over the past 10 years revitalising the former English coalfields, including those of the Northern Midlands. When we came into power in 1997, these communities had suffered and been ignored for years.

It was desperately important to raise aspirations in these communities through regeneration, education and job creation.

English Partnership's Coalfield Programme, the Coalfields Regeneration Trust and the Coalfields Enterprise Fund are delivering real change with combined budgets of over half a billion pounds.

I would like to pay tribute to three people who have been instrumental in bringing the coalfield communities back to life—Paula Hay-Plumb of English Partnerships, Peter McNestry of the Coalfield Regeneration Trust, and Bill Flanagan of the Coalfield Communities Campaign.

There are now thousands more jobs, improved housing and better education.

These communities are being brought back to life, and I am proud of what we have achieved.

Congestion Charging

15. Ms Angela C. Smith: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent discussions he has had with Cabinet colleagues on the co-ordination of Government policy on congestion charging and the urban environment; and if he will make a statement. [143847]

The Deputy Prime Minister: Over the past 10 years, this Government have spent £128 billion on transport. After 18 years of neglect, 10 years of investment mean we now have more people travelling on public transport.

Despite this, car use still continues to grow. It is not a new problem, but it has a different form from 1997—with 10 years of unprecedented economic growth, many families now have two and often three cars. Between 1997 and 2006, the number of vehicles on our roads has increased from 27 million to 33 million.

This is why we have introduced the draft Local Transport Bill. It proposes a package of measures to further empower interested local authorities to take local action to address local congestion. It also includes important measures to deliver further improvements in public transport, especially bus services.

This approach builds on our existing action to tackle the problem of congestion. For example, in the Greater London Authority Act 1999 and Transport Act 2000, we brought in the controversial legislation to allow congestion charging, which Mayor Ken Livingstone then introduced. Over the period of the scheme, it has achieved:

Congestion down by 21 per cent.

Traffic volumes down 20 per cent.

And over £300 million raised to be re-invested into London's public transport network

We are placing buses at the heart of our transport agenda, to reverse the previous 'deregulation' in 1985 which did so much to damage public transport across the country.

European Constitutional Treaty

16. Mark Pritchard: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent discussions he has held to co-ordinate Government policy on the European constitutional treaty. [143848]

The Deputy Prime Minister: Government policy on European Union matters is co-ordinated through the Joint Ministerial Committee on Europe (JMC(E)) and the European Policy Cabinet Committee. I am a member of both committees, which are chaired by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary.

Significant European Council agenda items are also routinely discussed at Cabinet meetings.

Sustainable Cities

17. Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions he has had with his counterparts in China on co-operation on the sustainable development of cities. [143849]

The Deputy Prime Minister: In April 2007 I met with State Councillor Tang and Premier Wen in Beijing. I put to the Chinese leadership a proposal on strengthening co-operation between the UK and China in the field of sustainability, particularly sustainable cities.

In addition, I recently highlighted the potential for sustainable city cooperation between the UK and China to Vice Foreign Minister Dai Bingguo, Construction Minister Qiu Baoxing, and Jiangsu Party Secretary Li Yuanchao during their respective visits to the UK.

Sustainable development has been an important focus of the China taskforce which I have chaired since 2003 at the request of the Prime Minister. The Chinese are keen to step up exchanges with the UK to help them develop sustainable communities and see both the Thames Gateway, and the UK designed Eco-City at Dongtan as key examples.

New Town Regeneration

18. Rosie Cooper: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on progress on the regeneration of new towns, with particular reference to Skelmersdale. [143850]

The Deputy Prime Minister: Since 1997, the Government have made regeneration and renewal a priority, investing more than £20 billion in our towns and cities. There has been considerable progress in Skelmersdale including a major redevelopment of the town centre and the area is also benefiting from £3.7 million in safer stronger communities funding.

Schools Policy

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent discussions he has had with Cabinet colleagues on schools policy. [143844]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The Cabinet Committee on Schools Policy has the remit to discuss and develop policies to improve schools and to monitor progress.

Since 1997 this Government have worked tirelessly to drive up standards in schools, giving parents more choice and young people a better start in life.

Thanks to our programme of sustained investment coupled with reform, we have seen unprecedented improvements:

Over 35,000 extra teachers
Over 172,000 extra support staff
Smaller classes
Best ever exam results
Doubling spending per pupil

And in 15 years time, every school in the country will be thoroughly modernised.

That's a record to be proud of—and I'm proud to have been a part of the Government that has delivered it.

JUSTICE

Prison Service

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice pursuant to the answer of 5 June 2007, Official Report, column 384W, on the Prison Service, on what date Nick Pascoe took over responsibility for the commissioning of Ron Tasker's investigation from Keith Munns; and if she will make a statement. [143552]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It is not possible to state the precise date on which the current Area Manager for London took over as commissioning officer. He took over following a conversation with the Deputy Director General. This conversation took place after 1 February 2007.

Administration of Justice: Crown Dependencies

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how much has been allocated by the Ministry of Justice for the judicial systems in Crown dependencies. [141791]

Ms Harman: No provision has been allocated for this purpose. The Crown dependencies (the Isle of Man and the Bailiwicks of Jersey and Guernsey) are self-governing dependencies of the Crown, and as such, they have their own directly elected legislative assemblies, administrative and fiscal systems and courts of law. It is for the Government of each Crown dependency to make such provision for its judicial system as it considers appropriate.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what plans she has to meet representatives of the government of (a) the Isle of Man, (b) Guernsey and (c) Jersey. [141803]

Ms Harman: There are no current plans, but Ministers meet representatives of the governments of the Crown Dependencies whenever it is appropriate to do so.

Coroners

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice if she will take steps to allow co-habiting partners to (a) identify bodies of their partner and (b) receive information relating to the inquest in a situation where a spouse is still alive; and if she will make a statement. [142078]

Ms Harman: In cases where the identification of a body is supervised by the coroner's office, Rule 20 of the Coroners Rules 1984 includes in the definition of a properly interested person the spouse or civil law partner of the deceased as well as anyone who in the coroner's opinion is a properly interested person. It is within the coroner's discretion whether a co-habiting partner should be treated as a properly interested person for the purpose of an inquest and hence may identify the body of his or her partner.

Councillors

Michael Gove: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what guidance (a) her Department and (b) the Information Commissioner has produced on the requirements on councillors to register under the Data Protection Act 1998 when acting in their capacity as a representative of the residents of their ward. [143660]

Vera Baird: My Department has not issued any guidance on this issue.

The Information Commissioner's Office published updated guidance on 17 May 2007 which included advice to elected and prospective members of local authorities on how registration under the Data Protection Act 1998 applies to them. The guidance can be found on the Commissioner's website at http://www.ico.gov.uk/upload/documents/library/data_protection/practical_application/advice_elected_and_prospective_members_local_authorities.pdf.

Court Service: Maladministration

Mr. Bone: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what estimate she has made of the number of administrative errors made by the Court Service in the last 12 months. [143405]

Ms Harman: Data held by Her Majesty's Courts Service show that 10,480 justified complaints relating to the administrative actions of the county, Crown and magistrates courts were recorded within the period June 2006-May 2007. This represents 64 per cent. of the total number of complaints recorded during the same period.

Just under two million civil claims were heard in the county courts, and Crown Court centres disposed of over 127,000 hearings or trials in the financial year 2006-2007. In 2006 the magistrates courts dealt with approximately 2.3 million defendants in criminal cases and 1.2 million civil applications.

Crime: Mentally Ill People

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what support is offered to mentally ill people who commit crimes. [143448]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The range of support provided to mentally ill people who commit crimes is set out in the Offender Mental Health Care Pathway (Department of Health, 2005). This outlines best practice in stages from police custody and court appearances through to prison and pre-release arrangements with community mental health teams. Copies have been placed in the Library. It is also available on the Department of Health website at:

http://www.dh.gov.uk/en/Publicationsandstatistics/Publications/PublicationsPolicyAndGuidance/DH_4102231

Under the Mental Health Act 1983 the courts have powers to assess mentally disordered offenders before sentencing and to divert them to receive specialist treatment in hospital rather than punishment. The police also have the power under the Act to remove a person who appears to be suffering from mental disorder to a place of safety. The Government plan to publish guidance this year to the NHS and partner agencies which supports the development of local diversion services by building on current best practice.

Beginning in 2003, and completing in April 2006, the national health service took over commissioning responsibility for all prison health services in public sector prisons. This was previously the responsibility of the Prison Service. One of the main reasons this transfer was made was to help ensure that prisoners had better access to mainstream health services.

Investment in prison mental health in-reach services has been steadily increasing, with nearly £20 million invested in these services each year since 2004-05, and 360 whole time equivalent staff employed—more than the initial commitment in the NHS Plan to create 300 posts. There are now teams in 102 prisons and their services are available to the entire prison estate.

People who are mentally too ill to remain in prison should be transferred to hospital. We have introduced tighter monitoring to identify prisoners waiting an unacceptably long period for transfer to hospital. A protocol was issued to prisons and primary care trusts in October 2005 setting out what must be done when a prisoner has been waiting for a hospital place for more than three months following acceptance by the national health service.

These measures have helped bring about positive results. In 2006, 33 per cent. more prisoners, with mental illness too severe for prison, were transferred to hospital than in 2002—up to 961 from 723. There has been a significant decrease in the number of people waiting over 12 weeks for a transfer—in the quarter ending March 2007, 40 prisoners were waiting, down from 51 in the same quarter in 2005.

The ACCT (Assessment, Care in Custody and teamwork) care planning process for prisoners in danger of self-harm or suicide has helped contribute to a reduction in the number of suicides in England and Wales. In 2006, these were down 14 per cent. —down to 67 cases, from 95 in 2004. This is the lowest figure since 1996.

Crime: Schools

Mr. Watson: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice (1) how many police officer hours were allocated to the safer schools scheme in each of the last three years; [143208]

(2) how many arrests there have been as a result of the introduction of the safer schools scheme. [143209]

Bridget Prentice: The collection of such data is done locally and is a matter for individual police forces.

Crown Dependencies

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what plans her Department has to improve communication between the Government and the Crown dependencies. [141804]

Ms Harman: The Ministry of Justice provides the official channel of communication between the United Kingdom Government and the Governments of the Crown dependencies. Communication arrangements are kept under continuous review and improvement is sought whenever possible.

Departments: Manpower

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many people are employed by her Department. [141792]

European Court of Human Rights: Legal Costs

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how much was spent before October 2000 by the Government in defending cases brought by UK citizens in the European Court of Human Rights. [143437]

Vera Baird: As costs are paid by the lead department and not recorded centrally, the information requested could be collected only at disproportionate cost.

Housing: Prices

Michael Gove: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice if she will publish figures held by the Land Registry for the average price of a (a) domestic dwelling, (b) flat and (c) detached house in each local authority in England in (i) 1997, (ii) 2000 and (iii) the latest period for which figures are available. [143659]

Vera Baird: The data have been placed in the Libraries of the House and contain information collected by Land Registry for the average price of a domestic dwelling (including semi-detached and terraced), flat and detached house in each local authority area in England and Wales in (i) 1997, (ii) 2000 and (iii) the latest period, covering January to March 2007.

Judgments: Debts

Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice whether any restrictions are placed on the sale of data relating to court judgments by debt consolidation businesses and debt advice agencies. [141666]

Ms Harman: No restrictions are placed on the sale of data relating to court judgments by debt consolidation and debt advice agencies. In 2006, the Register of Judgments Orders and Fines Regulations 2005 came into force. The regulations provide powers to the Registrar of the Register to refuse access to the Register to any person whom he suspects of using the data for unlawful purposes or in breach of any of the data protection principles as set out in the Data Protection Act 1998.

Legislation: Channel Islands and Isle of Man

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many Bills originating in (a) Guernsey, (b) the Isle of Man and (c) Jersey were granted Royal Assent in each year since 1997. [141794]

Ms Harman: The Ministry of Justice does not hold figures for Crown Dependencies legislation receiving Royal Assent prior to 2001.

The figures from February 2001 to May 2007 are as follows:

Table of Crown Dependency legislation receiving Royal Assent 2001-07

	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	To May 2007	Total

Legislation: Guernsey

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many Bills were considered for extension to Guernsey in each year since 1997. [141800]

Ms Harman: The Ministry of Justice does not hold all of the information requested. However, our departmental records show that the Ministry of Justice and before it the Department of Constitutional Affairs has written to the Guernsey authorities on behalf of legislating UK Government Departments on 20 occasions since 1997 where extending a Bill to Guernsey has been considered: on eight occasions in 2004; five occasions in 2005; six occasions in 2006 and once so far in 2007.

Legislation: Isle of Man

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what Bills concerning transport were considered for extension to the Isle of Man in 2006. [141802]

Ms Harman: No Bills concerning transport where there was consideration of extension to the Isle of Man came to the Ministry of Justice (formerly the Department for Constitutional Affairs) during 2006.

Members: Correspondence

Mr. Baron: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice pursuant to the Answer of 30 April 2007, Official Report, column 1454W, on members: correspondence, when she expects to provide a substantive reply to the Question; and what the reason is for the delay. [143614]

Vera Baird: I have now written to the hon. Member disclosing the list of highest paid barristers from the Community Legal Service (CLS) during 2005-06.

Elizabeth Gumbel Q.C.	493,000
Jeremy Rosenblatt	492,000
Sally Bradley Q.C.	422,000
Stephen Knafler	401,000
Anthony Hayden Q.C.	377,000
Paul Storey Q.C.	373,000
Eleanor Hamilton Q.C.	371,000
John Godfrey	371,000
Michael Keehan	312,000
Marcus Scott-Manderson	306,000

These figures must be interpreted carefully and do not represent the personal earnings of the individuals listed in any one year. There are a number of reasons for this.

1. The amounts paid to each barrister listed represent payments for work covering many years, for a variety of cases. The amount an individual receives in any year fluctuates widely, and is to a large extent due to the variety of payment processes and schemes used by the Legal Services Commission and the Courts.

2. All the figures listed are inclusive of VAT (17.5 per cent.) as paid, and disbursements incurred (e.g. travelling). Individuals must pay that VAT to HM Revenue and Customs.

3. Barristers pay a percentage of their fees towards professional overheads. Additionally, barristers face the same expenses as any other self employed person, including income tax and National Insurance contributions.

A number of other qualifications need to be added to these figures.

1. Payments are made after claims are carefully scrutinised by the Legal Services Commission or the Courts, and where necessary adjusted. The Legal Services Commission and the Courts may make payments many years after cases conclude.

2. While these figures represent gross payments actually made to the barristers during the year, some of those monies have been (or may in the future be) repaid to the Community Legal Service Fund by other parties. This will happen in cases where the legally aided party wins the case and recovers costs from the opponent. Once those costs are recovered the legally aided party's solicitor refunds some or all of the money to the CLS Fund. As a consequence the figures may not reflect the actual cost of the barristers' fees to the Fund. In some cases where costs are recovered from the losing party the actual cost to the CLS Fund may be very little or even nothing.

3. Not all payments could be verified with all the individuals concerned. Cases in dispute, where amounts listed as being paid to individual barristers were identified from records held by the Department and the Legal Services Commission, and the practitioner has no such record, have been included. Where possible, amounts have been verified by practitioners and adjusted where necessary.

Prison Service: Managers

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice which members of HM Prison Service Management Board have close relations in senior management positions within the service; what senior management position is held in each case; what the relationship is with the Management Board member in each case; and if she will make a statement. [143416]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Governor of HMP Nottingham is the son of the Director General.

Prisoners: Females

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many women (a) are being held in UK prisons and (b) were being held in each year since 2000. [141412]

Mr. Sutcliffe [pursuant to the reply, 11 June 2007, Official Report, c. 888W]: I erroneously informed my right hon. Friend that the number of female prisoners at 30 April this year was 4,502. The figure should in fact have read 4,370.

The reason for the error is that the final figure included categories not consistent with the rest of the figures.

Prisons: Smoking

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what assessment she has made of the likely impact on the number of fire incidents across the prison estate of (a) Prison Service Instruction 09/2007 and (b) a complete ban on smoking within prisons; and if she will make a statement. [142872]

Mr. Sutcliffe: On average there are about 1,000 fire incidents each year in prison but too little time has elapsed since PSI 9/2007 came into force for any assessment to be made on the impact of the PSI.

Probation: Manpower

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many trainee probation officers are expected to qualify in 2007-08, broken down by probation area; and how many in each area she expects will subsequently be offered a contract of employment. [140422]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The numbers of trainee probation officers due to qualify in 2007-08 are contained in the following table. The trainees will graduate at the end of September so it is too early to know precisely how many vacancies there will be at that stage. It is already clear, however, that a significant number of graduates will not be offered contracts of employment with their training probation areas. Every effort will be made to re-deploy displaced graduates across the country because some employers are likely to have excess vacancies, but it is clear that not all graduates will be placed upon graduation.

Probation Officers: Training

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what the average total cost was of training a probation officer in the latest period for which figures are available. [140423]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The average total cost of training a probation officer is approximately £74,102. This figure includes the trainee's salary cost, related pension contribution and university administration cost and is calculated over a two year period.

Public Appointments: Crown Dependencies

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what steps her Department is taking to ensure greater transparency in the recommendation of Crown appointments to the dependencies. [141801]

Ms Harman: Crown appointments to the Crown Dependencies are made by the Queen on the recommendation of the Lord Chancellor. Every effort is made to ensure that the process is transparent.

Regional Government: Freedom of Information

Michael Gove: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice if she will take steps to ensure that regional assemblies are classed as public authorities under the Freedom of Information Act 2000. [143658]

Vera Baird: Organisations such as regional assemblies will be considered in the context of any review of extending the coverage of the Freedom of Information Act. We have no plans to review the coverage of the Act at present.

Sentencing: Appeals

Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many and what percentage of sentences were taken to appeal by (a) the Attorney-General and (b) the convicted person in each of the last five years. [142707]

Ms Harman: The following table shows, for each of the last five years, the number and percentage[2] of applications regarding sentence received by the Court of Appeal Criminal Division (a) upon referral by the Attorney-General and (b) upon lodgement by the convicted person. Figures regarding appeals against sentence by persons convicted in the magistrates court are not collected centrally and cannot be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Small Claims: Legal Representation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice (1) in how many and what proportion of cases heard by small claims courts claimants had legal representation in each year since 1990; [141455]

(2) what average payment has been made to successful claimants in cases heard by small claims courts where the claimant (a) had and (b) did not have legal representation in each year since 1990; [141456]

(3) what the average time taken from allocation to hearing for small claims was in each county court in Essex in 2006. [141458]

Ms Harman: Detailed information concerning small claims was not collected centrally until 1996. Figures relating to legal representation, average awards and average waiting time for the years since 1996 are provided in the following tables.

	Legal representation			Monetary award (£)
	Yes	No	Percentage legally represented	Legally represented	Not legally represented

Notes:

1. The figures relate only to those cases allocated to the small claims track with a claim value of £5,000 or less.
2. The data is collected from 29 selected county courts by way of a sample exercise conducted every February, July and October.

Supreme Court: Costs

Mrs. May: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what the total estimated cost is of the establishment of the Supreme Court; and how much is expected to be spent on (a) design, (b) building work and (c) financial management. [143703]

Ms Harman: As announced on 14 June 2007, the estimated set-up costs for establishing a Supreme Court are £56.9 million. The building work will cost £36.7 million, which will be paid for by an annual lease charge of £2.1 million over 30 years. Both these amounts are within original estimates. The additional £20.2 million covers professional adviser fees, programme team costs, furniture, IT services and library costs. Of that £20.2 million, £2.6 million is design costs associated with the renovation of the UK Supreme Court.

The set-up costs of the Supreme Court will be met through the Ministry's allocated budget.

Wandsworth Prison

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice (1) why the head of residence at HM Prison Wandsworth was removed from her post in September 2004; and if she will make a statement; [143413]

(2) why an acting 'F' grade governor at HM Prison Wandsworth was removed from his post in September 2004; and if she will make a statement. [143414]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It is not Prison Service policy to discuss information relating to individual members of staff. As the hon. Member is aware the subject matter of these questions is covered by an ongoing enquiry.

Wormwood Scrubs: Pay

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice on what basis the post of Head of Personnel at HM Prison Wormwood Scrubs is entitled to receive the required hours allowance; and if she will make a statement. [143410]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Prison Service policy is that only managers in paybands E, F and G will receive required hours addition (RHA) allowance. The post of Head of Personnel at HMP Wormwood Scrubs has recently been incorporated within the HR Business Partner role, and is graded at senior manager, payband D. This post does not attract the payment of RHA.

Youth Justice: Crown Dependencies

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what plans she has to improve youth justice in the Crown dependencies. [141790]

Ms Harman: None. The Crown dependencies (the Isle of Man and the Bailiwicks of Jersey and Guernsey) are self-governing dependencies of the Crown with their own directly elected legislative assemblies, administrative and fiscal systems and courts of law, and each is responsible for its own system of youth justice.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Apprenticeships

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the success rates are for the complete framework of (a) further education, (b) adult and community learning, (c) school sixth forms and (d) work-based learning for (i) post-16, (ii) 16 to 18 and (iii) over 18-year-olds for Levels 1 to 3 qualifications for each year between 2000 and 2006. [111381]

Learner data for school sixth forms are currently not collected on the LSC's ILR, so success rates can not be calculated. However, statisticians in the Department and the LSC are working to collect data which will enable the calculation of these success rates; a date for publication has not yet been agreed.

Success rates are not calculated for ACL.

Bichard Inquiry

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what progress he has made in implementing the recommendations of the Bichard inquiry; and if he will make a statement. [143322]

Mr. McNulty: I have been asked to reply.

As the Home Office is coordinating the implementation programme for the Bichard Inquiry's recommendations. I refer the hon. Member to my written statement of 22 May 2007, which accompanied publication of the Government's 4th Progress Report.

As we reported, good progress has been made in implementing Sir Michael's Bichard's Recommendations. 21 of the 31 Recommendations are now substantially delivered and the outstanding projects are going forward under agreed programmes of work to clear milestones.

Degrees: Admissions

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of students who had previously studied for (a) higher national diplomas and (b) foundation degrees went on to study honours degrees in each year since 1994-95. [138363]

Bill Rammell: The available information on higher national diploma (HND) qualifiers and foundation degree (FD) qualifiers who went on to study a first degree in the following academic year only is shown in the tables. The figures were derived from the destinations surveys, which collect information about the destinations of qualifiers six months after qualification. Figures for 2005/06 will be available next month.

The available information is limited to qualifiers who went on to study for a first degree in the year immediately following qualification: it does not cover those who chose to progress to a first degree at a later stage.

For a number of reasons, it is difficult to draw reliable conclusions about the trends in the numbers of FD qualifiers who went on to study for a first degree in the following academic year, compared to students who completed HNDs. FDs were only introduced in 2001/02 and until 2004/05 there were relatively low numbers of qualifiers, which makes the figures inherently more volatile. It is also important to note that FD qualifiers tend to be older than HND qualifiers. Older qualifiers are less likely to go on to study for a first degree in the year immediately following qualification, because they are often already employed and tend to have other financial and domestic commitments. They may therefore be more likely to proceed to further study at a later date.

In addition, the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) reported in their January 2007/03 (web only) report, Foundation Degrees Key Statistics 2001-02 to 2006-07, that some students on FDs who proceed to further study are reported as having qualified with an honours degree without having been reported as obtaining a FD degree, which has the effect of reducing the number of FD qualifiers who are recorded as having gone on to study for a first degree.

Departments: Data Protection

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many times his Department was found to have been in breach of the Data Protection Act 1998 in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [139210]

Mr. Dhanda: In the last five years, the Information Commissioner has considered my Department in breach of the Data Protection Act 1998 on two occasions, in 2003 and in 2005. In each case, remedial action was taken and the commissioner did not take matters further.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of staff in his Department are (a) male, (b) female, (c) registered disabled and (d) aged 55 or over. [143911]

Mr. Dhanda: The information is set out in the following table:

Aged 55 or over	12

Declaration of a disability is voluntary.

Education Maintenance Allowance

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of post-16 students in each local education authority area are in receipt of education maintenance allowance, broken down by those attending (a) grammar schools, (b) secondary modern schools, (c) comprehensive schools, (d) sixth form colleges and (e) further education colleges. [140448]

Bill Rammell [holding answer 4 June 2007]: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council, who operate the education maintenance allowance (EMA) for the DfES and hold the information about take-up and payments made under the scheme. Mark Haysom, the Council's Chief Executive, has written to the hon.

Member with the information requested and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Education Maintenance Allowance: Warrington

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students in Warrington claimed education maintenance allowance in each year since it was introduced, broken down by ward of residence. [141017]

Phil Hope: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council, who operate the Education Maintenance Allowance (EMA) for the DfES and hold the information about take-up and payments made under the scheme. Mark Haysom, the Council's Chief Executive, has written to my hon. Friend with the information requested and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 19 June 2007:

I am writing in response to your Parliamentary Question 141017 that asked; "How many students in Warrington claimed Education Maintenance Allowance in each year since it was introduced, broken down by ward of residence."

Information on the number of young people who have applied, enrolled and received Education Maintenance Allowance (EMA) is available at Local Authority Level, but not at Ward level. EMA take-up is defined as young people who have received one or more EMA payments in the academic year.

EMA take-up for Warrington Local Authority area during each academic year since inception is as follows:

	Number
2004/05	726
2005/06	1,332
2006/07	[1]1,666

[1] To end of May

EMA Take up data showing the number of young people who have received one or more EMA payments during 2004/05, 2005/06 and to date in 2006/07 is now also available on the LSC website, at the following address:

http://wwwlsc.gov.uk/providers/Data/statistics/learner/EMA_take_up.htm

I hope you find this information useful.

Extended Schools

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the Train to Gain level 3 pilots in the North West. [142435]

Phil Hope: The Level 3 trials are now operational in three LSC regions including the north west. Detailed operational information is not held centrally by the Department but it is collected by the Learning and Skills Council (LSC). Mark Haysom the LSC's Chief Executive has written to my hon. Friend and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 19 June 2007:

I have been asked by the Secretary of State for Education and Skills to respond to questions you posed regarding what evidence is collected on the performance of Train to Gain skills brokers, what assessment has been made of the satisfaction levels of those using such brokerage services, Level 3 Trials and any assessment that has been made in the north west.

Train to Gain: evidence collected on performance and satisfaction levels

The performance of Train to Gain skills brokers against set targets is monitored and reported on a monthly basis. Monthly management information evidence includes employer engagement, employer size, sector data; skills broker referral destinations; earner profile, and employer satisfaction with the service provided by skills brokers. Performance against these targets has been reported each month since April 2006 and the information is used to manage the skills brokerage contractors.

An independent survey of the skills brokerage service has been in place since the launch of Train to Gain to in April 2006. The survey measures employers' satisfaction levels with the independence, impartiality and responsiveness of the skills brokerage service. The current national satisfaction level with the service provided by skills brokerage organisations is 85.7 per cent.

Train to Gain: Level 3 Trials

The level 3 trials have been running in the region since August 2006. In the first six months of operation the Trials did not perform well, with negligible learners on programme As a consequence an early assessment of the Trials was carried out with providers within the region.

The assessment of the Trials resulted in the Department for Education and Skills and the Minister for Skills agreeing to allow the LSC to amend the policy. This has reduced policy conflicts that existed between mainstream further education and the trials.

The LSC spent the early part of 2007 working with providers and skills brokers to both re-contract and communicate the policy changes. The changes are now implemented and the leaner numbers in all trial regions are increasing steadily month on month.

Performance is still lower than we had anticipated but monitoring and further research is ongoing to ensure that issues relating to performance are understood.

General Certificate of Secondary Education

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of pupils gained five A* to C grades at GCSE including English and mathematics in schools with (a) fewer than 1,000 pupils, (b) 1,000 to 1,500 pupils and (c) more than 1,500 pupils in the latest period for which figures are available. [142503]

Jim Knight: The information requested is available in the 2006 Secondary School Achievement and Attainment Tables which are available in the House Library.

Hearing Impaired: Sign Language

Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what programmes are in place to assist those with impaired hearing to develop basic lip reading and sign language skills. [143052]

Mr. Dhanda: Lip reading and sign language courses are offered through LSC-funded further education provision and are funded in exactly the same way as other vocational courses. In the 2005/06 academic year, 20,607 learners enrolled on LSC-funded lip reading and sign language courses (20,092 on sign language courses and 515 on lip reading courses.)

The majority of the cost of learning is supported by public funds, but the learner is also expected to contribute to the cost of their learning, unless certain conditions apply: for example, learners on income-related benefits are eligible for fee remission, as are learners aged 16 to 18 years; and individual providers may choose to waive a full fee or charge a reduced fee. In 2004/05 lip reading classes were free to more than 80 per cent. of learners either as a result of national policy or at the discretion of the provider.

Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will classify the teaching of lip reading and sign language as a basic skill for those with impaired hearing. [143176]

Mr. Dhanda: We recognise the importance of lip reading and sign language for the deaf and hard of hearing. Lip reading and sign language are eligible for LSC funding but do not form part of the Government's "Skills for Life" definition of provision commonly referred to as 'basic skills' as they are not mapped to the national literacy and numeracy standards.

The majority of the cost of learning is supported by public funds, but the learner is also expected to contribute to the cost unless certain conditions apply: for example, learners on income-related benefits are eligible for fee remission, as are learners aged 16 to 18 years; and individual providers may choose to waive a full fee or charge a reduced fee. Some providers also have 'access funds' that they are able to make available to individuals to help with the costs of a course. In 2004/05 lip reading classes were free to more than 80 per cent. of learners either as a result of national policy or at the discretion of the provider.

Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people with impaired hearing in Copeland receive free basic skills training in lip reading and sign language. [143178]

Mr. Dhanda: In the 2005/06 academic year, 20,607 learners in England enrolled on LSC-funded lip reading and sign language courses (20,092 on sign language courses and 515 on lip reading courses.) In the Copeland constituency in the same period, 12 learners enrolled on sign language courses and none on lip reading courses. Of the 12 learners enrolled on sign language courses, none were recorded as having impaired hearing.

Higher Education: Admissions

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment his Department has made of the progress made towards meeting the target of 50 per cent. participation in higher education by 2010. [127772]

Bill Rammell: The PSA target is to increase participation in higher education towards 50 per cent. of those aged 18 to 30. The main measure for tracking progress on increasing participation is currently the higher education initial participation rate (HEIPR). This is the sum of the HE initial participation rates for individual ages between 17 and 30 inclusive. It covers English-domiciled first time entrants to HE courses, which are expected to last for at least six months, at UK higher education institutions and English further education colleges, and who remain on their course for at least six months. The latest available figures are shown in the table.

Higher education initial participation rate for 17 to 30-year-olds

	HEIPR (Percentage)	Number of initial participants
1999/2000	39 (39.3)	239,000
2000/01	40 (39.7)	239,000
2001/02	40 (40.2)	244,000
2002/03	41 (41.2)	255,000
2003/04	40 (40.3)	257,000
2004/05	41 (41.3)	268,000

Notes:
1. The HEIPR is usually published to the nearest integer, but the figures are included to one decimal place to inform comparisons over time.
2. Numbers are quoted to the nearest thousand.
Source:
"Methodological Revisions to the Higher Education Initial Participation Rate (HEIPR)", published by DfES.

These figures show that the higher education initial participation rate has increased by 2 percentage points between 1999/2000 and 2004/05, representing 29,000 additional initial participants over the period.

The HEIPR figure for 2005/06 was released in a Statistical First Release on 27 March 2007.

In the face of significant and ongoing growth in the key age-groups in the underlying population, further progress will be similarly challenging. Still, the funded places provided to the Higher Education Funding Council allow for some growth in the participation rate. In addition, demand for higher education remains strong. Figures from UCAS show that the number of applicants from England accepted onto UK higher education courses starting in 2005 increased by 8.9 per cent. in comparison to 2004 (301,798 in 2005 against 277,079 in 2004). In 2006, the number of accepted applicants from England fell by 4.2 per cent. compared to 2005, but this was still up by 4.4 per cent. compared to 2004. The latest figures for 2007 entry (showing the position as at mid-January, which normally represents around 75 per cent. of the final total) show there has been a large increase in applicants from England (up by 7.1 per cent. compared to 2006, and also slightly up by 2.4 per cent. compared to 2005). These figures suggest that more progress on this target is possible.

Truancy

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of half days were missed as a result of unauthorised absence in schools with (a) fewer than 1,000 pupils, (b) 1,000 to 1,500 pupils and (c) more than 1,500 pupils in the latest period for which figures are available. [142505]

Jim Knight: The information requested is available in the 2006 Achievement and Attainment Tables which are available in the House Libraries.

Vocational Education: Finance

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what support is available in addition to educational maintenance allowances for those 16-19 trainees who require assistance with accommodation and other living expenses. [139288]

Phil Hope: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council, who operate learner support schemes for 16 to 19-year-olds on behalf of the DfES. Mark Haysom, the Council's Chief Executive, has written to my hon. Friend with the information requested and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 11 June 2007:

I am writing in response to your recent Parliamentary Question that asked, "What support is available to those 16-19 trainees, in addition to Education Maintenance Allowances, who require assistance with accommodation and other living expenses?"

There are a number of other Learner Support Schemes from which a young person can access financial support. Aside from Education Maintenance Allowance; a young person may be eligible to receive financial assistance with accommodation and living expenses from the Residential Support Scheme and the Discretionary Learner Support Fund (DLSF).

The Further Education Residential Support Scheme enables learners to access education that is not available within reasonable daily travelling distance of the learner's home address. The scheme will pay for residential accommodation and can also help with the associated travelling costs of living away from home.

DLSF are available to students who are experiencing financial hardship. Unlike an EMA this is not a weekly allowance but it does provide financial help via a system of one-off payments for students with particular needs.

Funds are held locally and allocated on a discretionary basis. DLSFs can help with the costs of transport, childcare, residential lodgings and course related costs such as books, materials and equipment. It is also available for domestic emergencies. It does not have an income threshold but it is aimed, specifically, at those in greatest need; because of this it is usually income tested in some way.

Whilst the LSC provides LSF funding, it is administered by a young person's Learning Provider or Local Authorities (LAs). It is for these organisations to decide their own policies in respect of the distribution of DLSFs and to defend these policies locally. Learners should contact their Learning Provider to find out whether they are eligible.

I hope that you find this information addresses your question.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Arm's Length Management Organisation

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) how many local authorities have (a) completed and (b) are planning to complete a large scale voluntary transfer; and how many have (i) set up and (ii) are planning to set up an arm's length management organisation; [142350]

(2) how many local authorities which have not yet carried out a large scale voluntary transfer or set up an arm's length management organisation (ALMO) have chosen as their current preferred option for housing (a) retention, (b) transfer, (c) an ALMO, (d) a private finance initiative and (e) a mix of those options; and how many have no option formally signed off. [142351]

Yvette Cooper: The 354 district level and unitary authorities have undertaken or are undertaking the following:

	Delivery route fully established (LSVT complete; ALMO with funding; PFI contract signed)	Delivery route in development
Large Scale Voluntary Transfer	148	32
Arms Length Management Organisation	40	11
Retention	[1]103	—
Mixed[2]	14	6

[1] Only one authority has not yet had an Options Appraisal signed off.

[2] Includes one or more of the delivery routes some of which include HRA-PFI, only considered fully established when all delivery routes are funded).

Of the 20 local authorities undertaking a mixed model approach which covers two or more of the options; five have completed an LSVT and 10 are pursuing this option, 12 have established an ALMO and three are developing one and four are continuing to manage some part of their stock directly.

There are 14 local authorities with HRA PFI schemes, several have more than one scheme at different stages of development; there are 12 signed HRA PFI contracts in 10 local authorities and a further 10 proposals in nine local authorities.

Children: East Sussex

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of East Sussex's services for children with disabilities. [141887]

Mr. Dhanda: I have been asked to reply.

Ofsted with other inspectorates are currently undertaking a joint area review of children's services in East Sussex, which will report in the autumn.

This will include making a judgment and reporting specifically on services for children and young people with learning difficulties and/or disabilities.

The high-level annual performance assessment of local authority children's services undertaken by Ofsted, with, until 2006, the Commission for Social Care Inspection, does not make a scored judgment specifically on services for such children. However, it considers such services in reaching a judgment on the council's overall performance on children's services. The letter summarising the 2006 annual performance assessment of East Sussex, issued by the two inspectorates on 1 November 2006, notes as a key strength the family support service for children with disabilities.

Council Tax: Valuation

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 1 May 2007, Official Report, column 1539W, on Valuation Office: contracts, for what reasons the contract with Rightmove does not seek to collect data from Wales. [143456]

Mr. Woolas: The contract with Rightmove was entered into to support work in preparation for the (now postponed) council tax revaluation in England.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much has been spent by (a) her Department and its predecessor and (b) Ordnance Survey on the National Spatial Address Infrastructure. [143459]

Angela E. Smith: Communities and Local Government and its predecessors spent approximately £50,000 in support of the National Spatial Address Infrastructure (NSAI). Ordnance Survey's external expenditure on NSAI totals £98,000.

In addition, both organisations invested significant management time in the initiative, but the time spent by individual members of staff is not separately identifiable.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many appeals were forecast to arise by the Valuation Office Agency in relation to the 2005 business rates revaluation. [143502]

Mr. Woolas: The Valuation Office Agency made no specific forecast.

Electric Cables: Health Hazards

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) pursuant to the answer of 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 292W, on electric cables: health hazards, if she will publish the advice which she sought from the Health Protection Agency; and if she will make a statement; [144088]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 4 June 2007, Official Report, columns 291-92W, on electric cables: health hazards, when the Government plan to respond to the report by the Stakeholder Advisory Group on extremely low frequency waves and electric magnetic fields. [144091]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply

The recently published report from the stakeholder advisory group on extremely low frequency electric and magnetic fields, known as the SAGE report, is currently under consideration by the Health Protection Agency (HPA). The Government have asked HPA for advice concerning the report's recommendations. This advice will be published once Ministers have had the opportunity to consider it.

Energy: Conservation

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if the Government will consider the merits of publishing a low carbon milestone document to ensure that policies on housing plans and energy initiatives are co-ordinated following the publication of the Energy White Paper. [143867]

Yvette Cooper: The Government's strategy to move towards a low carbon economy are set out in the Energy White Paper, which explains how the domestic sector and planned new housing will play their part in meeting our climate change objectives. The Climate Change Bill will establish legally binding carbon budgets and targets to help this country meet its commitment to tackle climate change. The Government are also consulting on a timetable for zero carbon homes within 10 years.

Family Intervention Project

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the Family Intervention Project. [143422]

Meg Munn: In 2004 Communities and Local Government commissioned a two year evaluation of six Intensive Family Support Projects which pioneered new ways of working with families at risk of eviction as a result of antisocial behaviour. The evaluation found that in more than eight out of ten families (85 per cent.), at the point at which they exited the projects, complaints about antisocial behaviour had ceased or reduced and tenancies were stabilised resulting in a reduction in the risk of homelessness. Two further pieces of research have been commissioned. One will track a sample of families who worked with the six Intensive Family Support Projects and the other will be on the study that helped inform roll-out of the 53 Family Intervention Projects which the Government announced in April. The findings of both studies (in the case of the second piece, the first stage of the project) will be published later in the year.

Fire Services: Information and Communications Technology

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether the Fire Service Emergency Cover risk assessment and response toolkit system is compatible with the software to be used in the regional fire control centres. [142952]

Angela E. Smith: The Risk Management Toolkit and Optimal Resource Location tool specified for the Regional Control Centres will use the same data, algorithms and techniques as the Fire Service Emergency Cover toolkit. The software will have a similar look and characteristics.

Fire Services: Manpower

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many operational fire control room staff are employed in each brigade emergency fire control room, broken down by region; and what her latest estimate is for planning purposes of the number to be employed in operational roles in each regional fire control centre. [142955]

Angela E. Smith: The following table gives by region, the number of staff we expect will be employed in the each Regional Control Centre (RCC) and the number of staff currently employed in control rooms. The numbers include control room operators as well as data and gazetteer specialists and operational managers. These numbers have been used to calculate the costs in the latest version of the business case published on 14 June. The assumptions in the business case are kept under review. The actual number of staff employed by each RCC will be for the RCC Company to determine. We expect fewer staff to be employed in the RCC network than at present. Fire and Rescue Authorities are encouraged to look for other jobs for staff who will not transfer to the RCCs. The Department will meet the reasonable costs of retaining these control room staff.

Housing: Eco-towns

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many individual dwellings are planned to be built under the plans for five eco-villages; what total public funding is planned to be provided by central Government for those plans; and where they will be built. [143469]

Yvette Cooper: Decisions about plans for eco-towns, including potential funding support, more detailed criteria, and potential locations (making use where possible of brownfield land) will be set out in due course.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the timetable is for the construction of five eco villages. [143641]

Yvette Cooper: Further information about plans for eco-towns will be set out in due course.

Housing: Energy

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps the Government is taking to remedy the two million properties that the English House Condition Survey 2005 identifies as having an energy efficiency rating below SAP 30. [143693]

Yvette Cooper: Existing policies and programmes have seen the proportion of homes with an energy efficiency rating of SAP30 or below fall from 17 per cent. of the total housing stock in 1996 to 10 per cent. (2.2 million homes) in 2005.

Programmes such as Warm Front, Decent Homes and the Energy Efficiency Commitment (EEC) continue to deliver energy efficiency improvements in homes. Over the period from 1996 to 2005, there has been a doubling of the number of properties with insulated cavity walls and a 19 per cent. rise in the number of homes using gas central heating.

We are currently consulting on proposals for a new Carbon Emissions Reduction Target that would double the activity under the existing EEC programme from 2008-11.

Housing: Environment Protection

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what procedure will be followed to determine the location of the eco-homes announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer. [144051]

Yvette Cooper: Our planning system has a plan-led approach with development plans and policies at both local and regional level on which the public is consulted, and which then provide a framework for assessing individual planning applications. We expect our national planning policies, including on housing and tackling climate change, to be taken into account in the preparation of these plans and they may also be material to decisions on individual planning applications. We will set out further information on eco-towns in due course.

Housing: Middlesbrough

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps she is taking to regenerate housing in Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland. [143425]

Yvette Cooper: Planning Policy Statement 3 on Housing encourages local authorities to achieve a wide choice of high quality homes, to widen opportunities for home ownership, to improve affordability and to create sustainable communities. The Local Government White Paper places emphasis on the need to focus on place shaping and we are working with a wide variety of partners nationally and in the North East region to achieve this.

Middlesbrough borough council and Redcar and Cleveland borough council are currently completing, with other partners, a costed and prioritised Tees Valley Sub-regional Housing Strategy which will form the basis of the next round of Government funding through the Single Housing Investment Pot (SHIP) of the North East Housing Board. The Tees Valley authorities have banded together to form Tees Valley Living which act as a strategic co-ordinating group for housing and regeneration activities.

Both Middlesbrough BC and Redcar and Cleveland have 'fit for purpose' housing strategies in place and both are working to address the key housing priorities which include tackling housing market failure; improving the condition of housing stock by meeting the decent homes standard; providing appropriate supported and specialist housing and ensuring the provision of suitable and sufficient affordable housing in the future.

Social housing stock in Middlesbrough is now managed by Erimus Housing Association and in Redcar and Cleveland by Coast and Country Housing. Both of these RSL', together with others operating in the area are well on track to meet the 2010 target for achieving Decent Homes status.

Housing: Migration

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what recent estimate she has made of future net migration for the purpose of formulating household projections; and what her most recent estimate is of household formation attributable to net migration between 2004 and 2026. [137282]

Yvette Cooper: The '2004-based' household projections for England are derived from the Office for National Statistics' population projections.

The 2004 based household projections show that the biggest factor is more people living alone and net migration accounts for 73,000 (33 per cent.) of the 223,000 annual household growth between 2004 and 2026.

Housing: Standards

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what representations (a) she and (b) her predecessor responsible for housing policy received on the impact of section 21 of the Housing Act 1988 on the willingness of tenants to complain to private landlords about the condition of privately rented accommodation. [143310]

Yvette Cooper: Only one representation has been received requesting a meeting to discuss the impact of Section 21 of the Housing Act 1988 on the willingness of tenants to complain to private landlords over the condition of privately rented accommodation. A meeting was subsequently arranged with my hon. Friend the Member for Crosby (Mrs. Curtis-Thomas) and representatives from the Citizens' Advice Bureau to discuss a Bureau report which explores this issue.

Tenants have a right to request that their landlord carries out repairs for which he or she is responsible under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 and we condemn any landlord who would evict their tenants for exercising their statutory rights.

Non-Domestic Rates

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) what the net yield from business rates was in each local authority in England in 2006-07; [143482]

(2) what the average business rates cost was in each local authority in England in 2006-07. [143495]

Mr. Woolas: A table giving details of both the net yield from business rates and the average business rate in each local authority in England, in 2006-07, has been placed in the Library of the House.

Planning Permission: Green Belt

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many Green Belt areas in (a) the South East and (b) the South West of England received permission for development in 2006-07 as a result of appeals allowed by (i) planning inspectors and (ii) her. [142685]

Yvette Cooper: The number of appeals in the Green Belt during the period from 1 April 2006 to 31 March 2007 which have been allowed and, for contextual purposes, dismissed, can be seen as follows:

Decisions taken by Planning Inspectors

	Allowed	Dismissed	Total
South West	51	144	195
South East	15	43	58
Total	66	187	253

Decisions taken by the Secretary of State

	Allowed	Dismissed	Total

South East	1	1	2

Smoking: Public Places

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what her Department's most recent estimate is of the cost of the public smoking ban to local authorities in England; and what funding is being provided to councils. [143540]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply.

The anticipated costs and benefits of smoke-free legislation is set out in the Departments final Regulatory Impact Assessment published in December 2006. Copies are available in the Library.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 5 March 2007, Official Report, column 1698W, for details on funding for local authorities.

The Government provide funding for local authorities' new responsibilities to build compliance and, where necessary, enforce smokefree legislation under the principles of the New Burdens Doctrine by way of a non-ringfenced grant. The grant has been made in line with the Government's commitment to provide freedom for local authorities in the allocation of their budgets.

South East Plan

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when she expects the panel to report on the Examination in Public of the South East Plan. [144050]

Meg Munn: The Panel Report is due to be submitted to Government on 31 July 2007. In line with Planning Policy Statement 11 it will be published as soon as practicable following that date.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what timetable is to be followed in finalising the South East Plan; and if she will make a statement. [144052]

Meg Munn: Guidance on the timetable for finalising the Regional Spatial Strategy (The South East Plan) is set out in Planning Policy Statement 11.

The Panel are due to hand their report to Government on 31 July 2007, the report will be published as soon as practicable following that date.

Any proposed changes arising from the Panel Report will be published and available for consultation later in the year.

To pre-empt the outcome of the Panel Report by making a statement at this time would not be appropriate.

Valuation Office: Contracts

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the Answer of 1 May 2007, Official Report, column 1539W, on the Valuation Office: contracts, what the expected expenditure is on the Data Capture/Other Operating Costs for the remaining duration of the current Rightmove contract. [141758]

Ruth Kelly: The Valuation Office Agency's published Annual Reports and Accounts for 2005-06 and 2006-07 show expenditure to date, net of recoverable VAT. Any anticipated future expenditure cannot be released into the public domain, as this would prejudice the commercial interests of both the VOA and Rightmove.co.uk plc.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Children: Maintenance

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects the Child Support Agency (CSA) Office in Bolton to respond to the enquiry raised by the hon. Member for Aylesbury with the CSA MPs' hotline about the case of Mr. C.D. of Princes Risborough (case reference 2597287282) on 25 May; and if he will make a statement. [142219]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 12 June 2007]: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 20 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects the Child Support Agency office in Bolton to respond to the enquiry raised by the hon. Member of Aylesbury with the Agency Member of Parliament hotline about the case of Mr C.D of Princes Risborough on 25 May; and if he will make a statement. [142219]

As details about individual cases are confidential I have written to you separately about this case.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in how many of the cases administered by the Child Support Agency (a) the parent with care and (b) the non-resident parent falls into each income decile. [143038]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information requested is not available.

Children: Poverty

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what percentage of children living in families with incomes below 60 per cent. of median earnings were living in lone parent households in each year since 1997. [143585]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Specific information regarding low income for the United Kingdom is available in "Households Below Average Income 1994/95-2005/06 (Revised)". The report uses 60 per cent. of median income (rather than earnings) as the low income threshold. This threshold is the internationally recognised measure of poverty.

The available information is in the following table.

Number and percentage of children living in households below 60 per cent. of median income that were living in lone parent households: Before housing costs

Year	Number (millions)	Percentage
1996-97	1.3	39
1997-98	1.4	40
1998-99	1.3	40
1999-2000	1.4	43
2000-01	1.3	43
2001-02	1.3	43
2002-03	1.3	43
2003-04	1.2	42
2004-05	1.2	43
2005-06	1.1	40

Notes:
1. The information shown is for Great Britain up to 2001-02 and for the United Kingdom for 2002-03 onwards.
2. The information is based on OECD equivalisation factors and will therefore not be the same as any figures previously published that were based on McClements equivalisation factors.

Departments: Energy

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answers of 14 March 2007, Official Report, column 370W on Departments: Energy, and of 2 May 2007, Official Report, columns 1686-87W on Departments: Renewable Energy and 125398, for what reason different figures were given for the proportion of electricity sourced by his Department from renewable sources in 2005-06. [142395]

Mrs. McGuire: The figures used in the answer of 14 March reported that 206,087,269 kilowatt hours, representing 63 per cent. of the Departments energy came from renewable resources. This figure included that element of 'green' energy that is supplied from good quality combined heat and power, which whilst sustainable, does not meet the criteria for renewable energy. This combined figure for 'green' energy is used internally to highlight the decreasing use of standard "brown" electricity and was therefore used inadvertently.

For 2005-06 the Department used 175,174,178 kilowatt hours of energy acquired from renewable sources—accounting for 53.5 per cent. of the total electricity consumption. The remaining 30,913,091 kilowatt hours of 'green' energy was supplied from good quality combined heat and power.

Departments: Manpower

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many staff funded by the public purse in his Department are classified as people without posts; [137666]

(2) how many staff funded by the public purse in the (a) Appeals Service and (b) Child Support Agency are classified as people without posts; [142193]

(3) how many staff funded by the public purse in (a) the Disability and Carers Service, (b) Jobcentre Plus and (c) the Pension Service are classified as people without posts. [142202]

Mrs. McGuire: Currently there are 13 members of staff who, for exceptional reasons, are recorded by the Department's systems as being paid but not undertaking either permanent or temporary work. This figure represents 0.01 per cent. of the total staff in the Department.

The Department's surplus management procedures operate to ensure that wherever possible staff who become surplus are provided with temporary work until they are redeployed or leave the Department including under management approved release schemes.

The distribution of these staff is shown in the following table.

Business area	Number of staff
Child Support Agency	3
Disability and Carers Service	[1]—
Jobcentre Plus	[1]—
The Pension Service	9
Departmental corporate units	1
Departmental total	13

[1] None.

The Appeals Service transferred to the Department for Constitutional Affairs on 1 April 2006.

Departments: Sign Language

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the merits of providing British sign language (BSL) videos on his departmental website for the benefit of those whose first language is BSL. [142502]

Mrs. McGuire: DWP does not currently provide BSL videos on its departmental website and we have made only informal assessment of its merit.

The Department's Standard for Accessible Written Information, based on the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 requires reasonable adjustment to be made when meeting requests for alternative formats. This means that DWP does not have to make everything available in every accessible format where to do so would involve excessive cost or significant practical problems.

We have provided information products in BSL on DVD or video; however we have to evaluate its cost effectiveness on a case-by-case basis.

We recently looked at the accessibility of information to disabled people across all channels. We are now working to a defined set of standards, and will keep these under review.

Disadvantaged: Scotland

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether he has approved proposed contracts for the use of deprived area funding for 2007-08 in Lanarkshire and Ayrshire, Dumfries, Galloway and Inverclyde Jobcentre Plus districts. [142826]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 14 June 2007]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mel Groves, dated 20 June 2007:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning the approval of proposed contracts for the use of Deprived Area Funding for 2007/08 in the Lanarkshire, Ayrshire, Dumfries, Galloway and Inverclyde Jobcentre Plus Districts. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to Lesley Strathie as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus. I am replying on her behalf as Acting Chief Executive.

I can confirm that a contract has been awarded for Lanarkshire with an effective start-date of 4 June 2007. The contract for Ayrshire, Dumfries, Galloway and Inverclyde is currently out to tender with a deadline of 15 June 2007 for prospective bids.

I hope this is helpful.

Employment Services: Scotland

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what account was taken of Government policy on good procurement practice in respect of length of contract terms for contracts with employment service providers when the contracts proposed for deprived area funding in Lanarkshire and Ayrshire, Dumfries, Galloway and Inverclyde were agreed. [143002]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 15 June 2007]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to Lesley Strathie as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus. I am replying on her behalf as Acting Chief Executive.

I can confirm that the contracts follow procurement rules laid down by the Department for Work and Pensions, which fully comply with Government policy on good procurement practice.

I hope this is helpful.

Housing Benefit: Harrow

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether claimants will be able to opt-out of voice risk analysis when making a claim for housing benefit or council tax benefit to Harrow council. [140596]

Mr. Plaskitt: Voice stress analysis is not currently being used to risk assess new claims to housing benefit and council tax benefit at Harrow council. It is being used in phone calls relating to changes of circumstances. All callers are made aware of this at the start of the call and then have the option of whether or not to continue the call.

Incapacity Benefit: Wimbledon

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many claimants of incapacity benefit there are in Wimbledon. [143135]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 15 June 2007]: At November 2006 there were 1,730 claimants of incapacity benefit/severe disablement allowance in the Wimbledon parliamentary constituency.

Jobcentre Plus: Chard

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the levels of deprivation in the wards served by the Job Centre in Chard, Somerset. [143619]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Information on levels of poverty is not available below the level of Government Office Region.

Jobcentre Plus: Telephone Services

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many telephone calls to Jobcentre Plus contact centres were (a) engaged and (b) lost (i) across the call centre network and (ii) to each call centre in each of the last 12 months. [140395]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 4 June 2007]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mel Groves, dated 20 June 2007:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking how many telephone calls to Jobcentre Plus Contact Centres were engaged and lost across the call centre network and to each call centre in each of the last 12 months. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to Lesley Strathie as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus. I am replying on her behalf as Acting Chief Executive.

When a customer calls a Jobcentre Plus Contact Centre, they are placed into a queue either until the call is answered or they choose to abandon the call. Customers do not get an engaged tone.

We collate data by the type of service the customer calls and each Contact Centre deals with one or a mixture of the following services:

First Contact: for customers making a new or repeat claim to benefit.

Jobseeker Direct: for jobseeker to enquire about and place applications for advertised vacancies.

Employer Direct: for employers to post vacancies using our facilities.

National Benefit Fraud Hotline: for anyone to report alleged benefit theft.

NINO: for anyone wishing to apply for a National Insurance Number.

The national statistics across these service lines for the 12 months ending April 2007 are set out in the attached tables. Copies of which have been placed in the House of Commons library.

These figures are against 2006/07 targets of 90% of calls answered for First Contact and Jobseeker Direct. The target for calls answered for Employer Direct, National Benefit Fraud Hotline and NINO was 95%.

I Hope this is helpful.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what percentage of new deal claimants returned to jobseeker's allowance (a) between six months and 12 months and (b) after 12 months after leaving the programme in each year since 1998. [140588]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The available information is in the following table.

New deal, returners to jobseeker's allowance (JSA)

		Returned to JSA between six and 12 months from date of leaving new deal		Returned to JSA more than 12 months from date of leaving new deal

Notes

1. Information is based on all leavers from all new deal programmes who were claiming JSA when they started the programme.
2. The number and percentage of people returning to JSA more than 12 months after leaving new deal is based on latest available JSA data to November 2006. As more up-to-date JSA data becomes available, numbers are likely to rise.
3. If a person has two separate JSA periods, one between six and 12 months after leaving new deal, and one more than 12 months after leaving new deal, only the JSA period between six and 12 months is included in the table.
4. Latest complete year data is for 2005.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects to correct the statistics on second tier provision in 2004-05 following the validation of more class one national insurance contributions. [141527]

Mr. Plaskitt: The DWP are due to receive updated data from HMRC about valid class one contributions during July. We will then, under the national statistics protocols, analyse the effect of this update and decide whether a revision of the statistics is appropriate.

The second tier pension provision statistics accurately reflect the information held by HMRC for valid class one national insurance contributions at the time of publication.

New Deal for Disabled People

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many participants in the new deal for disabled people were or have been on the scheme for more than 12 months since July 2001; and how many participants left for employment in each month since July 2001. [137646]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 18 May 2007]: Up to the end of November 2006, new deal for disabled people (NDDP) had been successful in helping 134,160 people into work, including 101,720 people who had registered with, and received assistance from, NDDP job brokers.

Participants on NDDP can remain on the programme for as long as they need help, and up to November 2006, 142,460 people are recorded as having been on the programme for more than 12 months.

When NDDP participants enter employment, they are not necessarily counted as leavers from the programme as they are entitled to a minimum of twenty-six weeks in-work support from their new deal provider.

Information in the table represents those people who left NDDP but elected to either not access the in-work support element of the programme, or to utilise this only for a short period of time. These participants are therefore the only group that appear under the definition of those leaving directly to employment.

New Deal for Young People

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what percentage of claimants on the new deal for young people left the programme for (a) the employment option, (b) the environmental taskforce, (c) the voluntary section, (d) full-time education/training and (e) unsubsidised work in each year since 1998. [140587]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The information requested on the new deal for young people (NDYP) employment; environment taskforce; voluntary sector, and full-time education and training options is not available. This is because they are integral parts of NDYP and those participating on these Options are not classified as having left new deal.

Since January 1998 when the programme started, to the end of November 2006, 1,090,270 people had left NDYP, of which 508,650 (47 per cent.) had left to unsubsidised employment.

Information on the numbers of people who have participated on each of the NDYP options, as part of their participation in NDYP, is in the table.

New deal for young people options

Option	Participants
	Number	Percentage
Employment option	89,310	17
Voluntary sector option	194,330	38
Environment taskforce option	124,500	24
Full-time education and training option	104,000	20

Notes:
1. Information is from January 1998–November 2006 and may include people who have participated on more than one option.
2. Figures are rounded to the nearest 10.
3. The percentages in the tables are the number starting each option as a percentage of the number starting all options.

New Deal Schemes

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what percentage of applicants on each new deal programme were placed in (a) unsubsidised and (b) subsidised jobs in each region in each quarter since 1998. [140589]

Mr. Jim Murphy: A new deal subsidy is only paid through new deal for young people and new deal 25 plus so all of those placed into work through the other new deals have been placed into unsubsidised employment.

The available information has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) participants, (b) first-time participants and (c) repeat participants there were on each new deal programme in each region in each quarter of each year since 1998. [140597]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The available information has been placed in the Library.

Parents: Social Security Benefits

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether he has made an assessment of the lessons to be learned for the UK from Swedish practice in parental benefit and early years provision; and if he will make a statement. [142511]

Beverley Hughes: I have been asked to reply.

We are committed to learning from the policies and experiences of other countries, including the Scandinavian nations which have long established, high quality, universal services for young children and families. We also regularly make assessments of international evidence and experiences as part of our research programme.

The UK has participated in a number of OECD reviews that have identified policy and practice and shared learning from a range of member countries including Sweden. Recent published OECD reports include "Starting Strong: Early Childhood Education and Care (2006)" and "Babies and Bosses—Reconciling Work and Family Life (Vol. 4): Canada, Finland, Sweden, United Kingdom (2005)". These reports are available from the OECD website at http://www.oecd.org. We also continue to keep up to date with developments in Sweden in the early childhood area through our participation in the OECD Early Education and Care Network.

We regularly review the wide range of parental leave and pay policies developed by other EU member states, including those of Sweden. Experience from Sweden suggests that despite the long period over which paid parental leave can be taken by either parent, the majority is still taken by mothers during the child's first year, with most fathers taking less than their entitlement. The UK provides a relatively long period of paid maternity leave, and in developing a new entitlement for fathers to take up to six months' additional paternity leave we are focusing available resources on the child's first year. This will give both parents greater choice and flexibility in deciding how to balance work and family commitments, and will fit with the UK's existing statutory leave entitlement and the range of other financial support available for parents.

Personal Savings

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will update figure (a) 2.4, (b) 2.5, (c) 2.6 and (d) 2.7 and tables (i) 4.5 and (ii) 6.1 from financial incentives to save for retirement (Research Report No. 403) using the new income tax rates. [141536]

James Purnell: The Department published financial incentives to save for retirement in November 2006, which provided estimates of the payback which can be expected from saving in a private pension for a range of example individuals based on a range of assumptions including those around investment returns and other factors.

These figures have since been updated to take account of the 2007-08 benefit figures, the changes announced in the April 2007 Budget, and our proposals for personal accounts, as set out in the consultation response published on 14 June. The revised figures and tables will be placed in the Library.

Social Security Benefits: Fraud

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many claimants have been (a) cautioned, (b) asked to return monies and (c) brought before the courts for claiming benefits for more than one wife in the last 24 months. [144225]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information requested is not available other than at disproportionate cost.

Welfare to Work

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) when his Department expects to respond to the report by David Freud Reducing Dependency, Increasing Opportunity: Options for the future of Welfare to Work published on 5 March 2007; [140809]

(2) what steps he has taken to promote the opportunity to comment on proposals in the report by David Freud Reducing Dependency, Increasing Opportunity: Options for the future of Welfare to Work among private and voluntary sector welfare to work organisations. [140810]

Mr. Jim Murphy: On 26 March 2007, the Secretary of State invited all stakeholders to send in their views. A number of stakeholder seminars have also taken place to gather views on David Freud's recommendations.

The Government's response to the Freud report will be published in the summer.

TREASURY

Council Tax: Appeals

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what expenditure the Valuation Office Agency incurred on legal advice, solicitor fees and barrister fees in relation to council tax appeals before the Valuation Tribunal Service in England and Wales in the last 12 months for which figures are available. Council Tax: Valuation

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the Valuation Office Agency maintains data on the capital value of each domestic property in Wales. [142359]

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the Valuation Office Agency's internal guidance on using the Property Details Application via its intranet site. [142363]

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many telescopic views the Valuation Office Agency has purchased in the last 36 months; and at what cost. [143651]

Dawn Primarolo: The Valuation Office Agency has not purchased any telescopic views in the last 36 months.

Departments: Africa

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 2 May 2007, Official Report, column 1742W, on Departments: Africa, what the name of the hotel or other accommodation was which he occupied in each location. [139996]

John Healey: The Chancellor stayed locally when he visited Dar Es Salaam, Maputo, Johannesburg and Cape Town. It is not the practice of this or previous Administrations to disclose details of ministerial accommodation.

Departments: Correspondence

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions his Department has had with the Cabinet Office on the target of 20 working days for replying to correspondence from hon. Members. [143318]

John Healey: There have been no formal discussions with the Cabinet Office on this target. The Cabinet Office guidance to Departments and agencies provides for a target of replying to correspondence in no more than 20 working days. HM Treasury has adopted a lower target of replying within 15 working days.

Departments: Hotels

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much (a) his Department and (b) each of its agencies spent on hotel and other similar privately-provided accommodation (i) in the UK and (ii) abroad in 2006-07. [133438]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Treasury, the Debt Management Office, the Royal Mint, the Office of Government Commerce, and National Savings and Investment do not currently disaggregate hotel accommodation from general subsistence cost records, so the information requested cannot be provided.

The work of Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs depends to a large extent on the mobile nature of its staff when tackling and investigating criminal fraud and smuggling, and inspecting the compliance of businesses and individuals with rules related to tax, customs and duties.

Overseas, HMRC officers play a vital role in preventing and intercepting drugs and other illicit goods being trafficked into the UK.

Of necessity, this work cannot be done without incurring significant but essential costs in relation to transport, subsistence and accommodation.

However, in all such areas, the staff of HMRC are subject to strict rules—for example—in terms of the type of transport and accommodation they may use, and the type and amount of subsistence costs they may claim.

In 2006-07, the total expenditure by HMRC on accommodation within the UK was £14.1 million and outside the UK was £376,000.

Where available, figures for other agencies are as follows:

Agency	Domestic	Overseas £000
GAD	6.5	15
ONS	713	78
VOA	[1]525

[1] This figure cannot be separated.

Departments: ICT

John Healey: The information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Treasury awards all contracts in accordance with Government procurement rules, which state that all IT contracts in excess of £2,500 should be subject to competition.

Departments: Manpower

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff funded by the public purse in (a) HM Revenue and Customs, (b) Valuation Office Agency, (c) Office for National Statistics, (d) Royal Mint, (e) Office of Government Commerce and OGC Buying Solutions, (f) National Savings and Investments and (g) UK Debt Management Office are classified as people without posts. [141388]

John Healey: None of these Departments or agencies has any staff classified as without posts.

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of staff in his Department are (a) male, (b) female, (c) registered disabled and (d) aged 55 or over. [143921]

John Healey: HM Treasury's staff makeup as at 1 April 2007 is as follows:

(a) 55 per cent. male

(b) 45 per cent. female

(c) 4 per cent. with declared disability

(d) 5 per cent. aged 55 or over

Departments: Offices

Sarah Teather: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much (a) his private office and (b) his Department's press office cost to run in each of the last five years. [132918]

John Healey: Information on the Treasury's administration costs is published in the resource accounts and the departmental report each year, available from http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/about/about_index.cfm The 2006-07 annual report and accounts, combining the two documents, was published on 4 June.

Departments: Official Residences

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the official ministerial residences allocated to his Department's Ministers; and what the total annual cost is of running each. [141975]

John Healey: I refer to the answer given to the right hon. Member by the Prime Minister on 14 June 2007, Official Report, column 1263W, and to my answer to the hon. Member for Rayleigh (Mr. Francois) on 1 May 2007, Official Report, column 1611W.

Departments: Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff in his Department received bonus payments in each of the last five years for which information is available; what proportion of the total workforce they represented; what the total amount of bonuses paid has been; what the largest single payment was in each year; and if he will make a statement. [143119]

John Healey: The figures for the Treasury for 2006-07 are set out in the following table. For the earlier years I refer to the answer I gave the hon. Member on 7 November 2006, Official Report, column 1039W. Bonuses are paid in two circumstances: performance bonuses are those linked to the annual staff appraisal system; special bonuses are those paid to recognise exceptional performance for specific contributions or pieces of work during the year or situations outside the normal expectations of the post.

Performance bonus (£000)	995
Special bonuses (£000)	108
Number of staff	640
Percentage of staff (based on headcount at end of each financial year)	55
Highest amount	14,600

Departments: Property

Grant Shapps: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was received by the Department from the letting of its properties in each of the last five years. [139325]

John Healey: The income the Treasury has earned from sub-letting space in the 1 Horse Guards Road building is as follows:

Financial year	Letting income (£000)
2006-07	1,495
2005-06	658
2004-05	415

Grant Shapps: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent estimate has been made of the value of his Department's property portfolio. [139364]

John Healey: The Treasury's offices at 1 Horse Guards road were valued at £95.87 million as at 31 March 2006.

Departments: Publicity

Grant Shapps: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which (a) advertising agencies and (b) other organisations supplied consultancy services for advertising campaigns for (i) his Department and (ii) its agencies in each of the last five years; and what the cost of these services was. [139448]

John Healey: Information on the advertising agencies and other organisations that have supplied consultancy services for advertising campaigns for HM Treasury, National Savings and Investments and the Office for National Statistics is not readily available and could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

The Royal Mint considers that release of this information could compromise its commercial position.

All the Treasury's other agencies have not used advertising agencies or other organisations supplying consultancy services for advertising campaigns in the last five years.

Departments: Remploy

Danny Alexander: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) services and (b) products his Department has procured from Remploy in the last 12 months; and at what cost. [143786]

John Healey: The Treasury has not procured any services or products from Remploy in the last 12 months.

Departments: Telephone Services

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many non-geographic telephone numbers are in use by his Department; and what revenue was received from them in each year since 2001. [144538]

John Healey: The Treasury has not used non-geographic telephone numbers.

Departments: Travel Agents

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much his Department and its agencies paid in travel agencies' fees in each year since 1997. [139901]

John Healey: The information requested is as follows:

Fees for travel services paid by HMT Treasury, including the Debt Management Office

Period	Fees (£)
July 2002-03	35,000
2003-04	60,000
2004-05	86,000
2005-06	123,000
2006-07	91,227

The figures for 2004-05 and 2005-06 reflect the higher levels of travel undertaken throughout 2005 as a result of HM Treasury's international commitment during the UK's dual presidencies of the EU and G7.

The information prior to July 2002 could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Fees for travel services paid by OGC

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many times he has visited the East Riding of Yorkshire on official Government business in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [142145]

Excise Duties: Motor Vehicles

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many vehicles there were in each band for which Vehicle Excise Duty was paid in the latest period for which figures are available. [140663]

John Healey: The Department for Transport annually publishes vehicle licensing statistics which are broken down into vehicle category. This is available at:

http://www.dft.gov.uk/pgr/statistics/datatablespublications/vehicles/licensing/

The department is planning to publish the latest 2006 statistics towards the end of this month.

Finance: Disadvantaged

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps his Department is taking to promote financial literacy among socially excluded groups. [143859]

Ed Balls: The Government have taken significant steps to promote financial literacy for socially excluded groups. For example, in November 2006, the Department for Education and Skills revised the Sure Start Children's Centre good practice guidance to encourage Children's Centres to offer more financial education for parents. The Government also promotes financial skills for adults with poor literacy and numeracy through its 'Skills for Life' strategy and through the National Reducing Re-offending Delivery Plan, which has a commitment to address financial literacy for offenders.

Integrating financial literacy across a range of public services, particularly those aimed at the most vulnerable, is one of the Government's long term aspirations set out in "Financial Capability: the Government's long-term approach", which was published in January 2007.

The Government have also asked Otto Thoresen, Chief Executive of AEGON UK, to design a national approach to generic financial advice. The Thoresen review terms of reference place particular emphasis on meeting the needs of those most vulnerable to the consequences of poor financial decision-making, including socially excluded groups.

The Government will publish an action plan on financial capability, including the outcome of the Thoresen review, early next year.

The Government also continues to tackle financial exclusion—promoting access to banking and other financial services, affordable credit and money advice. As part of the Government's financial inclusion strategy, the Department of Work and Pensions' £5.4 million "Now Let's Talk Money" campaign is working through trusted intermediaries—such as housing associations, community groups and charities—to provide financially excluded people with the information, advice and support they need to take up financial services products.

HM Revenue and Customs: Correspondence

John Hemming: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the extent of the backlog is in dealing with correspondence and other contacts at HM Revenue and Customs. [143250]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC has received over 26 million items of correspondence from customers in the last 12 months. At the end of May 2007 it is estimated that around 76,000 items are more than 40 working days old.

Home Information Packs

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he had with the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government on delaying the implementation of home information packs until 1st August 2007. [143752]

John Healey: The two Departments have discussed Home Information Packs as part of the regular process of policy development within Government.

Home Responsibilities Protection

Steve Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many calls his Department has received on the 0845 302 1479 inquiry line since it was established; and how many of these calls have resulted in the issuing of form CF411 to claim home responsibilities protection. [142800]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 14 June 2007]: Information in terms of volumes is not available prior to 10 April 2005. Between 10 April 2005 and 31 May 2007 inclusive this line received around 1.4 million calls.

Data are not available on the number of calls that resulted in the issue of form CF411.

Immigration

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics on the impact of the change of calculation methodology for estimating the number of international migrants to the UK. [143011]

John Healey: As Minister responsible for the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have regular meetings with the National Statistician, which cover all areas of ONS business.

Inheritance Tax

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether his Department has estimated the revenue that would be lost to the Exchequer if principal residences were exempt from inheritance tax. [143283]

Dawn Primarolo: Exempting principal residences from inheritance tax from 2008-09 onwards would incur a full year cost of around £1.7 billion.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost to the Exchequer of raising the inheritance tax threshold to £500,000. [143341]

Dawn Primarolo: Raising the inheritance tax nil rate band to £500,000 from 2008-09 would incur a full year cost of around £2 billion.

Landfill Tax

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate the Government have made of the proportion of landfill tax which is paid by local authorities and their contractors. [143667]

John Healey: Reliable estimates are not available for the proportion of landfill tax revenue from local authorities and their contractors. Registered landfill site operators pay the tax to HMRC and information on the source of the waste and the customer is not recorded on the landfill tax return.

Local Government: Reorganisation

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the letter sent by the Treasury Chief Secretary to the Department for Communities and Local Government in March in relation to local government restructuring. [143648]

Mr. Timms: It would be inappropriate to place a letter from ongoing correspondence between Ministers in the public domain.

Lord Bhattacharyya

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer to which posts he has appointed Lord Bhattacharyya since 1997. [141293]

John Healey: The Chancellor has not appointed Lord Bhattacharyya to any posts.

Minimum Wage

Dr. Kumar: To ask Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of people and percentage of the workforce who receive the national minimum wage (a) in the UK and (b) in Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland. [143428]

Jim Fitzpatrick: I have been asked to reply.

Based on data from the Office for National Statistics' Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings 2006, the DTI estimates that, in the UK, between 430,000 and 440,000 jobs (less than 2 per cent. of the UK total) were paid at the national minimum wage in April 2006.

Data at the parliamentary constituency level are not available. However, the DTI estimates that between 10,000 to 50,000 jobs (1 per cent. to 5 per cent. of the total) held in the north-east were paid at the national minimum wage in April 2006.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the level of the minimum wage. [143429]

Jim Fitzpatrick: I have been asked to reply.

National minimum wage rates are set following recommendations by the independent Low Pay Commission. The Commission undertakes wide-ranging consultation and analysis before making its recommendations. Copies of the most recent Low Pay Commission report are available in the Libraries of the House.

Revenue and Customs: Informers

Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer under what powers HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) reward informers; and what procedures HMRC has for informing Ministers of the use of such powers. [144041]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs are empowered to pay rewards by virtue of section 26 of the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005.

HMRC has unlimited delegated authority to make these payments, subject to the condition that the department makes regular internal assessments of its expenditure on rewards, and reports to the Treasury to request authority if any novel or contentious payments are anticipated.

The Treasury are notified of amounts paid in rewards prior to any publication in the Department's annual report or elsewhere.

Revenue and Customs: Telephone Services

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) where the call centres are located which handle calls to the national helpline of HM Revenue and Customs; [141560]

(2) whether the telephone system used by the national helpline of HM Revenue and Customs is capable of recording (a) the average waiting time before a call from a member of the public is answered and (b) whether a call has been automatically terminated before being answered; and if he will make a statement; [141561]

(3) what benchmarks he uses to determine the effectiveness and efficiency of the national helpline of HM Revenue and Customs in providing a service to the public. [141562]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC do not operate a single "national helpline" and the information is therefore not available in the format requested. HMRC operate a network of contact centres at some 22 separate locations throughout Great Britain and this network currently supports over 30 separate helplines and lines of business.

The management information available on helpline operations depends on the line of business that the helpline supports.

Students: Loans

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how frequently HM Revenue and Customs makes payments to student loan companies. [144125]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs transfers student loan repayments remitted by employers each month, along with pay-as-you-earn (PAYE) tax and national insurance contributions (NIC) deducted from employees' earnings, to the Treasury's consolidated funds overnight following the date of receipt. No sums are retained or transferred to the Student Loans Company (SLC) from HMRC at any stage.

Taxation: Rented Housing

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the tax revenue arising from buy to let property. [143751]

John Healey: This information is not available. The tax system does not recognise properties bought to let as a distinct category of property.

Taxation: Self-assessment

John Hemming: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will instruct HM Revenue and Customs not to take enforcement action against those affected by the backlog in self-assessment. [143285]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC only takes enforcement action on returns that they have not received or on debts that have not been paid.

Terrorism: Finance

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what investigations his Department has made into Riggs Bank in relation to the possible funding of terrorist operations on or after 11 September 2001; and if he will make a statement. [144118]

Ed Balls: The investigation of specific allegations of financial crime, including the financing of terrorism, are a matter for law enforcement authorities and, where appropriate, the Financial Services Authority. No such investigation has been carried out by this Department.

Unitary Councils

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what role his Department will play in the assessment of the bids to the Department for Communities and Local Government for unitary local government status. [143642]

John Healey: Following stakeholder consultation, all 16 unitary proposals will be assessed against the five criteria the Government set out when we invited local authorities to submit their proposals. Decisions on those bids which will proceed toward implementation will be taken collectively by all Ministers.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the Cabinet Office publication Overseas Travel by Ministers 2004-05, of how many days duration his trip to the United States in December 2004 was. [137064]

John Healey: All ministerial visits are conducted in accordance with the "Ministerial Code" and "Travel by Ministers". Since 1999, the Government have published on an annual basis, a list of overseas travel by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500 and the total cost of all ministerial travel. The Chancellor's meetings in New York and Washington were between 16 December and 21 December. He spoke at the UN Council on Foreign Relations and met Jean Ping, President of the General Assembly He also met US Treasury Secretary, John Snow, the President of the World Bank, James Wolfensohn, Managing Director of the IMF de Rato, Secretary of State, Dr. Rice and former Chairman of the Federal Reserves, Alan Greenspan. The Chancellor stayed on at his own cost until 23 December.

Valuation Office Agency: Freedom of Information

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Freedom of Information Act 2000 requests the Valuation Office Agency has received in each year since that Act came into force. [143750]

Dawn Primarolo: The Valuation Office Agency received 216 requests under Freedom of Information Act 2000 during the 2005 calendar year. There were 211 such requests during the 2006 calendar year.

Valuation Office Agency: Hong Kong

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost to the public purse was of the Valuation Office Agency's representatives' visits to Hong Kong in the last 24 months. [142171]

Dawn Primarolo: The visits to Hong Kong were made at the request of the Rating and Valuation Department, Hong Kong (Special Administrative Region). The Valuation Office Agency has been providing valuation advice to the Rating and Valuation Department. As the agency charged for the work undertaken there was no net cost to the public purse.

VAT

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library the legal advice he has received in relation to his Department's inquiry into VAT and Low Value Consignment Relief. [143723]

Dawn Primarolo: It would not be appropriate to release the legal advice concerned, as it is confidential and subject to legal professional privilege.

VAT: Registration

Mr. Hands: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many new VAT registration requests for limited companies his Department received in each month of 2006-07. [143338]

Dawn Primarolo: Revenue and Customs do not separately record the number of requests from limited companies at the point of registration. The following number of businesses applied for VAT registration:

VAT registration requests

Month	Number
2006
April	23,014
May	26,474

November	24,214
December	16,629
2007
January	24,430
February	26,477
March	27,107

Mr. Hands: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what basis his Department can refuse a new limited company VAT registration. [143339]

Dawn Primarolo: To register for VAT, a person must be making, or intend to make, taxable supplies in the course of business. HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) carries out a range of checks to test and verify the information provided by those applying for VAT registration. If a person cannot satisfy HMRC that they are making, or intend to make, taxable supplies in the course of business they will not be registered.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the length of time it takes for a new limited company to receive VAT registration from his Department; and if he will make a statement. [143340]

Dawn Primarolo: Revenue and Customs do not separately record the time it takes for a limited company to be registered.

Welfare Tax Credits: EC Countries

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of EU workers working in the UK made claims for (a) child tax credit and (b) child benefit in respect of children living in another EU country in each year since 2003. [144124]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 12 June 2007, Official Report, column 943W.

Welfare Tax Credits: Foreigners

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many foreign nationals were in receipt of (a) child benefit, (b) working tax credits and (c) child tax credits in each year since 2003. [143592]

Dawn Primarolo: This information is not available.

Welfare Tax Credits: ICT

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much of the total compensation Electronic Data Services agreed to pay to HM Revenue and Customs as a result of tax credit system problems has been received. [143342]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 20 July 2006, Official Report, columns 623-24W.

Welfare Tax Credits: Internet

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he plans to reopen the tax credit e-portal. [143597]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the evidence I gave to the Treasury Select Committee on 14 March 2007 in response to question 88.

Welfare Tax Credits: Lone Parents

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people claiming tax credits are registered as lone parents. [143593]

Dawn Primarolo: An estimate of the number of lone parents claiming tax credits is published in the HMRC publication "Child and Working Tax Credit Statistics. Finalised Annual Awards 2005-06". A provisional estimate is also published in the "Child and Working Tax Credit Statistics. April 2007". Both publications are available on the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-quarterly-stats.htm

Welfare Tax Credits: Overpayments

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer from how many people who have been declared bankrupt the Tax Credit Office is claiming back tax credit overpayments. [143344]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not available in the format requested. HM Revenue and Customs' guidance relating to the recovery of overpayments from claimants who report they have been declared bankrupt can be found at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/manuals/ntcmanual/payment_opayments/ntc0780052.htm

HEALTH

Abortion

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking to reduce the number of repeat abortions; and if she will make a statement. [144154]

Caroline Flint: It is a key aim of the Government to reduce unintended pregnancy rates, including repeat abortions, as featured in both the sexual health and teenage pregnancy strategies, and provision of good quality contraceptive services are essential to achieve this. Women who have undergone abortion are an important group and often have unmet contraceptive needs.

We will be issuing best practice guidance on reproductive healthcare later this year aimed at commissioners and providers emphasising the need to develop strong links between abortion and contraceptive services.

We are also examining the feasibility of undertaking pilots to provide women with tailored contraceptive packages following abortion. The pilots will also examine which groups of women are most vulnerable to repeat abortion.

Abortion: Legislation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what recent discussions (a) she, (b) Ministers in her Department and (c) officials have had with the British Medical Association on possible amendments on abortion to the Draft Human Tissue and Embryos Bill; and if she will make a statement; [142820]

(2) what recent representations she has received from (a) hon. Members and (b) members of the public on possible amendments on abortion to the Draft Human Tissue and Embryos Bill; what response she has given; and if she will make a statement. [142821]

Caroline Flint: The Secretary of State for Health, Health Ministers and officials have had no recent discussions with the British Medical Association about possible amendments on abortion to the draft Human Tissue and Embryos Bill, and no such recent representations have been received from hon. Members or members of the public.

It is accepted parliamentary practice that proposals for changes in the law on abortion have come from Backbench Members and that decisions are made on the basis of free votes. The Government have no plans to change the law on abortion.

Abortion: Private Sector

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the private sector clinics and hospitals which are able to provide abortions; how many approved beds each contains; whether they are approved for (i) surgical day care abortions with or without general anaesthetic and (ii) late abortions; and what the name of the proprietor is in each case. [140881]

Caroline Flint: The names and addresses of the independent sector places currently approved under the Abortion Act 1967, including the name of the proprietor, is shown in the following table. The approval under the Act allows the places to perform abortion. The registration under the Care Standards Act 2000, based on the information provided to the Healthcare Commission, determines the number of beds and the method and gestation of abortion that can be performed, within the terms of the Abortion Act. This information is not held centrally by the Department.

Accident and Emergency Departments

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment (a) her Department and (b) organisations responsible to her Department have conducted into the correlation between survivability and journey times to accident and emergency departments in (i) Surrey Primary Care Trust, (ii) South East Coast Strategic Health Authority and (iii) England; and if she will make a statement. [143277]

Andy Burnham: The Department does not routinely undertake assessments of this kind, either for England or for particular localities.

It is a matter for the local national health service to ensure there is appropriate provision of urgent and emergency care services that are responsive to people's needs. This includes accident and emergency provision. The aim should be to provide safe, high quality care as close to home as is compatible with clinical safety. Local organisations, including primary care trusts and strategic health authorities, may make use of a range of information available to them when considering the planning and provision of local services.

Air Ambulance Services: Finance

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she intends to review the funding of air ambulances by charities; and if she will make a statement. [144087]

Andy Burnham: There are no plans to review the funding of air ambulances.

Although air ambulance services are provided by charities, staff costs have been paid by the national health service since 2002. It is for NHS trusts to decide whether they provide any additional funding to air ambulance charities.

Lymphatic Cancer

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the NHS Life Checks proposed in the Our Health, Our Care, Our Say White Paper will include lymphatic cancer indicators. [143740]

Caroline Flint: The purpose of national health service life checks is to highlight modifiable health behaviours and aspects of lifestyle that are risk factors for poor health. These will include smoking, diet and nutrition, physical activity, alcohol, stress and emotional well-being. The mid-life life check for people aged 45-60 will have a particular focus on assessing people's risk of vascular disease, the leading cause of death and disability in England. There will not be a specific emphasis on assessing risks for or symptoms of lymphatic cancer.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the proposed revisions to the payment by results tariff will take into account the care, support and treatment needs of lymphoma patients. [143306]

Andy Burnham: The "Options for the Future of Payment by Results: 2008-09 to 2010-11" sets out plans for extending the scope of payment by results. The consultation is due to complete on 22 June 2007 and the Department will issue a response to the consultation in autumn 2007. Copies have been placed in the Library.

The consultation document outlines how tariffs for radiotherapy and chemotherapy could be introduced in 2009-10.

However, social care is currently outside the scope of payment by results. Care and support services other than those provided during a patient's stay in hospital or as an outpatient where care is consultant-led, are excluded from tariff. Funding for services that are outside the scope of, or excluded from, payment by results is agreed locally between commissioners and providers.

Cannabis: Research

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what licences are current for research into possible medicinal uses of cannabis; what assessment she has made of the progress being made with each research project; and when the results of the research will be available. [135952]

Caroline Flint: Over the last 10 years, the main part of the Department's total expenditure on health research has been devolved to and managed by the national health service organisations. Details of individual NHS supported research projects including a number concerned with the medicinal use of cannabis derivatives are available on the national research register at www.dh.gov.uk/research.

A total of 50 clinical trials involving extracts of cannabis, cannabis based medicines or cannabis derived medicines have been approved by the Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency since July 1999. The Agency does not have information on when the results from these trials will be available.

Childbirth

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether an assessment has been made of the impact of payment by results on (a) the number of home births, (b) the number of caesarean sections and (c) the national choice guarantees made in her Department's Maternity Matters strategy for maternity services as referred to in the answer of 18 April 20006, Official Report, column 230W, on maternity services. [143558]

Andy Burnham: There has been no formal assessment to date of the impact of payment by results on the number of home births, caesarean sections or national choice guarantees made in the Maternity Matters strategy.

However, the Maternity Matters strategy makes clear that a tariff for home births is needed to support the national choice guarantees. Both 'Maternity Matters and the Options for the Future of Payment by Results: 2008-09 to 2010-11' consultation document, published on 15 March 2007, commit the Government to achieving this. Clinical experts are also being consulted to ensure that payment by results pays a price that more appropriately reflects costs in maternity services.

Copies of the consultation document have been placed in the Library.

Chlamydia Infection: Screening

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking to ensure the accuracy of chlamydia testing kits on sale in the UK. [144153]

Caroline Flint: Manufacturers of chlamydia testing kits are obliged to meet specified requirements for their safety, quality and performance laid down in the Medical Devices Regulations 2002 (as amended) before they are placed on the United Kingdom market. The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency has post market surveillance responsibilities on behalf of the Secretary of State to enforce the regulations and investigate serious incidents involving this type of device.

Dental Services: Barnsley

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions between 2003 and April 2006 her Department received representations from Barnsley Primary Care Trust on the adequacy of funding for orthodontic services in Barnsley. [138735]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department worked closely with a number of primary care trusts (PCTs) in the South Yorkshire area between 2004 and 2006 to help develop local dental services and pilot new ways of working, and in that process had a number of contacts with officials from both Barnsley PCT and the former South Yorkshire Strategic Health Authority. The question of longer term activity and funding levels for specialist orthodontic practices was one of the issues raised in those contacts.

Under the legislation governing the transition to new local commissioning arrangements from 1 April 2006, dentists with general dental services contracts, including orthodontists, were guaranteed new contracts based on their national health service earnings during the 12-month reference period October 2004 to September 2005. The Departments advice to PCTs was that, where practices' more recent levels of activity exceeded those reflected in the reference period earnings, PCTs should ensure as a minimum that funding was available to complete treatment for all patients under treatment as at 31 March 2006 but that it was a local decision for the PCT, or the PCTs across the wider health economy, based on an assessment of local needs, whether to commit the additional investment needed to sustain the higher levels of activity in the longer term.

We understand that Barnsley PCT has recently completed a review of local orthodontic treatment needs and intends to commission an additional 64 orthodontic courses of treatment annually to reflect the outcome of this needs assessment.

Departments: Advertising

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much revenue her Department received from (a) adverts on her Department's public information leaflets and (b) adverts on her Department's public websites in each of the last 10 years; and if she will make a statement. [142529]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: There is currently no mechanism for recording this information centrally within the Department and to attempt to do so would incur disproportionate cost.

Departments: Official Cars

Mr. Simon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what make and model of car (a) she and (b) each Minister in her Department selected as their official ministerial car; and what criteria were used when making the decision in each case. [141996]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend, the Minister of State for Transport (Dr. Ladyman), on 14 June 2007, Official Report, columns 1268-69.

Departments: Official Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on hospitality by her Department in the financial year 2006-07. [133257]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: With the introduction of the Department's new finance system in April 2004 a number of financial codes were combined to include miscellaneous expenditure, which is not classifiable as hospitality. Therefore we do not hold an accurate value for the period 2006-07.

Departments: Public Expenditure

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her Department's delegated expenditure limit is above which expenditure must be approved by HM Treasury. [144521]

Andy Burnham: The Department has delegated limits from HM Treasury for approving the following specific categories of expenditure:

NHS Estate: Land Transactions;

NHS Estate: Capital Projects (Buildings and Equipment)

Civil Estate: Land Transactions

NHS Trust Information Management and Technology Projects

Departmental Information Technology Projects

NHS Losses and Special Payments

Departmental (including Agencies and non-department public bodies) Losses and Special Payments

Clinical and Medical Negligence

Most of these categories in turn involve a number of different schemes and transactions, each of which has a different delegated limit. The delegated limit for the appointment of preferred bidder business case and full business case for a capital investment scheme under the Private Finance Initiative is £100 million; this falls within the NHS Estate: Capital Projects (Buildings and Equipment) category above.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what requests for additional funds her Department made to HM Treasury in (a) 2005-06 and (b) 2006-07; what the date was of each request; and whether each was granted. [144522]

Andy Burnham: The Department has not made any requests to HM Treasury for additional funds in 2005-06 and 2006-07.

Doctors: Training

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what meetings she has held with the British Medical Association on the operation of the medical training application system. [125094]

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with the British Medical Association to evaluate the selection process for junior doctors. [129339]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 7 March 2007]: My right. hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health met representatives from the British Medical Association (BMA) on 28 February and 14 March.

The Secretary of State and my noble Friend the Minister of State, Lord Hunt, also met Dr. Sam Everington, Deputy Chairman of Council, Dr. Jo Hilborne, chair, Junior Doctor's Committee, Dr Jonathan Fielden, chair, Consultants Committee and Ms Sally Watson, director of representational and political activities on 24 May.

In addition the Secretary of State had phone calls with the BMA on 8 March, 9 and 16 May.

Lord Hunt met James Johnson, chairman of the BMA on 2 May.

There have also been a series of official level meetings with representatives from the BMA on modernising medical careers (MMC) since 1 February.

The selection process for MMC, including the medical training application system computer system, were discussed at all of these meetings and phone calls.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Answer of 14 May 2007, Official Report, columns 583W, on doctors: training, whether the report into the breach of security of the Medical Training Application Service website will address the question of whether Methods were instructed to issue a password by her Department. [138374]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department's internal security report has already confirmed that a password was not introduced to protect the data, despite the Medical Training Application Service contract specifying that access would be controlled by a system of file privileges requiring an allocated username and password.

Drugs: Counterfeit Manufacturing

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what her estimate is of the number of patients supplied with counterfeit (a) Plavix, (b) Casodex and (c) Zyprexa; and what assessment she has made of the consequent risk posed to patient health; [142938]

(2) if she will plan an urgent review of UK preparedness to deal with the risk to patient safety of counterfeit medicines; [142939]

(3) whether new measures are being considered to stop counterfeit medicines reaching patients; [142940]

(4) what resources she plans to dedicate to tackling the risks posed by the supply of counterfeit medicines in the next three years; [142941]

(5) what her assessment is of the scale of the risk in Europe from the supply of counterfeit medicines; [142942]

(6) if she will make a statement on the four recent class 1 recalls of counterfeit medicines found in the UK legitimate supply chain; [142943]

(7) what assessment she has made of a possible link between suppliers of counterfeit medicines and organised crime; [142944]

(8) what resources she plans to commit to tackling the illegal trade in counterfeit medicines in the next three years. [142945]

Caroline Flint: The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) is currently conducting an investigation into the circumstances surrounding the recent penetration of counterfeit Casodex, Zyprexa and Plavix into the regulated supply chain which led to the class 1 recalls. The number of patients affected will not be known until the completion of the recall and the investigation.

A class 1 recall, a system to recall medicines with immediate effect, was undertaken because initial analysis has shown a reduced amount of the correct active ingredient present in each of the counterfeit products. Counterfeit products commonly contain reduced quantities of active pharmaceutical ingredients. These are unlikely to have been manufactured to good manufacturing standards and may contain impurities which put health at risk. The class 1 recalls were considered necessary as evidence suggested these products may have reached pharmacy and patient level.

The extent of counterfeit medicine in circulation worldwide is difficult to estimate. The World Health Organisation (WHO) has published estimates suggesting up to 10 per cent. of medicines globally are counterfeit. This is more prevalent in developing countries and less so in developed nations. Within developed nations WHO estimate that up to 1 per cent. of medicines may be counterfeit. The European Commission has recognised that counterfeiting is a growing problem within the European Union and has undertaken a study to identify any legislative and regulatory weaknesses with a view to exploring policy options. As with all other member states, the United Kingdom has provided information on local experiences, statistics and strategies associated with combating counterfeiting.

The MHRA is developing a strategy which will address the risks to patient safety from counterfeit medicines by providing a comprehensive approach through the implementation of strategic and operational measures to minimise the risk of counterfeit medicines reaching patients through both the regulated and unregulated supply chains. This strategy is being reviewed to take into account the recent incidents and subsequent intelligence gathered from industry and our international counterparts. Resource issues are part of this strategy. The strategy will be published later this year.

MHRA works closely with law enforcement and other regulatory bodies both nationally and internationally. MHRA hosts regular meetings with stakeholders within industry, law enforcement and regulatory bodies, intelligence concerning counterfeit medicines is reviewed and assessed.

Strong links exist between the MHRA and other law enforcement agencies. MHRA works closely with the Serious and Organised Crime Agency to establish links between organised crime and counterfeit medicines.

Drugs: Health Education

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the results of the evaluation of the drugs awareness campaign Frank Brain Warehouse will be published; and if she will make a statement. [142519]

Caroline Flint: Evaluation of the FRANK drugs information campaign is conducted annually to track awareness and impact of FRANK messages to young people. Research fieldwork for the campaign year ending 31 March has been completed and the data are currently being analysed. This data will include measures of the effectiveness of the Brain Warehouse advertising campaign, the prime objective of which was to communicate to young people how the regular use of cannabis can lead to mental health problems. A summary of the full campaign evaluation will be published on www.drugs.gov.uk in the week commencing 16 July 2007.

Drugs: Misuse

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are receiving treatment for drug addiction in Stoke-on-Trent; and what estimate has been made of (a) the number of drug addicts in Stoke-on-Trent and (b) the number not in treatment. [143346]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not centrally available in the format requested. The Department collects data on drug treatment at drug action team (DAT) level, rather than by geographical area. The most recent data, 2004-05, available for Staffordshire DAT, which includes Stoke on Trent is as follows:

Estimated number of Problematical Drug Users (PDUs): 2,975

Estimated number of PDUs not in treatment: 1,410

Notes:

PDUs are defined as crack/opiate users.

The PDU estimate was conducted by Glasgow university for the Home Office.

The figures provided are estimates and as such, they may differ from the actual figures.

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the adequacy of primary care trust commissioning plans with relation to the treatment of addictions. [143766]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 18 June 2007]: Primary care trusts (PCTs) are expected to commission services based on the needs of their local population. As part of this the needs of individuals who have a form of addiction should be a component of a PCT's commissioning plan. Strategic health authorities are responsible for the performance management of PCTs.

Drugs: Research

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health further to the announcement of 7 June 2007, Official Report, column 30WS, on medicines development, how much financial support the Government have committed to the production and dissemination of the leaflet; and if she will make a statement. [143627]

Caroline Flint: The Department of Health and the Department of Trade and Industry contributed £25,000 and £20,000 respectively to the Coalition for Medical Progress in March 2007 for the writing, design, print and distribution of the leaflet on medicines development. The leaflet is available in the Library.

The leaflet was produced in order to raise general public awareness about how medicines are developed, and covers the use of animals in medicines research and testing, through to clinical trials and licensing. It will be available for patients in around 60 per cent. of general practitioner surgeries in England from autumn 2007.

General Practitioners: Eastern Region

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) general practitioner surgeries and (b) single-handed general practitioner surgeries there were in (i) Suffolk, (ii) Bedfordshire, (iii) Cambridgeshire, (iv) Essex, (v) Hertfordshire, (vi) Norfolk and (vii) England in each year since 1997. [143955]

Andy Burnham: The information requested is not available in the format requested. However, information is available by strategic health authority (SHA)/primary care trust (PCT) area. Table one includes information relating to general practitioner (GP) practices in the former SHAs and PCTs in the east of England area up to September 2005. Table two provides information on GP practices for the reconfigured SHA and PCT areas for 2006.

General Practitioners: Internet

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of GPs who use Internet Explorer. [141976]

Caroline Flint: No information is collected centrally that would enable such an estimate to be made.

General Practitioners: Manpower

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the GP to patient ratio was in each (a) strategic health authority and (b) primary care trust in England in each of the last five years. [142417]

Andy Burnham: Tables have been placed in the Library showing the number of general practitioners (excluding retainers and registrars), the number of patients and the ratio of one to the other in each strategic health authority and each primary care trust in England in each of the last five years.

For the period 2002-05, the table is based on the 303 primary care trusts which existed before the reorganisation in October 2006.

Health Services: Reciprocal Arrangements

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many E112 authorisations her Department issued in each year since 1997. [135878]

Ms Rosie Winterton [pursuant to the reply, 18 May 2007, Official Report, c. 1016W]: Patients may receive treatment in other member states of the European Economic Area and in Switzerland through the E112 referral scheme, in accordance with Regulation (EEC) 1408/71. This Regulation coordinates the social security and healthcare schemes of the member states.

Information about patients from England, Scotland and Wales referred abroad using the E112 procedure is shown in the table (only figures from 1998 were readily available):

	Number of E112s issued
1998	813
1999	861
2000	1,099
2001	1,139
2002	1,120
2003	1,052
2004	353
2005	228
2006	357

Note:
The drop in referrals from 2004 is due to the change in European Commission healthcare rules that took place that year. Since 1 June 2004, patients no longer need an E112 for the on-going care of pre-existing medical conditions. This is now covered on the European Health Insurance Card.

Health: Standards

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what benchmarking she has (a) undertaken and (b) evaluated to assess the effectiveness of public health measures in the UK. [143007]

Caroline Flint: The Department has undertaken a range of benchmarking activities to assess the effectiveness of public health measures in the United Kingdom. Such benchmarking has shown that public health interventions can be effective in improving the health of the population and is provided through the national health service local delivery plan performance assessment system, nationally available public health data, National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence public health evidence reviews, and public health research and evaluation evidence.

Hearing Aids: Stoke-on-Trent

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the reasons are for the delay in commencing routine hearing aid assessments in Stoke-on-Trent by Mercury; what services she expects to be provided; what the timescale is for that provision; at what venues services will be provided; and if she will make a statement. [143945]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Mercury Health has a contract with the Department to provide a range of mobile diagnostic services for national health service patients, including audiology, at Stoke-on-Trent and another 50 sites across the West Midlands. Mercury has been working closely with local authorities across the West Midlands to achieve a number of planning consents to enable them to commence a service that offered the required geographical coverage.

The West Midlands diagnostic scheme is aimed at reducing waits and increasing choice for NHS patients. Service is due to commence in late June with the first audiology appointments in Stoke-on-Trent soon after. The service will include the assessment and fitting of digital hearing aids.

Hearing Aids: West Sussex

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the waiting time is for a digital hearing aid for those resident in the West Sussex area. [143986]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department does not collect data on waiting times for digital hearing aids.

Hearing Impaired: Copeland

Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people living in Copeland aged (a) under 18 and (b) over 18 years are registered as having impaired hearing. [143024]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information is not available in the format requested. The number of people registered deaf or hard of hearing in Cumbria as at March 2001, the most recent available data, is set out in the following table.

	Number
People registered as deaf by age
All ages	301
0 to 17	31
18 to 64	172
65 to 74	47
75 or over	51
People registered as hard of hearing	2,456

Hospital Beds

Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment her Department has made of the effect of bed blocking in the NHS on (a) the finances of the NHS, (b) operation waiting times and (c) the development and spread of hospital-acquired infections; and if she will make a statement; [142902]

(2) if she will publish a list detailing the current level of bed blocking within the NHS by (a) strategic health authority, (b) primary care trust, (c) acute hospital trust and (d) local authority area; [142903]

(3) what her estimate is of the cost of bed blocking to the NHS in each year since 1997; [142904]

(4) what steps her Department is taking to stop bed blocking in the NHS; [142906]

(5) how her Department is working with those local authorities which operate care homes for the elderly to reduce bed blocking in the NHS; and if she will make a statement; [142907]

(6) what assessment her Department has made of the effects of hospital bed blocking on (a) local authority run elderly care homes and (b) privately run elderly care homes in (i) England and (ii) Cumbria. [142934]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Government are committed to reducing the number of patients who are delayed in hospital, even though they are fit to be discharged. As part of the strategy to tackle this problem, since January 2004 if a patient is delayed in discharging from acute services solely because community care arrangements are lacking, the culpable local authority will have to reimburse the acute national health service trust.

In order to help councils with social services responsibility, whether or not they operate care homes for the elderly, £100 million has been transferred from the NHS for each year since 2003-04 to defray the cost of any reimbursements. Those councils that reduce the number of such delayed transfers can reinvest the money saved in alternative social services.

We have made no estimate of the cost of delayed discharges to the NHS, the effect on operation waiting times, or the development and spread of hospital-acquired infections.

We have made no assessment of the effect of delayed discharge by either local authority run, or privately run, elderly care homes. The latest available figures, for quarter 4 2006-07, detailing the number of delayed discharge cases for each primary care trust, have been placed in Library.

Hospitals: Mobile Phones

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what research has been carried out to quantify the effect of mobile telephone usage in different areas of the hospital environment; [143079]

(2) what assessment she has made of the areas of a hospital environment in which mobile telephone usage places patient safety at risk. [143270]

Caroline Flint: The Medical Devices Agency (now part of the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA)) conducted an extensive study into the effects of a wide range of mobile communication equipment on 178 different models of medical device in 1997. The results indicated that only 4 per cent. of the medical devices tested suffered interference from mobile phones at a distance of one metre, with less than 0.1 per cent. showing serious effects.

The results of this study were published in the Device Bulletin DB 9702 'Electromagnetic Compatibility of Medical Devices with Mobile Communications'. This advice has been reviewed on a regular basis by the MHRA since 1997.

An update document, SN 2001(06) was published in March 2001, which covered the potential interference with medical devices by TETRA radio systems employed by the emergency services and media broadcasts from hospital premises.

Most recently, the MHRA published guidance on its website in July 2004. This guidance advised that healthcare providers should actively manage the use of radio frequency spectrum on their own sites, and consider the potential effects of communication equipment on all medical devices.

The Department issued guidance on mobile phone usage in May 2007, available on the Department's website, which contains suggestions on where mobile phones should and should not be used.

Although each national health service trust must ultimately decide where mobile phones are and are not allowed the Department suggests that their usage, for safety, privacy and dignity and annoyance reasons, are not used in the following areas: on wards; intensive therapy units; operating theatres; maternity wards; special care baby units; children's wards/areas.

Subject to carrying out a risk assessment trusts may wish to consider allowing the use of mobile phones in the following areas: hospital reception and entrance areas; non-clinical communal areas which may including day rooms and cafe areas; specially designated rooms/areas; public corridors.

Hospitals: Waiting Lists

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Answer to the hon. Member for South Cambridgeshire of 8 May 2007, Official Report, column 149-50, on hospitals: waiting lists, in which month she expects to publish the requirements which will apply to the target date of December. [144133]

Andy Burnham: At the latest, the requirements for December 2008 will be published in December 2007.

Hyperactivity: Medical Treatments

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment has been made of the effectiveness of treating attention deficit hyperactivity disorder by means of medication alone; [144244]

(2) what clinical guidelines she has issued on the use of Ritalin to treat attention deficit hyperactivity disorder prior to the publication of the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence guidelines. [144245]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Prior to the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) issuing its original guideline on the use of methylphenidate (Ritalin) in October 2000 no clinical guidance had been issued, other than the prescribing guidance that comes with a licensed medicinal product.

In March 2006, NICE reviewed its earlier advice on methylphenidate and included in their guideline other drugs used to treat attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD)—atomoxetine and dexamphetamine. NICE has estimated that around 5 per cent. of school-aged children meet the diagnostic criteria for ADHD, equivalent to 366,000 children and adolescents in England and Wales, but not all these children will require medication.

Drug therapy should only be part of a comprehensive treatment programme that includes a range of social, psychological and behavioural interventions. These are mainly aimed at the child, but sometimes involve the parents and/or teachers. NICE has recommended that drug treatment for ADHD should only be initiated by an appropriately qualified healthcare professional with expertise in ADHD and should be based on a comprehensive assessment and diagnosis. Continued prescribing and monitoring of drug treatment may be performed by general practitioners, under shared care arrangements.

NICE is currently developing a clinical guideline on both the pharmacological and psychological interventions to treat ADHD. Publication of the guideline is expected in July 2008.

Independent Reconfiguration Panel

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether she plans to make rulings of the Independent Reconfiguration Panel binding; [144044]

(2) if she will make it her policy to allow local overview and scrutiny committees to refer plans to reconfigure local NHS services directly to the Independent Reconfiguration Panel. [144045]

Andy Burnham: The Independent Reconfiguration Panel (IRP) is an advisory non-departmental public body. The panel provides advice to Ministers on proposals for national health service change in England that have been referred to the Secretary of State by overview and scrutiny committees (OSCs).

The Government's response to the recent Health Select Committee report on patient and public involvement in the NHS states:

"it is for the Secretary of State to determine when she wishes to seek independent advice from the Independent Reconfiguration Panel (IRP)".

The IRP is also available to provide informal advice to organisations involved in developing proposals for NHS service change and is contacted each year by a number of NHS organisations, OSCs and other interested parties. In its informal role, the panel supports organisations in developing proposals for NHS service change and implementing good practice, thereby avoiding cases being contested and referred formally to the Secretary of State at a later date.

There are no plans to change the arrangements for handling referrals to the Secretary of State, nor the role of the IRP.

Infant Foods: Labelling

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action she is taking to encourage relevant authorities to prosecute companies that continue to make claims on infant formula labels and promotional material for baby milk which are non-compliant with current legislation. [143720]

Caroline Flint: The local authorities coordinators of regulatory services issued updated guidance in late 2006 to clarify the types of claims about infant formula that are prohibited. All local authority enforcement offices have been made aware of the new guidance and encouraged to enforce the United Kingdom legislation to ensure companies comply with the rules on claims.

IVF

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidance she has issued to primary care trusts on the provision of at least one cycle of IVF treatment in the case of individuals who meet the appropriate criteria for treatment; and if she will make a statement; [142437]

(2) what work has been undertaken between her Department and the Infertility Network UK to improve the extent of IVF treatment provision in the last 12 months; and if she will make a statement; [142438]

(3) whether she intends to review the operation of the social access criteria in the provision of IVF treatment by primary care trusts; and if she will make a statement; [142439]

(4) how many primary care trusts in England will provide (a) one, (b) more than one and (c) no cycle of IVF treatment to patients meeting the criteria for treatment; and if she will make a statement; [142440]

(5) what recent estimate has been made of the effect of primary care trust deficits on the local provision of IVF treatment to eligible patients; and if she will make a statement; [142441]

(6) whether she plans to publish a written response to the recent findings of the Infertility Network UK questionnaire to primary care trusts; and if she will make a statement. [142597]

Caroline Flint: In welcoming the clinical guideline published by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence in 2004, we advised that the Department would be looking to primary care trusts (PCTs) who provided no in-vitro fertilisation (IVF) treatment to meet a minimum level of one cycle of IVF by April 2005, and to make progress to the full implementation of the guideline in the longer term. We are funding the patient support organisation Infertility Network UK (I N UK) to help primary care trusts share best practice and engage with fertility patients in the planning and prioritisation of fertility services. The questionnaire issued to PCTs by I N UK will help to inform that work and we are discussing the findings with them. The primary responsibility for the provision of fertility services, including the application of social access criteria, rests with the national health service at local level and we have not collected data centrally. The need to restore financial balance has meant that a small number of primary care trusts have suspended the provision of IVF, and the reinstatement of the service is a matter for them, taking account of local circumstances.

Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will publish the minutes of the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation Human Papillomavirus sub-group held on 28 February; [143326]

(2) if she will publish the minutes of the meeting of the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation held on 14 February. [143327]

Caroline Flint: Copies will be placed in the Library when they have been agreed.

Junior Doctors: Pay

Mr. McGovern: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she plans to make available financial support to compensate junior doctors put at a financial disadvantage by the problems with the modernising the medical careers scheme. [143613]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 18 June 2007]: The Secretary of State has given a commitment to support doctors whose contracts come to an end during round two recruitment by ensuring that all applicants in substantive NHS employment will continue to have employment while they progress through the next round. Strategic health authorities have been asked to work with trusts and draw up plans to deliver this commitment.

Learning Disabilities: Life Expectancy

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the cost of a confidential inquiry into mortality of people with learning disabilities as suggested in "Valuing People" in 2001; and what assessment she has made of the merits of an inquiry into understanding and addressing health outcomes for people with a learning disability. [143303]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: "Valuing People" included a commitment to explore the feasibility of establishing a confidential inquiry into mortality among people with a learning disability.

The National Patient Safety Agency (NPSA) was commissioned by the Department to carry out this scoping study and did so during 2005-06. The NPSA presented the Department with a number of scenarios for carrying out a confidential inquiry, with estimated costs ranging between £2 million and £5 million over a three-year period.

Since that work was carried out, the Department has established an independent inquiry into the deaths of the six people named in Mencap's report, "Death by Indifference". In addition to the six cases, the independent inquiry will be identifying the action required to ensure that people with learning disabilities receive appropriate health care. The findings and recommendations of that inquiry will be used to inform a decision on whether to take forward a full confidential inquiry into mortality.

Macular Degeneration: Drugs

Martin Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will overrule the draft National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence guidelines approving the use of the drug Lucentis for only a limited proportion of the patients who suffer from wet age-related macular degeneration; and if she will make a statement. [143825]

Caroline Flint: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) is an independent body, established to issue evidence-based advice to the national health service on the clinical and cost-effectiveness of new and existing treatments. NICE has published for consultation its preliminary recommendations on the use of Macugen and Lucentis for the treatment of wet age-related macular degeneration. Stakeholders have until 5 July to submit comments to NICE, following which NICE's Appraisal Committee will formulate its final advice for the NHS.

The Department is a stakeholder in the guidance development process and will be submitting a response to NICE's consultation, but it would not be appropriate for Ministers to intervene in the conduct of a NICE appraisal.

Pending final guidance from NICE, NHS bodies should continue to make local decisions on the use of Lucentis and Macugen, taking account of the available evidence.

Maternity Services

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by what date each primary care trust must have produced their local strategy for meeting the guarantees made in maternity matters; if her Department will require that these local strategies are (a) placed on the internet and (b) otherwise made available to the public; and what assessment her Department plans to make of these strategies. [143626]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In maternity matters, we state that primary care trust (PCT) prospectuses would be published in autumn 2007. These prospectuses should include the PCT proposals for increasing choice and improving maternity services. It is for strategic health authorities (SHAs) to ensure that PCTs complete their prospectuses and publish them. Although the documents will be readily accessible to the public there is no requirement to publish on the internet. However, we understand that a number of PCTs plan to do so.

We have no plan to make any assessment other than to ensure that, via SHAs, the strategic needs assessments are completed.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 6 June 2007, Official Report, column 584W, on mothers: home help, how many hours per week of support the intensive nurse-led home visiting programme provides for each family. [144491]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Nurses in the family nurse partnership intervention pilot project visit each client during pregnancy and until the child's second birthday. Prenatal visits occur once a week for the first four weeks after enrolment, usually between 16 and 28 weeks into the pregnancy, then every other week for the rest of the pregnancy. After the baby is born, visits are increased again to once a week for the first six weeks, then level out at every other week until the child is 21 months old. Visits then continue once a month until the child's second birthday. Each visit is expected to last from one to one and a half hours.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 6 June 2007, Official Report, column 584W, on mothers: home help, on what date her Department (a) first announced and (b) first started testing the intensive nurse-led home visiting programme. [144492]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In "Reaching Out: An Action Plan on Social Exclusion" (September 2006) the Government announced a proposal to establish 10 pilot projects to test a specific model of intensive home visiting for vulnerable first time young mothers. The 10 sites began testing this model of intervention from April 2007.

Maternity Services: Banbury

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department expects the Oxford Radcliffe Hospitals NHS Trust to issue guidance to GPs in Banbury on which hospitals to refer expectant mothers. [144084]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: "Maternity Matters: Choice Access and Continuity of Care in a safe environment" has introduced a new national choice guarantee for women. This means that by 2009 all women will have choice in where and how they have their baby, and what pain relief to use, depending on their individual circumstances.

I understand Oxford Radcliffe Hospitals National Health Service Trust will work in accordance with the guidelines of "Maternity Matters" to ensure there is a clear understanding of the choice of local midwifery and obstetric services.

Maternity Services: St. Mary's Hospital

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what extra funding has been allocated for the Recurrent Miscarriage Unit at St. Mary's Hospital over the next 10 years; [143259]

(2) if she will make a statement on the future of the Recurrent Miscarriage Unit at Paddington Hospital. [143260]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This information requested is not held centrally. It is for primary care trusts to commission services to meet the needs of the communities that they serve.

The miscarriage unit at St. Mary's Hospital NHS Trust continues to provide this vital service.

Medical Treatments: British Nationality

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what entitlement British citizens who have recently returned from overseas have to treatment at GP surgeries. [144638]

Andy Burnham: The national health service is intended first and foremost for the benefit of people living in the United Kingdom. General practices have discretion over whom they register as a patient but people who are living lawfully in the UK and for a settled purpose, are entitled to register with a practice. This includes British citizens who have recently returned from overseas and who intend to settle here.

In addition, anyone, whether they are a UK resident or from overseas, who requires treatment which, in the clinical opinion of a general practitioner or health care professional, is an emergency or immediately necessary is entitled to receive that treatment free of charge irrespective of whether the person is registered with that practice.

Medicine: Training

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the Medical Training and Application Service's website in facilitating the application process for ST1-4 positions. [124741]

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment she has made of the operation of the Medical Training Application System; and if she will make a statement. [125093]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 7 March 2007]: On the 7 March we announced that a review of the recruitment processes into specialty training and the Medical Training Application Service (MTAS) would be undertaken by Professor Neil Douglas, Vice President of the Academy of Royal Colleges. Members of the review group included representatives of the Royal Colleges, the British Medical Association, the four United Kingdom Health Departments and NHS Employers.

In March we also conducted a high level review of the functionality of the MTAS system and whether it was delivering what it was designed to deliver. The conclusion was that the system met its specification, was stable, performed acceptably and contained the necessary functionality to be fit for the purpose for which it was designed.

The Review Group made a number of recommendations about the 2007 recruitment process after listening to concerns from doctors and in the light of its own work. These have been implemented including:

- giving all applicants in England at least one interview;
- making technical enhancements to MTAS;
- improving the helpdesk;
- improving the business processes within deaneries;
- establishing a deanery based process for matching applicants to training posts in Round 1, and
- that Round 2 should be managed locally.

After the security breaches in April we changed the way MTAS was used. Once a full security review deemed the MTAS site to be secure, it was re-opened on 4 May and restricted to postgraduate deaneries only, to support the next steps in the recruitment process. The system will continue to be used for national monitoring to ensure that training post are filled efficiently.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many applicants for ST1-4 positions were appointed to such positions through the late application process in the latest period for which figures are available. [124742]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This information is not collected centrally because we have not separately identified those applications that were part of the late application process.

Mental Health Services

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many secure places for psychiatric patients there are in hospitals in England. [137019]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The data collected records the numbers of mental health and learning disability secure unit beds in national health service units, not the numbers of psychiatric secure unit beds.

In 2005-06 (the latest period for which figures are available), there was an average daily number of 2,807 mental illness secure unit beds, and 526 learning disability secure unit beds in NHS units in England.

The source for these figures is the Department of Health Dataset KH03 and the definitions for the purposes of this collection are as follows.

These figures do not represent the full level of secure services available to the NHS. Low secure mental health services are not consistently defined and may well fall outside the following definitions. This means that the aforementioned figures mainly show the numbers in high and medium secure mental health services in NHS units. These figures also only show NHS beds and not those commissioned by the NHS and provided by independent sector providers.

The definitions of mental health and Learning Disability Secure Unit Beds, for the purposes of the KH03 annual beds collection, are:

Mental illness - other ages, secure unit

an age group intended of National Code 8 Any age, a broad patient group code of National Code 5 'Patients with mental illness' and a clinical care intensity of National Code 51 'for intensive care: specially designated ward for patients needing containment and more intensive management This is not to be confused with intensive nursing where a patient may require one to one nursing while on a standard ward'.

Learning disabilities—Other ages, Secure unit an age group intended of National Code 8 'Any age', a Broad Patient Group Code of National Code 6 'Patients with learning difficulties' and a clinical care intensity of National Code 61 'designated or interim secure unit'.

Mesothelioma: Drugs

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the likely cost per patient of providing the drug Alimta (Pemetrexed). [144018]

Andy Burnham: During the course of its appraisal of Alimta for malignant plural mesothelioma, the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence estimated the average cost of treatment at around £8,000 per patient, assuming five treatment cycles and based on the drug's published list price.

We have made no separate assessment.

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what budget has been allocated by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence for its appraisal of the drug Alimta (Pemetrexed). [144019]

Caroline Flint: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) does not allocate specific budgets for the conduct of individual appraisals. NICE's business plan for 2007-08 indicates that it has allocated around £3.3 million to its Centre for Health Technology Evaluation in the current financial year. In addition, NICE's appraisal work is supported by the National Health Service Health Technology Assessment programme, which is funded separately by the Department.

Midwives: Training

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average annual cost was to the public purse of training a midwifery student in each year since 1997. [141185]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The estimated average tuition costs for training midwifery students in each year since 1997-98 are shown in the following table, although the data collected have been based on different methodologies, therefore making comparisons difficult.

Average midwifery tuition costs from 1997-98 to 2007-08

Financial year	Average midwifery tuition costs (£)
1997-98	[1, 2]4,688
1998-99	[1]5,375
1999-2000	5,430
2000-01	5,877

2005-06	[2]6,442
2006-07	[3]7,632
2007-08	[3]7,838

[1] 1997-98 and 1998-99 figures are calculated using estimated bursary rates.
[2] 1997-98, 2004-05 and 2005-06 are forecasts (actual outturn was only collected from 1999 onwards and the last data collected was in November 2004 covering 2003-04 outturn).
[3] 2006-07 and 2007-08 figures are taken from the Benchmark Price .

In addition to tuition costs, midwifery trainees are entitled to either a bursary or salary support funding. The bursaries in 2007-08 outside London are £6,372 for diploma students and £2,231 for degree students.

Students may be entitled to other payments such as allowances for dependant children and the cost of national health service employees seconded onto midwifery training programmes will include a proportion of their salary costs.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent on midwifery training in each year since 1997; and how many students who qualified in each year are employed as midwives. [142319]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 12 June 2007]: The total cost of training student midwives for each year since 1997 is set out in the following table.

Total cost of training student midwives for each year since 1997

Financial year	Total cost (£ million)
1997-98	42.6
1998-99	34.6
1999-2000	45.6
2000-01	51.4
2001-02	58.7
2002-03	59.0
2003-04	65.8
2004-05	79.4
2005-06	82.2

Notes:
1. 1997-98, 2004-05 and 2005-06 are estimates (actual outturn was only collected from 1998-99 onwards). No data is available for 2006-07.
2. Data in the above time series is not strictly comparable due to changes in the way data was collected.
3. Average bursary costs for nurses and midwives added to tuition costs from 2000-01 onwards.
4. The Department does not collect centrally the number of students who qualified as midwives in each of these years.

Musculoskeletal Disorders

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what outcomes data underpins the musculoskeletal system problems (excluding trauma) category of the National Programme Budgeting Database; what proportion of expenditure in the category is covered by those outcomes; and whether additional outcome measures for musculoskeletal system problems are planned. [143328]

Andy Burnham: At present, no health outcomes data are provided in the musculoskeletal system problems section of the programme budgeting database. Two potential outcomes measures are under consideration for this programme: death within 30 days of admission and emergency readmission to hospital within 28 days of discharge.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis: Teesside

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many patients suffering from myalgic encephalomyelitis were referred to treatment centres in other areas of the UK by primary care trusts on Teesside in the last 12 months; [143432]

(2) what specialist services are provided by primary care trusts on Teesside for people suffering from myalgic encephalomyelitis; [143433]

(3) what assessment she has made of the adequacy of services for myalgic encephalomyelitis sufferer in Teesside. [143434]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Information on the number of patients suffering from myalgic encephalomyelitis (ME) that were referred to treatment centres in other areas of the United Kingdom is not collected centrally.

It is the responsibility of local primary care trusts to commission services, including chronic fatigue syndrome/ME services, according to the health needs of their populations and taking into account the resources available. It is for strategic health authorities to performance manage and ensure the development of well planned, good quality health services that meet the needs of local people.

NHS Alliance

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding was provided to the NHS Alliance from (a) her Department's budget and (b) the NHS budget in each financial year since 1997-98. [112387]

Andy Burnham: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 18 June 2007, Official Report, column 156W.

NHS Confederation

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on which projects the Government is co-operating with the NHS Confederation. [118923]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 5 February 2007]: The Department has a wide range of contacts with the NHS Confederation as a major stakeholder in the development of the national health service and NHS policy.

The Department has a contract with NHS Employers, which is part of the NHS Confederation, to provide employers' organisation services such as pay negotiations for NHS staff and the provision of guidance and support on good employment practice.

NHS: Armed Forces

Mr. Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) doctors and (b) other medical staff from the NHS are currently serving in the armed forces. [142128]

Derek Twigg: I have been asked to reply.

As of the 12 June 2007 there were 15 doctors and 59 other medical staff from the NHS who are also members of our reserve forces and mobilised.

NHS: Finance

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the estimated cost to the NHS is expected to be of implementing agenda for change in each of the years to 2011-12. [135767]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The estimated cost to the national health service of implementing agenda for change in each of the years up to 2007-08 is:

	£ million
2004-05	590
2005-06	1,060
2006-07	1,390
2007-08	1,780

Estimates beyond 2007-08 are not available at present.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of funding for the NHS was spent on staff whose roles do not involve providing care for patients in the latest period for which figures are available. [139800]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not collected in the format requested. However, it is possible to illustrate the total amount spent on the pay of non-clinical national health service staff as a percentage of the total NHS budget. The total pay bill for non-clinical staff in 2005-06 (the latest year for which we have data) was £6,824 million which was 9.3 per cent. of the total NHS net spend of £73,677 billion for that year.

NHS: Homeopathy

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients used NHS homeopathic services in each primary care trust in each year since 1997. [144640]

Caroline Flint: This information is not collected centrally as the Government consider that decision-making on individual clinical interventions, whether conventional, or complementary/alternative treatments, have to be a matter for local national health service providers and practitioners as they are best placed to know their community's needs. In making such decisions, they have to take into account evidence for the safety, clinical and cost-effectiveness of any treatments, the availability of suitably qualified practitioners, and the needs of the individual patient.

The Department recognises that the health needs of a community can differ from area to area and primary care trusts would reflect these needs in developing policies on the commissioning and funding of any treatments or services.

NHS: Procurement

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) pursuant to the answer of 16 April 2007, Official Report, column 372W, on NHS: procurement, how many NHS Supply Chain clinical councils there are; and what areas of healthcare procurement they advise on; [143935]

(2) what criteria are used for the appointment of members of NHS Supply Chain clinical councils; and what appointments have been made; [143936]

(3) pursuant to the answer of 16 April 2007, Official Report, column 372W, on NHS: procurement, what (a) resources and (b) information are available to members of NHS Supply Chain clinical councils in their evaluation of the product requirements of the NHS. [143937]

Andy Burnham: NHS Supply Chain is currently devising product councils that will cover its major product categories. The first two councils will cover the areas of theatre and nursing and it is expected that they be set up towards the end of this year.

No appointments have been made yet. The appointment criteria for product council members will cover the level of experience of each applicant, including both academic qualifications and clinical experience in the field. Decisions will be made based on the application form and curriculum vitae of each applicant.

As the product councils are not yet operating, resources and information about the evaluation of national health service product requirements are not yet available.

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 13 March 2007, Official Report, column 341W, on NHS: procurement, what non-financial aspects of quality assessment are used by NHS Supply Chain in tender evaluations in addition to National Institute of Health and Clinical Excellence guidelines. [143938]

Andy Burnham: NHS Supply Chain employs a number of qualitative measures during the tender evaluation process. Owing to the complexity and variety of products and services within the NHS supplies market, these are determined on a case by case basis against the background of the specific category market. As a rule the measures will include requests for evidence of quality testing that meets relevant British, European or international standards, independent testing, product evaluation by clinicians, caterers or other end users. NHS Supply Chain will also facilitate product trials with national health service trusts where possible.

Evidence of suppliers' quality control systems are also reviewed and NHS Supply Chain actively monitors existing suppliers' delivery performance and product quality during the life of the contract to ensure that the NHS secures reliable and consistent supply of effective, value for money products for use in patient care.

NHS: Stoke-on-Trent

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will review the adequacy of (a) the pool budget allocation for Stoke-on-Trent and (b) the formula on which the funding is allocated. [143347]

Caroline Flint: Decisions regarding pooled drug treatment budget (PTB) allocations beyond 2008 have yet to be made.

The allocation process for 2007-08 involved an element of re-distribution to narrow the differing PTB spend per head within each drug partnership area. Stoke-on-Trent were allocated a 7 per cent. PTB increase from 2006-07, an overall increase of 35 per cent. in the last two years.

NHS: Surrey

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the impact which the NHS funding formula has had on NHS deficits within Surrey; and if she will make a statement. [143281]

Caroline Flint: The Department's director general of finance commissioned a report from the chief economic adviser to consider potential causes for the emergence of national health service deficits. The report "Explaining NHS Deficits 2003-04 to 2005-06" was published on 20 February 2007.

The report discusses purported explanations for the timing, geographical patterns and organisational structure of NHS deficits. The report shows that the resource allocation funding formula did not play a significant role in causing aggregate NHS deficits in the years in which this formula was used to allocate funding.

Copies of the report are available in the Library.

NHS: Training

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how her Department monitors spending on training for NHS staff. [144043]

Andy Burnham: The Department monitor spend on training for national health service staff via biannual monitoring returns.

The returns are completed by strategic health authorities (SHAs) at the end of quarter two and outturn at quarter four. They include information on how much each SHA spends on training medical and dental undergraduates, medical and dental postgraduates and their non-medical professional workforce.

This monitoring process only covers posts that are funded from the multi professional education and training budget and NHS trusts will also invest in training their own staff, however, this information is not held centrally.

Nurses: Redundancy

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS nurses applied for voluntary redundancy in 2006; and what the cost of those redundancies was. [134781]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not collect centrally the number of nurses who apply for voluntary redundancy.

However, since April 2006 we have collected information centrally on the number who were offered and have taken voluntary redundancy.

There were 118 nurses who decided to take voluntary redundancy in the 12 months to 31 March 2007.

The cost of these redundancies was not collected centrally.

Palliative Care: Children

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the timetable is for publishing her Department's response to the independent review of children's palliative care services; and if she will make a statement. [141678]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department will publish a response later in the year.

Palliative Care: Finance

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much her Department provided in exceptional allocation monies for specialist palliative care in Gloucestershire in each of the last three years for which figures are available; [143696]

(2) what steps she is taking to ensure that exceptional allocation monies for specialist palliative care services are spent on those services; and if she will make a statement. [143697]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answers 18 June 2007]: Ministers set up a central budget of £50 million per annum for specialist palliative care for the three years beginning 2003-04. Gloucestershire Primary Care Trust (PCT) is part of the Three Counties Cancer Network which received £928,000 per annum between 2003-04 and 2005-06. The Department does not have figures for individual PCTs. The £50 million was made recurrent in PCT baseline allocations from 2006-07.

PCTs are responsible within the national health service for commissioning and funding services for their resident population, including end of life care. It is for PCTs to determine how to use the funding allocated to them to meet the healthcare needs of their local populations.

Pregnancy: Stress

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research has been (a) funded and (b) carried out by her Department into stress in unborn children; when her Department last undertook an evidence review on the issue that drew on (i) UK and (ii) international research; and if she will make a statement. [142834]

Caroline Flint: The Department's National Institute for Health Research has recently awarded funding for a trial of the use of the hyperemesis impact of symptoms score for individualised assessment and management of the symptoms of hyperemesis gravidarum. Research on fetal and birth stress also forms part of the work programme of the Hammersmith and St. Mary's and Imperial College Biomedical Research Centre which the Department is funding from April 2007.

Over the last 10 years, the main part of the Department's total expenditure on health research has been devolved to and managed by national health service organisations. Details of individual NHS supported research projects including a number concerned with fetal stress are available on the national research register at www.dh.gov.uk/research.

The Department has not undertaken an evidence review of the sort to which the hon. Member refers.

Pregnant Women: Alcoholic Drinks

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the new advice on pregnant women and alcohol was submitted for ministerial approval. [142071]

Caroline Flint: I have agreed the new advice on pregnant women with four United Kingdom chief medical officers.

Prescriptions: Carlisle

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many prescriptions for (a) diamorphine and (b) methadone were dispensed in Carlisle constituency in each year since 2003; and if she will make a statement. [143217]

Caroline Flint: The information is not available in the requested format. The data provided in the following tables are for the number of items prescribed for diamorphine hydrochloride and methadone hydrochloride in the former Carlisle and District Primary Care Trust (PCT) and Cumbria PCT (after October 2006).

Diamorphine hydrochloride (British National Formulary (BNF) codes 3.9.1 and 4.7.2)

	Prescriber name	Total items diamorphine hydrochloride
2003	Carlisle and District PCT	467
2004	Carlisle and District PCT	489
2005	Carlisle and District PCT	343
2006	Carlisle and District PCT	292
2006	Cumbria PCT[1]	424

Methadone hydrochloride (British National Formulary codes 3.9.1 and 4.7.2 and 4.10)

	Prescriber name	Total items methadone hydrochloride
2003	Carlisle and District PCT	1,436
2004	Carlisle and District PCT	1,466
2005	Carlisle and District PCT	1,622
2006	Carlisle and District PCT	1,331
2006	Cumbria PCT[1]	4,342

[1] Cumbria PCT was formed in October 2006 and consists of Carlisle and District PCT, Eden Valley PCT, West Cumbria PCT and part of Morecambe Bay PCT.

ePACT Data

This information was obtained from the prescribing analysis and cost tool (PACT) system, which covers prescriptions prescribed by general practitioners, nurses, pharmacists and others in England and dispensed in the community in the United Kingdom. For data at PCT level, prescriptions written by a prescriber located in a particular PCT but dispensed outside that PCT will be included in the PCT in which the prescriber is based. Prescriptions written in England but dispensed outside England are included. Prescriptions written in hospitals/clinics that are dispensed in the community, prescriptions dispensed in hospitals and private prescriptions are not included in PACT data. It is important to note this as some BNF sections have a high proportion of prescriptions written in hospitals that are dispensed in the community.

For example, BNF chapter 4, Central Nervous System, has a fair proportion of items written in mental health clinics that are dispensed in the community—these prescriptions are not included in PACT data.

Prescription items

Prescriptions are written on a prescription form known as a FP10. Each single item written on the form is counted as a prescription item.

PCT level data

A PCT will only appear in the PACT system if a prescription has been made within the time period that the data spans. Hence, the total number of PCTs will vary for different BNF chapters/sections. Blank fields are indicative of PCTs which have ceased to exist (or come into existence) either because they have merged with one or more other PCTs or have been officially renamed during the time period for which data has been requested.

The sum of the data for all PCTs does not equal the total England figure, because the total England figure includes unidentified Doctors (not possible for the Prescriptions Pricing Division to allocate to a PCT).

BNF classifications

The prescription cost analysis system uses the therapeutic classifications defined in the BNF. No information on why a drug is prescribed is available and since drugs can be prescribed to treat more than one condition it is impossible to separate the different conditions that a drug was prescribed for.

Psychology: Waiting Lists

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to reduce the waiting time for primary care psychological therapy services for residents of Altrincham and Sale West to less than 6 months. [139187]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Trafford Primary Care Trust (PCT) is putting in place a range of measures to reduce waiting times for psychological therapy services. These include establishing joint working practices across primary care mental health services and primary care psychology services, setting up a single point of access to services and introducing an improved waiting list management service.

We made a manifesto commitment in 2005 to increase the provision of psychological therapies. This followed 2001 Department guidelines on treatment choice in psychological therapies and 2004 guidance, "Organising and Delivering Psychological Therapies", to help local services to understand best practice and how to organise local services to support access. Last year we embarked on a new programme, Improving Access to Psychological Therapies, to provide more effective and timely access to psychological therapies for people with mild to moderate mental health problems, such as anxiety and depression.

Research: Heart Diseases

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much her Department spent on research into (a) coronary heart disease, (b) cancer and (c) stroke and stroke related problems in each of the last 10 years. [144055]

Caroline Flint: The available information is shown in the table.

Over the last 10 years, the main part of the Department's total expenditure on health research has been devolved to and managed by national health service organisations. Those organisations have since 2001-02 accounted for their use of the allocations they have received from the Department in an annual research and development report. The reports identify total, aggregated expenditure on a number of national priority areas, including cancer and coronary heart disease.

The Department does not routinely collect expenditure data at the level that would be required to answer the third part of the hon. Gentleman's question.

Details of individual projects supported in the NHS can be found on the national research register at www.dh.gov.uk/research.

School Fruit and Vegetable Scheme: Pre-School Education

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will extend the National School Fruit and Vegetable Scheme to children in (a) pre-school and nursery environments and (b) formal education beyond the age of six years. [144164]

Caroline Flint: The school fruit and vegetable scheme (SFVS) is a school-based scheme, which provides a free piece of fruit or vegetable every day to children aged four to six years (and any other children in the same class) attending a participating local education authority maintained infant, primary or special school.

In setting the eligibility criteria, we sought to draw the lines in a way which are fair and practical focusing on the first years of education in school The decision to base eligibility by class or school grouping and not strictly by age has the key benefit that all children in a class participate.

The SFVS is part of a wider strategy to improve children's diets, supporting the improvements we are making to school food and the healthy eating theme of the healthy schools programme . We have no plans to extend the SFVS at present.

Sight Impaired: Lancashire

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in West Lancashire constituency were registered as blind in each year since 1997. [143523]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information is not available in the requested format. Data are collected from councils with social services responsibilities and are not available at constituency level. The number of severely sight impaired people registered is collected every three years. The information for those registered as severely sight impaired in Lancashire county council and successor organisations since 1997 is shown in the following table.

Number of people registered as severely sight impaired in Lancashire from 1997 to 2006

				Rounded numbers
	1997	2000	2003	2006
Lancashire[1]	5,100	5,050	5,070	4,910
Lancashire (remaining)	—	3,930	3,920	3,750
Blackburn and Darwen	—	570	550	530
Blackpool	—	540	600	640

[1] In 1997 Lancashire consisted of Lancashire, Blackburn and Darwen, and Blackpool. Figures have been provided on a consistent basis for comparison.

Notes:

These data are compiled from the triennial return SSDA 902 submitted by councils to the Information Centre for health and social care. There has been a change in the terminology of the registers, blind and partial sight should now be expressed as severely sight impaired (blind) and sight impaired (partially sighted).

Registration of blindness is voluntary. However, it is a pre-condition for the receipt of certain financial benefits. It is this factor which gives greater credibility to the "Register of the Severely Sight Impaired" than to the "Register of the Sight Impaired" and to other disability registration records maintained by councils, where the voluntary principle also applies. Registration is not, however, a pre-requisite for certain social services concessions and this factor, combined with uncertainties about the regularity with which the councils review and update their records, makes it difficult to assign a degree of reliability to either of these registers.

For people to be registered as severely or partially sight impaired they must first undergo an examination by a consultant ophthalmologist. The consultant records his or her findings on the Certificate of Visual Impairment (CVI) formerly the BD8, on which the consultant also certifies whether or not the person meets the statutory definition of blindness or the non-statutory definition of partial sight.

The statutory definition of blindness is that a person should be "so blind as to be unable to perform any work for which eyesight is essential".

Smoking

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines have been issued on how funding allocated to local authorities for extra activity brought about by the smoking ban should be spent. [144172]

Caroline Flint: The anticipated costs and benefits of smoke-free legislation is set out in the Departments final Regulatory Impact Assessment published in December 2006. Copies are available in the Library.

I refer the hon. member to the answer given on 5 March 2007, Official Report, column 1698W for details on funding for local authorities.

The Government provide funding for local authorities' new responsibilities to build compliance and, where necessary, enforce smoke-free legislation under the principles of the New Burdens Doctrine by way of a non-ringfenced grant. The grant has been made in line with the Government's commitment to provide freedom for local authorities in the allocation of their budgets.

South Warwickshire General Hospitals NHS Trust: Finance

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what level of (a) weighted and (b) unweighted funding per patient (i) South Warwickshire General Hospitals NHS Trust and (ii) Oxford Radcliffe Hospitals NHS Trust received in the last year for which figures are available. [144083]

Andy Burnham: The Department makes revenue allocations to primary care trusts (PCTs), but not to national health service trusts. South Warwickshire General Hospitals NHS Trust is in Warwickshire PCT and Oxford Radcliffe Hospitals NHS Trust is in Oxfordshire PCT. The weighted and unweighted revenue allocations per head of population for Warwickshire PCT and Oxfordshire PCT in 2007-08 are provided, therefore, in the following table.

	2007-08
	Allocation per unweighted head (£)	Allocation per weighted head (£)
Warwickshire PCT	1,241	1,355
Oxfordshire PCT	1,171	1,389

Standards: Pharmacy

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many medicine use reviews were undertaken in each of the last 10 years, broken down by primary care trust. [142487]

Caroline Flint: Medicine use reviews (MURs) were introduced on 1 April 2005 as an advanced service within the new contractual framework for community pharmacy, provided by accredited pharmacists in premises that had been accredited. Data on the number of MURs that pharmacists provided in the first year of the schemes operation, April 2005 to March 2006, were published in table 10 of the bulletin "General Pharmaceutical Services in England and Wales 1996-97 to 2005-06" published by the Information Centre for health and social care in 2006. A copy is available in the Library. Similar data for the period April 2006 to March 2007 will be published later this year. An advance copy is being placed in the Library. The total number of MURs for 2005-06 and 2006-07 were 150,000 and 560,000 respectively.

Tomography: Waiting Lists

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time was for patients to receive (a) CT, (b) MRI and (c) PET scans in each year since 2000, broken down by health authority. [142978]

Andy Burnham: Collection of data on waiting times for 15 key diagnostic tests began in 2006. Median waiting times for MRI and CT scans in April 2006 and April 2007 are shown in the table. The heading CT includes PET CT.

Vaccinations: Side Effects

Ian Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for how many past years her Department holds records of numbers of (a) reported adverse reactions to vaccines and (b) deaths attributed to vaccinations. [143200]

Caroline Flint: The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (formally known as the Medicines Control Agency, and previously the Medicines Division of the Department of Health) has been collecting reports of suspected adverse reactions (ADRs) to medicines and vaccines and any deaths associated with them for 43 years via the Yellow Card Scheme. The scheme records information from health care professionals and patients with a suspicion that an ADR may be related to a drug or vaccine, and has been in operation since 1964.

CJD: Blood

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many blood samples from haemophiliacs have been made available to the National Institute for Biological Standards and Control for research into prototype vCJD blood tests; on what dates such samples were made available; and if she will make a statement. [142986]

Caroline Flint: None.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many samples of blood from haemophiliacs are being used in research to test for vCJD; and if she will make a statement. [142987]

Caroline Flint: We are not aware of any blood samples from haemophiliacs currently in such use. No samples would be used without ensuring compliance with appropriate ethical and legal processes.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the batches of blood products administered to patients in the UK that are known to be at risk from vCJD contamination; and if she will make a statement. [142988]

Caroline Flint: In September 2004 selected groups of patients were informed about the results of a risk assessment exercise for blood plasma products, undertaken by the Health Protection Agency. As part of this exercise, the batch numbers for plasma products implicated with variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease were sent to national health service trusts, primary care trusts and to the United Kingdom Haemophilia Centre Doctors Organisation.

X-rays

John Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact of strategic health authority mergers on (a) access to and (b) use of, the £3 million capital allocation to purchase dual X-ray absorptiometry scans from the private sector; and if she will make a statement. [140505]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department has not made an assessment of the impact of strategic health authority mergers on the access to, and use of, the £3 million capital allocation to purchase dual X-ray absorptiometry scans from the private sector. The Department no longer views the detailed monitoring of cash allocations as the best way forward. Instead, we are focusing on benefits to patients and the national health service, and in terms of DEXA scanning this has meant activity to reduce waiting times.

Information on how many people are waiting for a range of diagnostic tests, and for how long they are waiting has been published since January 2006. It is available at:

www.performance.doh.gov.uk.

It shows that the number of people waiting more than 13 weeks for a DEXA scan has fallen from 9,356 in January 2006 to just 683 in April 2007, including a fall in the number of people waiting over 26 weeks from 3,837 to 14.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Antisocial Behaviour: Middlesbrough

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many families in Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland have been involved in the Family Intervention Project. [143421]

Mr. Coaker: On 19 June 2007 there were 16 families working with the Middlesbrough Family Intervention Project (FIP). This project covers the constituency area of Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland.

Asylum

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 28 February 2007, Official Report, column 1351W, on asylum, what the normal criteria are for the allocation of cases between regions; what the regional strategic co-ordination arrangements are; and who makes the decisions on allocation. [130034]

Mr. Byrne: In each case, the Border and Immigration Agency first establishes whether there are special circumstances that would require an applicant to be housed in London or in a specific location outside London (for example if a medical condition was treatable only in a limited number of hospitals in the UK). If no such circumstances exist, asylum applicants who require accommodation are allocated to a case owner in one of the Border and Immigration Agency's regions outside London. This reflects the Border and Immigration Agency's policy of housing destitute asylum seekers away from London and the South East in places where accommodation is more freely available and in a manner which represents better value for money for the taxpayer.

Once any special circumstances have been ruled out, the decision to allocate to a particular region is made by the Border and Immigration Agency staff and is based upon a complex algorithm incorporating information on the availability of accommodation, the numbers of asylum seekers already housed in that region, the need to ensure each accommodation provider receives an equitable share of the Border and Immigration Agency business and the availability of the Border and Immigration Agency caseowner resource in that region.

Once an applicant has been allocated to a particular region, the accommodation provider then has some latitude as to in which town or city in that region the applicant is housed. The Regional Strategic Coordination Groups are a forum through which local authorities, accommodation providers, the Border and Immigration Agency and other key players should be able to influence, over time, the spread of the available accommodation within that region.

Asylum: Afghanistan

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for asylum were received from nationals of Afghanistan in each year since 1997; how many of these applications were (a) approved and (b) refused and resulted in deportations; and if he will make a statement. [142790]

Mr. Byrne: Information on how many Afghan asylum applications received in each year since 1997 that have been subsequently approved, rejected or deported is not available.

Information on asylum applications, initial decisions, appeals and removals for nationals of Afghanistan are published quarterly and annually. Copies of these publications are available from the Library of the House and from the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Asylum: Bassetlaw

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers are living in Bassetlaw constituency. [138823]

Mr. Byrne: Statistics on the location of asylum seekers in the UK are linked to the available information on the support that the asylum seeker receives.

As at the end of March 2007, there were no asylum seekers recorded as receiving asylum support in the Bassetlaw constituency. This figure excludes those asylum seekers who are living in the Bassetlaw constituency but are not receiving support from Border and Immigration Agency.

The numbers of asylum seekers in receipt of support from Border and Immigration Agency, broken down by Government office region and local authority, are published on a quarterly and annual basis. Copies of these publications are available from the Library of the House and from the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Further breakdowns of those in receipt of support from Border and Immigration Agency by parliamentary constituency are also available from the Library of the House.

Asylum: Belarus

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for asylum were received from nationals of Belarus in each year since 1997; and how many of these applications were (a) approved and (b) refused and resulted in deportations. [143361]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 18 June 2007]: The information requested could be obtained only by the detailed examination of individual case records at disproportionate cost.

Information on the number of Belarusian asylum applications received in each year since 1997 is shown in the following table.

Asylum: Deportation

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people against whom removal proceedings were commenced were detained in an immigration centre prior to their removal in each month of the last two years; and what percentage this represents of the total number of people against whom removal proceedings were commenced in each month. [123535]

John Reid: The accompanying tables show the number of persons recorded as leaving detention solely under Immigration Act powers in order to be removed from the UK in 2005 and in each of the first three quarters of 2006.

Data on the total number of persons against whom removal proceedings were commenced are not available; they could be obtained through examination of individual records only at disproportionate cost.

Asylum: English Language

Mr. Leech: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with ministerial colleagues in the Department for Work and Pensions on the effect of withdrawing free English classes for asylum seekers on the level of support such people will need in finding employment once leave to remain has been granted. [125547]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Office was naturally consulted by the Department for Education and Skills on the proposals to vary the Learning and Skills Council's funding criteria for ESOL (English for Speakers of Other Languages) classes. While most asylum seekers are not granted leave to remain, we have recently consulted widely on new arrangements to help those who are accepted as refugees to integrate into British life, including acquisition of English language skills and entry into employment.

Asylum: Iran

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for asylum were received from nationals of Iran in each year since 1997; how many of these applications were (a) approved and (b) refused and resulted in deportations; and if he will make a statement. [142791]

Asylum: Iraq

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Iraqi asylum seekers, who have been unsuccessful in their appeal to remain, remain in this country. [142466]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 15 June 2007]: As the Home Secretary set out in his evidence to the Home Affairs Select Committee on 23 May 2006, following the dismantling of embarkation controls beginning in 1994, no Government have been able to produce an accurate figure for the number of people who are in the country illegally, and that remains the case. The Home Secretary has set a clear goal of reintroducing systems to count everyone in and out of Britain.

Furthermore, those making an asylum claim can leave the country voluntarily at any stage of their claim without informing the authorities.

It follows that we cannot know the number of Iraqi asylum seekers who have been unsuccessful in their appeal who remain in the UK.

Published statistics on immigration and asylum are available on the Home Office's Research, Development and Statistics website:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for asylum

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many decisions were taken by the Government on asylum applications by Iraqi nationals in 2006, broken down by (i) Geneva convention status, (ii) humanitarian status and other authorisations to remain and (iii) rejections. [143971]

Mr. Byrne: Information on asylum applications, initial decisions and appeals for nationals of Iraq is shown in the following table. Initial decisions do not necessarily relate to applications made in the same period. Appeal determinations do not necessarily relate to initial decisions made in the same period.

Information on asylum applications, initial decisions and appeals for nationals of Iraq is, however, published quarterly and annually. Copies of these publications are available from the Library of the House and from the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics website at:

Bichard Inquiry

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost was of the 2004 Bichard inquiry. [143724]

Mr. McNulty: The Bichard inquiry (2004) was an independent public inquiry chaired by Sir Michael Bichard. Sir Michael stated the cost of his inquiry to be of the order of £2 million.

Budd Inquiry

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost was of the 2004 Budd inquiry. [143725]

Mr. Byrne: A total figure for the cost of the 2004 Budd inquiry was not recorded.

The Home Office provided Sir Alan Budd with secretarial support, an official at higher executive officer level and any material that he requested.

Sir Alan was not remunerated for his investigation but the Home Office did reimburse him for expenses related to the conduct of it.

The final report was printed and published by the Stationery Office under the authority of the House of Commons. The Home Office paid for the printing of the report and copies.

Burglary

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many domestic burglaries there were in (a) Bridgend constituency, (b) the South Wales Police Authority area, (c) Wales and (d) England in each of the last 10 years. [144295]

2005-06	404	5,747	10,009	290,542

[1] The National Crime Recording Standard was introduced nationally in April 2002. Figures after that date are therefore not directly comparable with those for earlier years.

Burglary: Convictions

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many burglaries were committed in each year since 1997; and in how many of these cases a conviction was secured. [144135]

Mr. McNulty: The statistics are not available in the form requested. Recorded burglary statistics relate to offences and convictions data relate to offenders. In addition, recorded crime data are published on a financial year basis and conviction data are published on a calendar year basis. For these reasons, the two data sources are therefore not directly comparable.

Figures for burglary offences recorded by the police are published in Table 2.04 of "Crime in England and Wales 2005/06" and can be accessed at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs06/hosb1206chap2a.xls

Data on the number of defendants found guilty of burglary, for the years 1997 to 2005 in England and Wales, have been provided by the Ministry of Justice and are given in the following table. Information for 2006 will be available in the autumn.

Number of defendants found guilty at all courts for burglary, England and Wales, 1997 to 2005[1, 2, 3]

Number

1997	31,703
1998	30,769

2002	26,691
2003	25,726
2004	24,252
2005	22,951

[1] These data are on the principal offence basis.

[2] Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the police forces and courts. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.

[3] Staffordshire police force were only able to supply a sample of data for magistrates' courts proceedings covering one full week in each quarter for 2000. Estimates based on this sample are included in the figures, as they are considered sufficiently robust at this high level of analysis.

Closed Circuit Television

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department plans to publish its report on future CCTV strategy. [143190]

John Reid: The National CCTV Strategy is currently planned for publication during the summer of 2007.

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the reasons are for the delay in publishing the report on the future CCTV strategy. [143191]

John Reid: The publication of the CCTV strategy has been delayed because of the need for further consultation with key stakeholders; in particular to allow them to comment on the draft report and for those comments to be properly considered.

Community Support Officers: Greater London

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how (1) many police community support officers are assigned to each ward in each London borough; [143019]

(2) how many police community support officers have been assigned to each London borough without safer neighbourhood teams; [143022]

(3) how many police community support officers have been (a) requested by and (b) assigned to each London borough. [143036]

Mr. McNulty: Data on police strength are not available at the ward level. The available data for police community support officer (PCSO) strength for each London borough are by basic command unit (BCU) of the Metropolitan Police Service (MRS). These data are given in the table. The boundaries of London boroughs are coterminous with those of the BCUs within the MPS.

Every BCU in the MPS has safer neighbourhood teams (SNTs). There are 630 SNTs in the MPS covering all 624 wards across the MPS. Every team has at least one sergeant, two constables and three PCSOs.

The number of PCSOs requested by each London borough is not collected centrally within police personnel statistics. The number of PCSOs assigned to each London borough is available in the form previously described, and is given in the following table.

Crime: Middlesbrough

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the contribution of the Alleygate scheme in Middlesbrough towards reducing crime. [143565]

Mr. Coaker: The Home Office has not undertaken an assessment of the contribution of the Alleygate scheme in Middlesbrough towards reducing crime. Alleygating schemes are local initiatives, implemented based on local priorities and therefore an assessment of the contribution of such a scheme is a matter for local agencies.

Alleygating is one of a number of ways of incorporating crime prevention measures into existing environments. We are also working with a range of partners including Communities and Local Government, local authorities, architects, designers, builders and others to ensure that when new buildings or communities are planned they are well designed places where crime prevention is taken into account from the outset so that crime and disorder or the fear of crime do not undermine quality of life or community cohesion.

Departments: Internet

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has held on changes to the (a) design and (b) layout of his Department's website. [143246]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Office site was redesigned 18 months ago and has subsequently been successful in two pan-government web awards.

However, we are reviewing design and information architecture as part of our response to the Varney report, which made recommendations for the better delivery of Government web services.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to improve the (a) quality and (b) quantity of information provided on his Department's website. [143247]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Office site was redesigned 18 months ago and has subsequently been successful in two pan-government web awards.

However, in line with the Varney report, which made recommendations for the better delivery of Government web services, we are reviewing content with a view to moving appropriate content to the Direct.gov and Business link sites.

Departments: Ministerial Policy Advisers

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of his Department's special advisers were on (a) paid and (b) unpaid leave in order to assist with party political matters under section 22 (iii) of the code of conduct for special advisers on 16 May; and how many days' leave each adviser was granted. [140116]

Mr. Byrne: None of the special advisers was on leave on 16 May.

Departments: Official Residences

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the official ministerial residences allocated to Ministers in his Department; and what the total annual cost is of running each. [141958]

Mr. Byrne: No Ministers in the Home Office are allocated a ministerial residence.

Departments: Property

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent estimate has been made of the value of the Department's property portfolio. [139376]

Mr. Byrne: Asset valuations are carried out at five-yearly intervals in accordance with Government accounting requirements. The estimate applicable on 1 April 2007 was £5,931 million based on valuations carried out from 31 March 2004 to 1 April 2007. This includes property transferred to the Ministry of Justice on 9 May 2007. The estimated value of the Home Office estate that did not transfer to Ministry of Justice was £209 million.

Home Office estate estimated values—March 2007

Type of property	£ million Estimated value
Home Office excl. NOMS	209
NOMS Prisons including married quarters and farms	5,479
NOMS Other	243
Total	5,931

Departments: Sick Leave

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what average number of days per year was taken by staff in his Department as sick leave in each of the last five years for which records are available. [143056]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is given in the following table:

Working days lost to sickness per FTE staff per year

Business area	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06	2006-07

Deportation

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been deported under section 97A of the Immigration, Asylum and Nationality Act 2006. [143604]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 18 June 2007]: No one has yet been deported following certification under this provision.

Deportation: Afghanistan

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many case studies were carried out monitoring the safety of women deported to Afghanistan in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [142272]

Mr. Byrne: There have been no enforced removals of women to Afghanistan in the last five years so no case studies have been undertaken.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the safety of single women whose asylum claims have failed and who have no family ties who have been deported to Afghanistan. [142273]

Mr. Byrne: There have been no enforced removals of single women without family ties to Afghanistan in recent years so no such assessment has been made.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many single women whose asylum claims had failed were deported to Afghanistan in each of the last five years for which records are available. [142275]

Mr. Byrne: There have been no enforced removals of single women to Afghanistan in the last five years.

Detainees

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which countries have been passed information about detained asylum seekers originating from those countries in the last 12 months. [141404]

John Reid: The Border and Immigration Agency does not disclose information to other countries which would identify someone as an asylum applicant.

When communicating with foreign embassies for the purpose of re-documentation the Border and Immigration Agency will only inform them that we believe the person to be one of their nationals and they have no legal basis to be in the United Kingdom.

Detention Centres: Manpower

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his Department has a target for the staff-to-detainee ratio in immigration removal centres. [138200]

Mr. Byrne: The Border and Immigration Agency does not have a target for the staff-to-detainee ratio in immigration removal centres. Staffing levels are a key area of evaluation during the competitive tender process for the operation of removal centres. All contractors are required however to provide a safe environment at all times to detainees, staff and visitors.

The Border and Immigration Agency does not have a target for the staff to detainee ratio for Immigration Removal Centres run by HM Prison Service as they have vast experience in operating custodial environments.

Driving Under Influence: Sentencing

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) women, (b) men, (c) women under 30 years old and (d) men under 30 years old who committed drink driving offences in each of the last 10 years were given (i) a prison sentence, (ii) a mandatory disqualification from driving and (iii) a fine. [142587]

Mr. Coaker: Information for the period and at the level of detail requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The following table gives information for 1995, 1998, 2001, 2003, and 2004 (the latest available).

Data for 2005 will be available later in the year.

Notes:
1. Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts and police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when these data are used.
2. It is known that for some police force areas, the reporting of court proceedings, in particular those relating to summary motoring offences, may be less than complete. Work is under way to ensure that the magistrates courts case management system being implemented by the Ministry of Justice reports all motoring offences to the Office for Criminal Justice Reform. This will enable more complete figures to be disseminated.

Entry Clearances

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many enforcement actions for breach of (a) UK visitor, (b) resident and (c) overseas status limitations on working his Department and its agencies undertook in (i) 2004-05, (ii) 2005-06 and (iii) 2006-07. [140179]

Mr. Byrne: This information could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Published statistics on immigration and asylum, including enforcement activity are available on the Home Office's research, development and statistics website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

In January of this year Bulgaria and Romania joined the European Union. Bulgarian and Romanian nationals are the only European economic area (EEA) citizens to have their access to the UK labour market restricted; all other EEA citizens have the right of movement as workers or in case of A8 nationals via the worker registration scheme.

If individuals from Romania and Bulgaria are caught working illegally they are liable to a fixed penalty notice of £1, 000. Records indicate that since January 77 fixed penalty notices have been served.

Entry Clearances: Bexley

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for (a) leave to remain and (b) indefinite leave to remain were (i) granted and (ii) rejected from applicants with addresses in (A) Bexleyheath and Crayford and (B) the London Borough of Bexley in 2006. [127566]

Mr. Byrne: Information regarding the number of people living in the aforementioned constituencies who applied for leave to remain or indefinite leave to remain in 2006 is not available.

Fulbright Fellowship in Police Studies

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which officials from his Department sit on the Fulbright Fellowship in Police Studies selection panel; what specialist training they receive; and if he will make a statement. [143241]

Mr. McNulty: The recent Fulbright Fellowship in Police Studies selection panel convened in April this year was attended by staff from the Equality, Diversity and Human Rights Unit and from the Leadership Academy. All panellists are conversant with interview techniques and questioning and are also briefed on the selection processes adopted by the Fulbright Fellowship.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the Fulbright Fellowship in Police Studies scheme for (a) police officers and (b) civilian staff. [143243]

Mr. McNulty: The National Policing Improvements Agency is supportive of the Fulbright Fellowship in Police Studies and will ensure that a programme is put in place to assess the effectiveness of the scheme for both police officers and police staff.

Genetics: Databases

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) UK and (b) foreign nationals are recorded on the National DNA Database. [144068]

Joan Ryan: As of 10 June 2007, there were an estimated 3,976,090 individuals on the National DNA Database (NDNAD). The database does not record information on the nationality of those on it.

Identity and Passport Service: Finance

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the Identity and Passport Service will spend the Home Office funding it will receive in 2007-08, broken down by main budget heading. [135915]

John Reid: The allocation of the funding received by the Home Office for the 2007-08 financial year has been broken down in the manner outlined in the following table. Each percentage is based on the total Home Office funding allocated in the budget to date:

	Percentage
Salaries and staff costs	21
Contracted staff and consultancy	56
IT and communications:	5
Other "cash costs" (e.g. rent, maintenance, security)	14
"Non-cash" costs (e.g. depreciation)	4

Identity Cards

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam of 30 April 2007, Official Report, column 1407W, on identity cards, how much has been spent since the end of September 2006. [139991]

John Reid: Since the merger of the Home Office identity cards programme and the UK Passport Service to create the Identity and Passport Service on 1 April 2006, projects to deliver biometric passports, identity cards and other improvements have been necessarily combined. As much of the functionality needed to implement identity cards is also required for the implementation of biometric passports, this is the most cost-effective way to deliver these initiatives (e.g. both the implementation of biometric passports and identity cards will require a very similar application procedure as well the procurement of biometric recording equipment, data storage capability for biographical and biometric information and offices to facilitate enrolment).

As a result, much of the work conducted by Identity and Passport Service cannot be categorised, both financially and operationally, as contributing towards either the introduction of biometric passports or identity cards alone. The work is accounted for as future development projects.

Since the start of October 2006 to the end of the 2006-07 financial year, the cost of such development projects was £15.5 million.

Even without the introduction of identity cards, a significant proportion of this expenditure would have been required in order to prepare for the introduction of second biometric passports. Overall, it is estimated that around 70 per cent. of the total cost of the scheme would need to be incurred in order to introduce the second biometric passport incorporating fingerprint biometrics.

Identity Cards: Passports

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of the Identity and Passport Service's planned expenditure of £473 million in 2007-08 will be spent on the (a) identity cards scheme and (b) development of biometric passports. [135912]

John Reid: Since the merger of the Home Office identity cards programme and the UK Passport Service to create the Identity and Passport Service on 1 April 2006, projects to deliver biometric passports, identity cards and other improvements have been necessarily combined. As much of the functionality needed to implement identity cards is also required for the implementation of biometric passports, this is the most cost-effective way to deliver these initiatives (e.g. both the implementation of biometric passports and identity cards will require a very similar application procedure as well the procurement of biometric recording equipment, data storage capability for biographical and biometric information and offices to facilitate enrolment).

As a result, much of the work conducted by Identity and Passport Service cannot be categorised, both financially and operationally, as contributing towards either the introduction of biometric passports or identity cards alone. The work is accounted for as future development projects.

With regard to future costs, the Identity and Passport Service Business Plan, published in April 2007, indicates that the organisation plans to spend £473 million in the coming year. The estimate of expenditure relating to resource and capital expenditure for the introduction of second biometric passports incorporating fingerprint biometrics, identity cards and associated developments is £80 million.

Even without the introduction of identity cards, a significant proportion of this expenditure would have been required in order to prepare for the introduction of second biometric passports. Overall, it is estimated that around 70 per cent. of the total cost of the scheme would need to be incurred in order to introduce the second biometric passport incorporating fingerprint biometrics.

Illegal Immigrants

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were arrested in the joint operation between police and the Immigration Service at the LNG terminal in Pembrokeshire to arrest potentially illegal immigrants earlier in 2007; how many were found to be in the UK without the necessary paperwork; how many were released to attend the Swansea Immigration Office and arrived at that Office; how many were released on police bail and failed to answer that bail; and what the (a) location and (b) status is of the remainder of those taken into custody. [123878]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 27 February 2007]: On 6 February a police-led operation was undertaken at the LNG construction site. The operation was aimed at all road users who use the road illegally. However, intelligence had suggested that some individuals maybe of interest to the Border and Immigration Agency and enforcement staff were made available on the day to support the police.

A number of individuals were found to be of interest to the Border and Immigration Agency and those individuals have been processed by Border and Immigration Agency staff and decisions made in accordance with current policy and guidelines.

The Border and Immigration Agency's enforcement priority is to remove the most harmful people from society first and for this reason and due to detention capacity, it is not always possible to detain individuals, but consider other alternative options such as placing individuals on reporting restrictions, one of a number of initiatives that is proving to be successful in maintaining contact with individuals.

The Border and Immigration Agency announced on 7 March, their Enforcement Strategy Document, 'Enforcing the Rules', which outlines further measures to address public concerns and increase confidence in our immigration system.

Immigrants: Interpreters

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what expenditure in 2006-07 was for interpreters in immigration services; and what expenditure is forecast for 2007-08. [142766]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 15 June 2007]: The Border and Immigration Agency's expenditure on interpreters' fees in 2006-07 was £8,835,259. The budget for 2007-08 is £7,158,204.

Immigration Controls: Ministers of Religion

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many extremist imams were denied entry into the UK in each year since 2001. [142125]

Mr. Byrne: 'Extremist imam' is not a category used in Home Office records of individuals denied entry to the UK each year. However, individuals who express views which foment, justify or glorify terrorist violence in furtherance of particular beliefs come within the scope of the power to exclude a person because their presence in the UK is not conducive to the public good on grounds listed under the "unacceptable behaviour" provisions announced on 24 August 2005. To date 52 individuals have been excluded from the UK on grounds of "unacceptable behaviour".

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he has taken to prevent extremist imams coming into Britain. [142126]

Mr. Byrne: On 24 August 2005 the then Home Secretary announced the list of unacceptable behaviours (UB) which set out the grounds for excluding any individual who is considered to be engaging in certain activities and behaviour. Individuals who express views which foment, justify or glorify terrorist violence in furtherance of particular beliefs come within the scope of this measure.

Immigration: Detention Centres

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many full-time equivalent nurses provided health services at (a) Campsfield House Immigration Removal Centre, (b) Colnbrook Immigration Removal Centre, (c) Dover Immigration Removal Centre, (d) Dungavel Immigration Removal Centre, (e) Harmondsworth Immigration Removal Centre, (f) Haslar Immigration Removal Centre, (g) Lindholme, (h) Oakington, (i) Tinsley House Immigration Removal Centre and (j) Yarl's Wood Immigration Removal Centre in the last year for which figures are available. [136952]

Mr. Byrne: The number of full-time equivalent nurses that provided health services within the detention estate for 2006 is detailed as follows.

Campsfield—six full-time equivalent nurses

Colnbrook—27 full-time equivalent nurses

Dover-12 full-time equivalent nurses

Dungavel—seven full-time equivalent nurses

Harmondsworth—17 full-time equivalent nurses

Haslar—four full-time equivalent nurses

Lindholme—one full-time equivalent nurse

Oakington—10 full-time equivalent nurses

Tinsley House—5.4 full-time equivalent nurses

Yarl's Wood—5.9 full time equivalent nurses

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many full-time equivalent general practitioners provided health services at (a) Campsfield House Immigration Removal Centre, (b) Colnbrook Immigration Removal Centre, (c) Dover Immigration Removal Centre, (d) Dungavel Immigration Removal Centre, (e) Harmondsworth Immigration Removal Centre, (f) Haslar Immigration Removal Centre, (g) Lindholme, (h) Oakington, (i) Tinsley House Immigration Removal Centre and (j) Yarls Wood Immigration Removal Centre in 2006. [136953]

Mr. Byrne: Every removal centre is required to have a health care team, at least one member of which must be a doctor trained as a general practitioner, to provide primary health care services to detainees. Removal centre contractors operate healthcare by a mixture of full-time employees and outsourced providers. No centre directly employs a doctor; their services are provided under contract by local practices or the local primary care trusts or health authority, and therefore there are no full-time equivalents. Doctors are required to provide surgeries on site between certain times and for agreed volumes of hours; the rest of the time the centre is serviced by an on call doctor service. The cover provided by general practitioners for each immigration removal centre is as follows.

Campsfield—The GP conducts a two hours surgery Monday to Friday and on-call cover is provided out of hours, at night and weekends.

Colnbrook—There are two GPs conducting surgeries between 8a.m and 5p.m Monday to Friday and Saturday 8a.m. until noon. An on-call service is available at all other times.

Dover—One GP holds a two hours surgery each day (except Christmas day). An on-call service is available at all other times.

Dungavel—One GP provides a daily surgery Monday to Friday (31 hours per week). An on-call service is available at all other times.

Harmondsworth—The GP holds two surgeries each day totalling five hours plus three hours on Saturday and Sunday mornings and Bank Holidays. 31 hours of GP services each week. An on-call service is available at all other times.

Haslar—Three GPs provide daily surgeries and three GPs provide an on-call service at all other times.

Lindholme—One GP provides a daily surgery Monday to Friday. An on-call service is available at all other times.

Oakington—One GP provides a two hour surgery each day plus additional screening of new detainees up to three hours. An on-call service is available at all other times.

Tinsley House—One GP provides a four hour surgery each day and an on-call service is available at all other times.

Yarl's Wood—One full-time GP holds surgery eight hours each day Monday to Friday and for three hours on Saturday and Sundays. An on-call service is available at all other times.

Immigration: Telephone Services

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost was of the Border and Immigration MPs' Hotline in the latest year for which figures are available. [142675]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 14 June 2007]: The total staffing cost for the financial year 2006-07 was £502,000.

Independent Police Complaints Commission

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what the Independent Police Complaints Commission's (IPCC) target is for conclusion of a complaint against the police from the date of registration of the complaint; what the average time taken per case has been since the IPCC was set up; and if he will make a statement; [141454]

(2) how many complaints were referred to the Independent Police Complaints Commission in (a) England and (b) Essex since June 2006, broken down by police force; and how many have been upheld in each case; [141459]

(3) what complaints to the Independent Police Complaints Commission have been upheld since June 2006; what action was taken by the relevant police force to implement the relevant recommendations; and if he will make a statement; [141460]

(4) what recommendations of the Independent Police Complaints Authority have not been implemented in each of the last five years; and what the reason was in each case; [141461]

(5) how many serving police officers have been (a) prosecuted and (b) convicted of a criminal offence in each month since June 2006, broken down by (i) sex, (ii) age and (iii) police force; and how many were (A) suspended from duty, (B) demoted, (C) dismissed and (D) cautioned. [141480]

Mr. McNulty: This is a matter for the Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC) who have oversight of the police complaints system.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) primary and (b) delegated legislation regulates the Independent Police Complaints Commission; what changes have been made to each such instrument since enactment; what further amendments are planned; and if he will make a statement. [141481]

Mr. McNulty: The Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC) was established under the Police Reform Act 2002, with a remit covering complaints and conduct matters involving persons serving with the police service in England and Wales. The IPCC came into operation on 1 April 2004.

The following regulations were made under the Police Reform Act 2002 in bringing the IPCC into operation:

the Police (Complaints and Misconduct) Regulations 2004 (S.I. 2004/643), amended by S.I. 2006/1406;

the IPCC (Staff Conduct) Regulations 2004 S.I. 2004/660;

IPCC (Transitional Provisions) Order 2004 S.I. 2004/671;

the IPCC (Forces maintained otherwise than under Police Authorities) Order 2004 S.I. 2004/672 (relating to the MOD police and BTP).

The IPCC (Investigatory Powers) Order 2004 S.I. 2004/815 modifies, in relation to the functions of the IPCC:

Part 3 of the Police Act 1997 (authorisations to interfere with property); and Parts 2 (intrusive surveillance) and 4(Tribunal) of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000.

Schedule 12 to the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 amended the Police Reform Act 2002, extending the IPCCs remit to cover death and serious injury matters, and to cover complaints against the Serious and Organised Crime Agency.

The Commissioners of Revenue and Customs Act 2005 and the Revenue and Customs (Complaints and Misconduct) Regulations 2005 (S.I. 2005/3311) as amended by S.I. 2006/1748 made under the 2005 Act extended the IPCC's remit in relation to the Commissioners and officers of HM Revenue and Customs.

The Police and Justice Act 2006 will extend the IPCC's jurisdiction to cover specified enforcement functions of immigration officers.

A Statutory Order was laid before Parliament on 5 June 2007 for the purpose of applying the Official Secrets Act to IPCC commissioners and staff.

Further legislation changes affecting the IPCC will be made as part of the introduction of a new simplified and modernised police misconduct system.

Independent Police Complaints Commission: Finance

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding was provided to the Independent Police Complaints Commission in each of the last three years. [143205]

Mr. McNulty: The total Grant-in-Aid provided to the Independent Police Complaints Commission for each of the last three years is:

	£ million
2004-05	27.715
2005-06	29.816
2006-07	33.492

Metropolitan Police: Voluntary Work

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from the Public Services Union on the use of volunteers by the Metropolitan Police. [143211]

Mr. McNulty: Policy and practice on the use of volunteers in the police service is now a matter for the National Policing Improvement Agency (NPIA). I understand from the NPIA chief executive that no representations have been received from the Public Services Union on the use of volunteers by the Metropolitan Police.

Motor Vehicles: Accidents

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what resources are being provided for the tackling of staged and induced motor accident fraud in (a) Preston, (b) Bolton West, (c) Ribble Valley, (d) Hazel Grove, (e) Blackburn, (f) Southampton, (g) Bradford South, (h) Blackpool, North and Fleetwood and (i) Salford constituencies. [144175]

Mr. Coaker: This information is not held centrally. The Police Service in England and Wales has benefited from a significant increase in resources over a sustained period. On a like-for-like basis Government grant and central spending on services for the police will have increased from £6.2 billion in 1997-98 to £11.0 billion in 2007-08; an increase of nearly £4.8 billion or a cash increase of 77 per cent. (in real terms over 39 per cent.). Every police authority has received its fair share of resources. The use of these resources is an operational matter for each chief officer to determine in the light of local and competing priorities.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what figures he has for the number of incidences of staged and induced motor accident fraud in the last 12 months, broken down by (a) local authority and (b) constituency. [144176]

Mr. Coaker: No figures are collected centrally in the recorded crime statistics.

Passports: Biometrics

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of the (a) capital costs and (b) running costs of the National Identity scheme he estimates will be required in order to implement the biometric passport scheme to cover all ports of entry into the UK. [135830]

John Reid: The estimated cost of introducing passports and ID cards over the next 10 years was published in the Identity Cards scheme costs report which was laid before Parliament on 10 May 2007. However, it was not possible to provide a separate figure for the cost of implementing biometric passports from that of the National Identity scheme as a whole, as many of the costs are applicable to both identity cards and passports.

The Identity Cards scheme costs report also excluded any costs falling to other organisations using passports or ID cards to verify identity. Nevertheless, the Border and Immigration Agency already has equipment in place at the major ports to read facial image biometric e-passports.

Police: Equal Opportunities

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 23 May 2007, Official Report, column 1334W, on the police: equal opportunities, whether the Minister for Security, Counter Terrorism and Police plans to attend the meeting of the Women in Police Steering Group on 28 June 2007; and if he will place in the Library copies of the minutes of the meeting. [143265]

Mr. McNulty: The next meeting of the Women In Policing Steering Group will now take place on 25 July 2007 rather than on 28 June 2007. The Minister for Security, Counter Terrorism and Police plans to attend the meeting. As the purpose of the Group is to advise the Minister on policy matters it is therefore not normal practice for the minutes of its meetings to be placed in the public domain.

Police: Health

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance his Department issues to police authorities on fitness testing of (a) police officers, (b) police community support officers and (c) special constables. [143253]

Mr. McNulty: Responsibility for the physical fitness of serving police officers, police community support officers and special constables is the responsibility of the chief officer of each force.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers passed bleep and push and pull tests as part of the police entry fitness tests in the most recent year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [143255]

Mr. McNulty: All serving police officers passed the endurance ('bleep') test and the dynamic strength ('push and pull') tests, as police applicants who fail cannot be appointed police officers.

The most recent figures available are for the 2005-06 period and are shown in the following table:

	Fail	Pass
Endurance	263	7,512
Pull	263	9,529
Push	226	7,478

Note:
The table provides the figures for 38 forces and does not include data for the forces listed as follows as this has not been made available to the Department.
Cheshire Cleveland
Devon and Cornwall
Dorset, Gloucestershire
Merseyside and West Midlands

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the merits of regular fitness testing for police officers during their police careers; and if he will make a statement. [143256]

Mr. McNulty: A working group of the Police Advisory Board for England and Wales (PAB EW) was recently set up to look at developing national fitness standards for specialist police roles such as firearms officers and dog handlers. This will lead to regular national testing for officers in these roles.

Following the completion of this work on standards and testing for specialist roles, the PAB EW working group will consider regular testing for patrol officers.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what meetings he has held with (a) Ministers and (b) police staff associations on the physical fitness of police officers. [143266]

Mr. McNulty: The health and safety of police officers, including their physical fitness, is currently the responsibility of the chief officer of each force. Therefore, the development and implementation of initiatives relating to the physical fitness of serving police officers is also a force responsibility. The Police Advisory Board of England and Wales, which advises Ministers and has formal representation from the staff associations, is considering these issues and will in due course provide advice to Ministers.

Police: Road Traffic

Mark Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police forces have a dedicated roads policing division; how many officers there are in each such division; and what percentage each figure represents of the force's total number of officers. [142958]

Mr. Coaker: Force organisation and deployment of resources are matters for individual chief officers of police. Information is therefore not available in the form requested. Information on the number of officers in each force whose main function is traffic and the percentage this represents of the force's total number of officers is in the table as follows.

Police officers whose main function is Traffic[1] (FTE)[2] by police force area as at 31 March 2006

[1] Staff with multiple responsibilities (or designations) are recorded under their primary role or function. The traffic function includes staff who are predominantly employed on motorcycles or in patrol vehicles for the policing of traffic and motorway related duties. This does not include officers employed in accident investigation, vehicle examination and radar duties.

Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 19 February 2007, Official Report, column 148W, on the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000, if he will place the review of the Act in the Library. [137119]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 14 May 2007]: Subject to redaction of information which, if disclosed, would, or would be likely to, prejudice the prevention or detection of crime or the apprehension or prosecution of offenders, I will arrange for a copy of the report of the review to be placed in the Library.

Security Measures

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 6 June 2007, Official Report, columns 618-20W, on security measures, what plans he has to proscribe Hizb-ut Tahrir and organisations related to it. [144391]

Mr. McNulty: It is normal Home Office policy not to comment on groups which may or may not be added to the list of proscribed organisations.

Terrorism: Human Rights

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effect of the operation of the Human Rights Act 1998 on the Government's ability to detain or deport terrorist suspects; and if he will make a statement. [135598]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 3 May 2007]: As my right. hon. Friend the Prime Minister advised the Member for Stratford-upon-Avon (Mr. Maples) on 2 May, the Human Rights Act 1998 does not affect our ability to detain or to deport. The Human Rights Act simply incorporated our pre-existing international obligations into domestic law.

Detention has to be consistent with Articles of the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (the European Convention on Human Rights). In deporting someone from the United Kingdom, we have to have regard to our obligations under Article 3 of the ECHR as defined in the case law of the European Court of Human Rights.

The Government are seeking to secure a modification of the current case law through its intervention in two cases currently before the Court.

Yarl's Wood Detention Centre

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on the treatment of women detainees at Yarl's Wood since Serco took over the management contract; and if he will make a statement. [137995]

Mr. Byrne: Since Serco Ltd were awarded the contract to operate Yarl's Wood there have been representations from detainees at Yarl's Wood concerning rumours about possible changes to procedures and routines at the centre. Detainees were written to by the centre director on 4 and 5 May to address the unwarranted rumours. Representations have been received on the same subject from private individuals and the organisation Black Women Against Rape. My officials have responded with assurances that the rumours concerning possible changes to procedures and routines at Yarl's Wood are unfounded.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Casino Advisory Panel: Expenditure

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the total expenditure was of the Casino Advisory Panel. [144724]

Mr. Caborn: When the Casino Advisory Panel submitted its final report to the Secretary of State on 30 January 2007 its total costs were approximately £400,000.

Gambling

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the total cost was of the Budd report on gambling. [144722]

Mr. Caborn: Full details of the total cost are not readily available. However, the cost to DCMS of publication of the report of the Gambling Review Body (the Budd Report) was £12,200, as set out in the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Pontypridd (Dr. Howells) to the hon. Member for South Suffolk (Mr. Yeo) on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 332W.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what total costs were associated with the White Paper, A Safe Bet for Success—Modernising Britain's Gambling Laws. [144723]

Mr. Caborn: Full details of the total cost are not readily available. However, the cost to DCMS of publication of the White Paper was £12,000, as set out in the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Pontypridd (Dr. Howells) to the hon. Member for South Suffolk (Mr. Yeo) on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 332W.

Olympic Games: Greater London

Robert Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what recent discussions (a) she and (b) her Department have had with companies which have bid for the utilities contracts for the Olympic games; [144109]

(2) when (a) she and (b) a Minister in her Department last had a meeting with (i) Thames Water and (ii) EDF energy to discuss the utilities (A) contracts and (B) requirements for the Olympic games. [144110]

Mr. Caborn: The utilities contracts for the Stratford city and Olympic games sites are being procured under a commercially confidential process by the Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA). To maximise the commercial benefits of negotiation the names of those organisations that have submitted a bid are not widely known within the ODA and have not been released externally.

I can confirm that no DCMS Minister has held meetings with Thames Water, EDF energy or any of the companies which have bid for the utilities contracts for the Olympic games to discuss contracts and the requirements for the games.

Robert Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) which bodies will be involved in making the decision on the contractors and companies which are awarded the utilities contracts for the Olympic games; [144111]

(2) what input the Mayor of London will have into the decision making process for the utilities contracts for the Stratford city and Olympic games site. [144112]

Mr. Caborn: The utilities contracts for the Stratford city and Olympic games sites are being procured under a commercially confidential process by the Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA).

Tenders are currently being sought and evaluated by the ODA, and in due course their recommendations for award will be considered by the Olympic Projects Review Group (OPRG), which includes representation from the Greater London authority (GLA).

The OPRG may then make recommendations to Ministers for formal approval to award the contracts.

Sports: Governing Bodies

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what criteria she uses to decide which Olympic governing bodies of sport receive funding from her Department. [144596]

Mr. Caborn: Decisions regarding the criteria for and funding of Olympic governing bodies of sport are made by the Sports Councils, not by Ministers.

UK Sport is charged with delivering UK success at the Olympic and Paralympic games. To achieve this it takes a 'no compromise' approach to its investment, targeting resources and activity at those athletes and sports deemed most capable of medal winning performances. Individual sports are allocated their funding through the UK Sport World Class Pathway programme, with the amount determined by a formula that includes results from the previous games and current rankings, as well as future medal potential and the identification of talent.

In addition, some Olympic sports are funded by Home Country Sports Councils in pursuit of their wider aims and objectives; for example, increasing participation in sport. In England, Sport England provides funding to 21 Olympic sports to support delivery of their four-year strategic plans at community level. The sports apply the funding they receive to deliver against a range of key performance indicators (KPIs). These KPIs include increasing the number of accredited clubs, the number of club members and the numbers of coaches and volunteers working within their sport.

Furthermore, as a part of the joint DfES/DCMS National School Sport strategy, Sport England also funds a total of 18 Olympic sports to support delivery of school club links and volunteer and leadership opportunities for young people.

WALES

Departments: Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in his Department have been allowed to work from home for part of the week in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on home working. [143874]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office values diversity and accommodates different work patterns including home working.

Over the past year a number of staff have followed a flexible working pattern, working the occasional day or half day at home, whether to suit personal circumstances or to assist in the completion of a specific task. One member of Wales Office staff has a more formal arrangement for home working.

Departments: Manpower

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people granted (a) temporary part-time, (b) temporary full-time, (c) permanent part-time and (d) permanent full-time contracts of employment in his Department in each of the last three years were (i) male, (ii) female, (iii) registered disabled and (iv) aged 55 years or over. [143904]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office does not grant contracts of employment. Wales Office staff are either on loan from the Welsh Assembly Government or employed by the Ministry of Justice.

SCOTLAND

Departments: Pay

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of his Department's staff received a bonus in (a) 2006 and (b) 2007. [142716]

David Cairns: The figure for 2006-07 was 25 per cent. the figure is not yet available for 2007-08.

Elections: Ballot Papers

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland pursuant to the answer of 12 June 2007, Official Report, columns 921-22W, on elections: ballot papers, (1) who chaired the Electronic Counting Project Board that negotiated the contract to deliver an electronic counting service; [144350]

(2) if he will place in the Library a copy of the contract negotiated with DRS for delivery of an electronic counting service, redacted as necessary; [144351]

(3) which individuals were members of the Electronic Counting Project Board that negotiated the contract to deliver an electronic counting service. [144352]

David Cairns: The Electronic Counting Project Board was chaired by the Scottish Executive's Head of Local Governance and Licensing Division.

We do not intend placing a copy of the electronic counting contract with DRS in the Library at present but we will review this after completion of the Electoral Commission's independent review of the May elections. We have made it clear that Mr Ron Gould and his review team will have access to all the documents they require, including those relating to e-counting.

The members of the Electronic Counting Project Board were: the Scottish Executive's Head of Local Governance and Licensing Division, an official from the Scottish Executive's Local Democracy Team, the E-counting Project Manager, the Scotland Office's Head of Elections and Social Policy Branch and the Scotland Office's Elections Policy Advisor, the Returning Officer for East Renfrewshire, the Deputy Returning Officer for Edinburgh City Council, Head of Elections at DRS Data Services Limited, Project Manager from DRS Data Services Limited, and a representative of Electoral Reform Services.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

House of Commons Commission: Manpower

Mr. Maples: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission pursuant to the answer of 20 April 2007, Official Report, column 1060W, on House of Commons Commission: manpower, if he will list the 85 posts which carry salaries in excess of £60,000; and what the salary is of each post. [144167]

Nick Harvey: Information about senior staff with salaries in excess of £60,277 was placed in the Library in January in response to a question from the hon. Member for West Chelmsford (Mr. Burns), 11 January 2007, Official Report, column 652W. I will write to the hon. Member with further details. Current pay ranges for all staff can be found on the parliamentary intranet.

Parking

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how many car parking spaces there are on the Commons part of the parliamentary estate (a) in the underground car park and (b) elsewhere. [144356]

Nick Harvey: A total of 600 car parking spaces are available on the parliamentary estate, nearly 500 of which are in the New Palace Yard multi-storey underground car park.

Smoking

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission on what date the Commission last discussed implementation of the forthcoming ban on smoking in enclosed public spaces on the parliamentary estate; and if he will make a statement. [145052]

Nick Harvey: As the minutes published on the internet http://www.parliament.uk/about_commons/house_of_commons_commission_hccfm120307.cfm show, the Commission discussed smoking on 12 March 2007. The policy on the subject is set out in a written answer to the hon. Member for Aberdeen, North (Mr. Doran) on 20 March 2008, Official Report, column 757W.

The Health Act 2006 introduces a ban on smoking in workplaces and enclosed or substantially enclosed public places from 1 July 2007. While the Act does not formally apply on the parliamentary estate, the Commission, on the advice of the Administration Committee, has decided that the House should comply with the principles of the legislation, as it is not desirable that those who work on or visit the parliamentary estate should be treated differently in this respect than in other workplaces and public places. The Commission recognises, however, that many who work on the estate are unavoidably present for long periods, particularly when the House is sitting. It is therefore desirable to make reasonable provision for those who wish to smoke to do so, provided that the health and safety of other users of the estate is not adversely affected.

With these principles in mind, the Commission has decided that smoking should cease to be permitted from 1 July 2007 in all internal areas of the House of Commons estate, including in bars and private offices. From that date smoking will, however, be permitted in four designated external areas: the Terrace, Commons Court (North West corner), North Terrace (between Portcullis House and Norman Shaw South), and in a designated area on the west side of Canon Row courtyard. Cigarette receptacles will be provided in these areas. "No Smoking" signs will be displayed at entrances to the buildings.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Asylum: Iraq

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether his Department has increased its presence in (a) Syria, (b) Jordan and (c) Egypt to assist Iraqi refugees; and if he will make a statement. [143780]

Hilary Benn: We are very concerned about the humanitarian situation in Iraq and the increasing numbers of people who have been displaced due to ongoing violence.

DFID has not increased its presence in Syria, Jordan or Egypt in response to the refugee crisis. We continue to work closely with international humanitarian partners to ensure agencies are adequately resourced and equipped to respond to needs such as food, water, shelter and medical assistance.

To date, we have contributed £1.5 million to the UN high commission for refugees' (UNHCR) appeal to help refugees in neighbouring countries. This was part of a £10 million package, which we have provided so far this year, to help vulnerable people inside Iraq and those displaced to other countries in the region. In total, DFID has provided £125 million in humanitarian assistance to Iraq since 2003.

Democracy: Expenditure

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much his Department spent on projects promoting democracy in each of the last three years. [142608]

Mr. Thomas: DFID's support to democracy programmes is part of our broader approach to good governance. One of the components of good governance is an open and transparent political system with strong political institutions. This means our democracy work includes support to civil society to improve their capacity to hold Governments to account; initiatives to build accountability into our health and education programmes to improve Government responsiveness to poor people; and work to strengthen political systems more broadly, including popular participation in the decision-making process. The latter includes direct support to elections and Parliaments.

In total, DFID's direct bilateral spend on governance programmes was £212 million in 2004-05, £322 million in 2005-06 and £286 million in 2006-07. Within this DFID spent £14 million directly on democratic elections in 2004-5, £17.1 million in 2005-06 and £15.5 million in 2006-7. Over the next five years, our support to governance will include an additional £100 million for the governance and transparency fund.

The aforementioned figures do not include our support to the UN, EU and other multilateral organisations some of which is used to fund governance and democracy promotion programmes. However, DFID does not hold details of what proportion of these contributions were used to assist with the promotion of democracy.

Note that the figures for 2006-07 are provisional estimates only.

Departments: Homeworking

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many people in his Department have been allowed to work from home for part of the week in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on home working. [143880]

Mr. Thomas: DFID does not keep records of the number of home workers.

However, DFID operates a 'one machine' policy under which each member of staff chooses to be equipped with either a desktop computer or, subject to the approval of their Head of Department, a laptop computer. The laptop option enables staff to work from home or at other remote locations while travelling on behalf of the Department. Currently, 1,750 staff have been issued with laptops.

DFID is committed to improving work/life balance and accommodates a wide range of different work patterns including the use of home and remote working. DFID's policy is set out both in the staff handbook, which is available to all staff electronically, and in two booklets, "Flexible Working", and "Remote Working" which staff receive on appointment. In a recent management survey, 84 per cent. of staff strongly believed that their line managers actively support flexible working.

Departments: Manpower

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many people granted (a) temporary part-time, (b) temporary full-time, (c) permanent part-time and (d) permanent full-time contracts of employment in his Department in each of the last three years were (i) male, (ii) female, (iii) registered disabled and (iv) aged 55 years or over. [143899]

Mr. Thomas: DFID employs both UK-based civil servants and staff engaged overseas on local terms and conditions of service. I have provided a breakdown of the data for the categories requested for both amalgamated groups in the following tables. Table 1 shows all contracts awarded during the years 2004-06, inclusive, broken down by gender. Table 2 shows the same breakdown across the categories for those in the over 55 age range. During the same period seven staff with registered disabilities were awarded contracts. (One temporary, six permanent—of which one was part-time).

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of staff in his Department are (a) male, (b) female, (c) registered disabled and (d) aged 55 or over. [143916]

Mr. Thomas: DFID employs both UK-based civil servants and staff engaged overseas on local terms and conditions of service. The following table shows the information which is available for both groups and for DFID as a whole. Information on gender, disability and age are all provided on a voluntary basis, and is incomplete for those staff engaged locally overseas. The response rate on disability in particular is very low. The percentages quoted are therefore based upon the numbers where we do have the relevant information, and the total percentage with a disability is for only our UK-based staff.

	Male	Female	Disabled	Percentage Aged 55 +
UK-based	50	50	3	12
Locally engaged	50	50	n/a	19
Total	50	50	3	14

n/a = Not available.

Departments: Official Visits

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which destinations he visited in an official capacity between 17 May and 17 June. [144548]

Hilary Benn: I made no regional or overseas visits in an official capacity between 17 May and 17 June.

Departments: Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many staff in his Department received bonus payments in 2006-07; what proportion of the total workforce they represented; what the total amount of bonuses paid was; what the largest single payment was; and if he will make a statement. [143099]

Mr. Thomas: The following tables give the number of bonuses awarded to DFID staff in 2006-07. All bonus payments are non-pensionable.

Bonuses awarded to DFID senior civil servants (SCS)

	2006-07
Number of awards	66
Percentage of total SCS workforce	78
Total cost (£)	389,100
Largest single payment (£)	12,000

Bonuses awarded to DFID staff in grades below the SCS

	2006-07
Number of awards	1,020
Percentage of total HCS workforce below the SCS	62
Total cost (£)	558,233

Departments: Remploy

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what (a) services and (b) products his Department has procured from Remploy in the last 12 months; and at what cost. [143792]

Mr. Thomas: The Department for International Development (DFID) has had no contracts with Remploy in the last 12 months.

Gaza: Politics and Government

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the humanitarian situation of the civilian population in Gaza following the takeover of the area's administration by Hamas; and if he will make a statement. [144328]

Hilary Benn: The United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) makes regular assessments of the humanitarian situation in the Gaza Strip. Between 9 and 13 June, OCHA reported that 110 Palestinians were killed and over 550 injured. However, relative calm has now returned. People are out in the streets and shops are open.

The major concern among humanitarian agencies now is the movement of people and goods into and out of Gaza. Israel has allowed some humanitarian supplies to enter. Shortages of basic food supplies are likely to occur within days unless access is restored for private traders. The UK Government have called for the re-opening of the Kami crossing.

Humanitarian Aid: Gaza

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the impact of the recent violence in Gaza on the operations of the UN Relief and Works Agency for Palestinian Refugees in the Near East; and if he will make a statement. [144329]

Hilary Benn: 70 per cent. of Gaza's population, around 1 million people, are registered as refugees and are eligible for support from the UNRWA. On 13 June the UNRWA suspended all operations in Gaza except for essential medical services and emergency food distributions. This followed the killing of two of its staff in intra-Palestinian violence. On 17 June, the UNRWA returned to full operations, but warned that its support programmes depended on regular humanitarian supplies through Gaza's borders with Israel.

Humanitarian Aid: Sri Lanka

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent reports he has received on the murder of aid workers in Sri Lanka; and what guidance his Department is making available for UK aid workers in Sri Lanka. [144482]

Mr. Thomas: We have received several representations from the British and Sri Lankan NGO communities about the murder of two Red Cross workers on 2 June and the deaths of 17 workers from a French NGO in August 2006. We have raised the issue of humanitarian security with the Sri Lankan Government repeatedly and pressed for the perpetrators of these appalling crimes to be brought to justice.

The UK advises British nationals, including aid workers, against all travel to the north and east of Sri Lanka. Ultimately aid workers and the agencies that employ them are responsible for their own security. Staff at the British High Commission in Colombo meet representatives of the British NGO community on a monthly basis to share information on security and other operational issues. Aid workers are also encouraged to register their presence in Sri Lanka with the British High Commission. Where appropriate, the FCO will support British nationals who are caught up in conflict, civil unrest and natural catastrophes.

Iraq: Internally Displaced Persons

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Berwickshire, Roxburgh and Selkirk of 7 June 2007, official report, column 685W, on Iraq: internally displaced persons, what form he expects the Iraqi Government's lead role in supporting Iraqi refugees outside Iraq to take; and if he will make a statement. [143949]

Hilary Benn: The most important thing that needs to happen in Iraq is an end to the spiralling violence responsible for the deteriorating humanitarian situation and increasing levels of displacement. The Government of Iraq have put dealing with security at the top of their agenda and we will continue to support them. Furthermore, it has primary responsibility to ensure the protection of its citizens.

At the April UNHCR Conference in Geneva, the Government of Iraq made a commitment to take the lead in providing support and security for their citizens, including those who have fled the country. In the first phase, they pledged $25 million to finance the establishment of migration offices in Jordan and Syria. These offices will support vulnerable Iraqis and help alleviate the burden of the influx of refugees on host countries. We will continue to press them to step up their response to the situation and develop their policy on how best to provide assistance.

Mozambique: Health Services

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support his Department has provided to health systems in each of the last five years in (a) Mozambique and (b) China; and what the (i) objectives, (ii) time scales and (iii) funding were of such programmes. [144348]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has actively supported the health systems in Mozambique for a number of years. DFID Mozambique provided support to the Technical Planning Unit within the Ministry of Health to facilitate development of a national health plan for the period 2000-05. DFID also funded the HIV/AIDS and Maternal Health Programme (2001-07) which aims to increase access to and use of good quality reproductive and sexual health services. DFID funding of the Essential Medicines programme (2000-06) aimed to improve the availability and rational use of essential medicines by strengthening procurement and distribution systems.

DFID is currently supporting the development of a Sustainable Distribution System for Insecticide Treated Nets (ITNs) for Malaria Prevention. The programme, which has a total allocated budget of £8.6 million, started in 2005 and is due to run until 2010. It builds upon the lessons learnt as a result of a pilot Malaria Prevention and Treatment project. DFID recently agreed a new five-year programme of support to the Ministry of Health for £3.7 million per annum. In 2006, DFID also signed a five-year £215 million programme of direct support to the budget of the Government of Mozambique, which helps provide additional funding for health systems. The total amount of bilateral DFID expenditure in the health sector in Mozambique is shown in the following table. This includes a notional proportion of DFID's general budget support.

DFID bilateral expenditure on health in Mozambique, 2002-03 to 2006-07

	Expenditure (£ million)
2002-03	10.2
2003-04	13.3
2004-05	16.3
2005-06	15.9
2006-07	[1]11.9

[1] Provisional.

DFID has been working in the health sector in China since 1999. The focus has been on helping the Chinese Government to control HIV and AIDS, increasing the detection and cure rate for people suffering from tuberculosis, and reforming the health system so that poor people receive basic health services. The total amount of bilateral DFID expenditure in the health sector in China is shown in the following table.

DFID bilateral expenditure on health in China, 2002-03 to 2006-07

	Expenditure (£ million)
2002-03	12.6
2003-04	11.1
2004-05	10.5
2005-06	13.0
2006-07	[1]11.9

[1] Provisional.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will take steps to facilitate the provision of health care free at the point of access in (a) Mozambique and (b) China. [144349]

Mr. Thomas: It is for national Governments to decide their own policies in relation to user fees in health. However, because of our own UK experience and that of developing countries, DFID is committed to helping countries that want to remove charges at the point of delivery. The recent White Paper commits DFID to help partner Governments abolish user fees for basic health services and help them tackle other barriers to access, including discrimination against women.

DFID is working with the Government of China to facilitate the provision of free (or substantially subsidised by the Government) primary health care. China is formulating a major health policy to address inequity in the health system, of which free primary health care for all is likely to be an important feature. Meanwhile various health insurance programmes for urban and rural residents will be improved to provide better financial risk protection and reduce out-of-pocket payments on in-patient services.

DFID has supported China on rural and urban health and health policy capacity building since 1999. Our large and well designed pilots have provided evidence to Chinese policy makers on rural and urban health reform, which is now being used to inform the development of the new policies.

In Mozambique, services are already formally free for malaria, TB, HIV treatment, maternal health services and immunisation for children. The Government of Mozambique have already made a public commitment to look at the case for removing fees, at least for primary health care. DFID is now working closely with the Government of Mozambique to consider the practical implications of removing the remaining user fees. This includes: studying the expected implications for demand; considering how systems will need to be reinforced to support the change; and preventing illegal charging. If the Government of Mozambique make a decision to abolish more fees, DFID will support this, including through our continued financial support to the sector.

Overseas Aid: Corruption

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development on what occasions and from whom the UK has sought the return of monies misappropriated from UK aid programmes. [140735]

Hilary Benn: DFID is committed to ensuring that its resources are used only for the purposes intended. The Department's Anti-Fraud and Corruption Policy aims to ensure that resources lost through misappropriation are minimised, and that appropriate action is taken to recover such funds. A specialist Fraud Response Unit within DFID's internal audit function coordinates DFID's response to allegations of fraud and corruption, and provides support to management to strengthen systems and processes to prevent or detect future losses.

Where a loss relates to activities which are being managed on DFID's behalf by an NGO, an international organisation or a similar partner with whom DFID has an ongoing relationship, the partner concerned will usually be required to absorb the loss and to complete delivery of the agreed development goals without additional DFID funding. Before agreeing to this course of action, DFID will first require adequate assurance that the weaknesses in the partner's systems which allowed the losses to occur have been addressed. In other cases, the Department's practice is normally to seek the repayment of the monies which have been misappropriated.

Where DFID cannot obtain the necessary assurance that a partner's arrangements for preventing fraud and corruption have been strengthened, and hence that UK taxpayers' monies will be properly safeguarded, future funding may be withheld or the relationship with the partner may be terminated.

The following table lists the cases, for the financial years 2004-05 to 2006-07 inclusive, where the UK has sought the return of monies misappropriated from UK aid programmes. This includes instances where there has been full or partial repayment to DFID of misappropriated funds, those where the partner organisation managing the activities on DFID's behalf has absorbed the losses itself, and those where no recovery could be achieved.

	Location	Party from whom return was sought/circumstances of loss
2004-05	Uganda	Bank: Unidentified culprit cashed cheque claiming to be working for consultants. Funds recovered in full from bank.

2006-07	UK	Private individual's estate: Pension still being claimed after staff member's death by a relative, who has since herself died. Some monies recovered from the estate and HMRC.
2006-07	Cambodia	International organisation: Cash/cheque fraud by an international organisation's employees. Some monies returned.
2006-07	Somalia	Local community: Misuse of funds on an Accountable Grant funded project. Community members found responsible and funds repaid in full.

2006-07	Sudan	NGO: NGO identified a fraud on a DFID-funded project and has since repaid the loss in full.

During the same period, 2004-05 to 2006-07, DFID also had a smaller number of instances where misappropriation of UK funds could be proven but where effective recovery action was not practicable due to the particular circumstances of each case—for example, where the culprits could not be identified or subsequently absconded, or where the value of the loss was lower than the cost of any recovery action. For completeness, these cases are set out in the following table.

	Location	Circumstances of loss
2004-05	UK	Payments intercepted in the mail.
2004-05	UK	Staff member tried to re-sell DFID-funded travel tickets.

Palestinians: EC Aid

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of the restored EU funding to the Palestinian Authority will be directed to (a) the West Bank and (b) Gaza; and if he will make a statement. [144361]

Hilary Benn: On 18 June, EU Foreign Ministers discussed the resumption of assistance to the Palestinian Authority. They concluded that the EU should develop the conditions for urgent practical and financial assistance. The EU has not yet decided how this will be delivered. However, we will wish to ensure that assistance addresses the needs of Palestinians in both Gaza and the West Bank.

Palestinians: International Assistance

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what changes are planned to the operation of the Temporary International Mechanism for the delivery of aid to the Palestinian people following recent events in Gaza; and if he will make a statement. [144360]

Hilary Benn: No decisions have yet been taken on changes to the Temporary International Mechanism (TIM) following recent events in Gaza. The TIM continues to provide support for the basic needs of Palestinians in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. The Quartet recently extended the TIM until the end of September 2007.

Tanzania: Overseas Aid

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what financial support has been given to the Presidential Parastatal Sector Reform Commission in Tanzania for (a) work in the area of water and sanitation and (b) other work in each year since 1994; on what dates technical assistance grants were given; what the aid funding was for each grant; and to whom consultancy contracts were awarded. [143944]

Hilary Benn: The Tanzanian Government established the Parastatal Sector Reform Commission (PSRC) in 1993 to reform and privatise loss-making public entities (including ports, railways and airlines). At the time, there were approximately 400 such entities, costing the Government US $100 million annually.

At the request of the Government of Tanzania, DFID provided a total of £7.1 million to the PSRC to support the divestiture of publicly-owned companies in Tanzania between 1992 and the end of our programme of support in March 2007.

DFID's support helped to ensure that the privatisation process was implemented in a fair and transparent manner and that regulatory bodies were established to ensure privatised entities worked for the benefit of Tanzania. The assistance provided was used for the purposes of contracting advisory support for:

- management of the privatisation process
- broadening of share ownership—to afford Tanzanians greater opportunities to own shares in privatised entities
- amendments to relevant enabling legislation and regulations, and supporting the development of suitable local regulatory capacity

Different companies were awarded contracts. All work was procured under prevailing Tanzanian Government procurement regulations. The grants provided were for:

- Technical Assistance—total value of £6.1 million (from 1992-2007)
- Development support—total value of £1 million (from 2003-07)

The contracts that were provided for work in the area of water and sanitation are set out in table 1 as follows.

Table 1: Contracts awarded for water and sanitation work

Date	Contractor	Purpose of work	Total value (£000)
2001	Adam Smith International	Conducting a water privatisation and regulatory study tour	55
2001	Clifford Chance	Provision of legal advice to DAWASA	[1]150
1997	John D. Davies	Provision of short-term advice on achieving an appropriate private sector participation arrangement for DAWASA	31
November 1997	GIBB East Africa Ltd	Facilitation of a DAWASA workshop on privatisation	16
Total	—	—	252

[1] Part of the contract was denominated in US$.

The UK funded 10 contracts valued above £100,000 each in the period from 1992 to 2007 in support of PSRC. An additional 39 contracts of lesser value were awarded for smaller pieces of work—calculating the total value of these contracts would involve disproportionate cost. Table 2 sets out amounts and a description of the main grants and contractors.

Table 2: Contracts of £100,000 or more awarded in support of PSRC

Date	Contractor	Nature of assignment	Total value (£000)
1992-96	Devon Waide	Advisory support to PSRC	846
1998-2000	Cezley Sampson	Provision of advice on reform, divestiture and restructuring	302
1998-2002	PricewaterhouseCoopers (PWC)	Provision of Utilities adviser to PSRC	697

DEFENCE

Afghanistan: Peacekeeping Operations

Mr. Benyon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) mines, (b) mortar rounds, (c) projectiles by calibre, (d) missiles and (e) air dropped weapons were expended by members of UK armed forces as part of the NATO deployment in Afghanistan in each of the last six months. [142850]

Mr. Ingram: I am withholding the information as its disclosure would, or would be likely to prejudice the capability, effectiveness or security of the armed forces.

Aircraft Carriers: Procurement

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the delay in the construction of the two new aircraft carriers for the UK has resulted in job losses at dockyards. [143442]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 18 June 2007]: No date has been set for commencement of manufacture of the future aircraft carriers and there has, therefore, been no delay. The main investment decision will be taken when we are confident that we have a robust, affordable deal.

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assessment he has made of the impact on dockyards in the UK if the Government decide to collaborate with France in the construction of the proposed two new aircraft carriers for the UK; [143444]

(2) what talks have taken place with members of the aircraft carrier alliance on the involvement of France in the construction of the proposed two new aircraft carriers for the UK; [143445]

(3) what discussions there have been with trades unions about the involvement of France in the construction of the proposed two new aircraft carriers for the UK; [143446]

Mr. Ingram [holding answers 18 June 2007]: We have always stressed that co-operation with France through industry-to-industry links may offer potential benefits to both nations. This was covered most recently when my noble Friend the Minister of State for Defence Equipment and Support, Lord Drayson met with the trade unions and the Aircraft Carrier Alliance Chief Executive last month. It has been agreed with France that for co-operation to work, it must deliver cost savings and must do so without delaying UK or French programmes.

Armed Forces: Dental Services

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the duties are of each defence dental personnel role; how many hours per week those in each role are expected to devote to the provision of dental care; and how many patients those in each role saw in each of the last five years. [138790]

Derek Twigg: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Armed Forces: Deployment

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) location and (b) number of personnel was for each operational deployment in 1997. [119056]

Mr. Ingram: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Armed Forces: Housing

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much HM Treasury has passed to the Ministry of Defence from monies received from Annington Homes in connection with sales of former Ministry of Defence housing and land in (a) the UK and (b) Colchester. [121129]

Derek Twigg: These monies enter a consolidated general cash account and are not paid back to the Ministry of Defence directly by Her Majesty's Treasury.

Armed Forces: Pay

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many armed service personnel have received a tax-free bonus for service in (a) Iraq, (b) Afghanistan and (c) the Balkans since October 2006. [142594]

Derek Twigg: The information broken down by operational theatre is not held within legacy service pay systems and the new Joint Personnel Administration system in the format requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

As at 13 June 2007, some 46,333 armed forces personnel had received payment of the tax-free Operational Allowance. This figure includes payments to Army personnel for more than one operational tour and excludes payments after 31 March 2007 to deceased, discharged and special forces personnel for all three services.

Armoured Fighting Vehicles

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research has been undertaken on the vertical and horizontal centre of gravity position of each of the various types of Land Rover used by the armed forces. [141041]

Mr. Ingram: The Department examined centre of gravity issues for Wolf Land Rovers when the Bowman communication system was introduced. The suspension on vehicles fitted for radios and Weapons Mount Installation Kits was improved by the fitment of a rear anti roll bar, which improved the vehicle's stability.

Snatch Land Rovers have also been assessed to examine the effects on stability and performance by the fitment of armour and the variety of potential load configurations.

The latest Land Rovers, like other vehicles procured by the MOD, were subject to rigorous assessment through a military validation and trials period, prior to acceptance into service.

Ballistic Missile Defence

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contribution the UK has made to the study agreed at the NATO summit in Riga in 2006 on a collective alliance territorial missile defence system. [143941]

Des Browne: The missile defence feasibility study that was delivered to the NATO summit in 2006 was financed from NATO common funds to which the UK contributes. QinetiQ were part of the industrial consortium that undertook the work. In common with other NATO nations, the UK reviewed and commented upon the feasibility study, and contributes to the continuing discussions in NATO on the implications of missile defence for the alliance.

Bank of England

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have given authorisations in relation to monies (i) held in and (ii) transferred from a British Aerospace account at the Bank of England since May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [143088]

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the role of the Paymaster General and her officials was in relation to the Bank of England account used for payments under the support services annexes to the Al Yamamah contract. [143182]

Des Browne [holding answers 19 June 2007]: The Department is not aware of any such account.

Defence: Procurement

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the value is of orders for urgent operational requirements placed in the last 12 months; and if he will list those items of equipment costing over £250,000. [143050]

Mr. Ingram: Between 1 June 2006 and 31 May 2007 the total value of approved urgent operational requirements was some £810 million. As the operations in Iraq and Afghanistan are still ongoing, much information regarding specific urgent operational requirements remains operationally sensitive and is withheld as its release would, or would be likely to, prejudice the security of our armed forces.

Departments: Advertising

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much revenue his Department received from advertisements on his Department's (a) public information leaflets and (b) public websites in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [142729]

Derek Twigg: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Aviation

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many flights to overseas destinations were taken by (a) civil servants and (b) Ministers in his Department in each of the last three calendar years; and what the total cost of such flights was. [144936]

Derek Twigg: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost. Since 1999, the Government have published on an annual basis, a list of all overseas visits by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500, as well as the total cost of all ministerial travel overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. Information for 2006-07 is currently being compiled and will be published before the summer recess. All travel is undertaken in accordance with the Civil Service Management Code, the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers.

Ex-servicemen: Military Decorations

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he plans to extend the eligibility for the issue of Veterans lapel badges to former members of the Women's Land Army. [143507]

Derek Twigg: Although the Women's Land Army included the word "Army" in its title, it was a civilian organisation formed to support agricultural production. While the Ministry of Defence acknowledges the importance of the efforts of all those who contributed to the country's war efforts in 1914-18 and 1939-45, it is not responsible for the recognition of those who served in such civilian occupations. Nor would it be appropriate to extend to them eligibility for the armed forces Veterans badge which was instituted specifically as a mark of recognition of service in the United Kingdom's armed forces.

Iraq: Peacekeeping Operations

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the contracts his Department has with private military and security companies for services provided in Iraq; what the value is of each such contract; what contracts are being (a) negotiated and (b) considered; what the expected value is of such contracts; and if he will make a statement. [132618]

Des Browne: For the purposes of this response I have taken the question to refer to armed security contracts.

The use of private mobility and security companies for the static guarding of empty buildings is currently being considered.

I also refer my right hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 5 March 2007, Official Report, column 1657W, to the hon. Member for Old Bexley and Sidcup (Derek Conway). No contracts are currently being negotiated between MOD and private military and security companies for services in Iraq.

Members: Correspondence

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the hon. Member for North East Milton Keynes's constituent Mr. Ron Nield to be sent a reply to his letter to the Service Personnel and Veterans Agency. [138906]

Derek Twigg: If the hon. Member could provide me with Mr. Nield's personal details (including service number if applicable), the date and subject matter of his letter and the address he wrote to I will be happy to provide him with the information he seeks.

Military Bases: Colchester

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for how many years the consortium awarded the private finance initiative for the Colchester garrison will have ownership of the land. [136841]

Derek Twigg: Under the terms of the Colchester garrison redevelopment contract RMPA Services PLC was granted a 150-year head lease over the land that forms the new garrison site. The Ministry of Defence retains overall ownership.

Nimrod Aircraft

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many fuel leaks were recorded aboard RAF Nimrod aircraft in the six months prior to September 2006. [142811]

Mr. Ingram: Between the period 1 March 2006 and 31 August 2006 a total of 52 fuel leaks were reported on Nimrod MR2 and R1 aircraft. A fuel leak is defined as any leakage of fuel from aircraft couplings, pipes or fuel tanks. These did not compromise the safety of the aircraft and were rectified under normal maintenance procedures.

North Atlantic Council

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the outcome of the North Atlantic Council defence ministers meeting on 14 and 15 June 2007. [144046]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 19 June 2007]: NATO Defence Ministers discussed a range of issues including the continuing transformation of NATO's capabilities, missile defence, and operational commitments in Afghanistan and Kosovo. Force planning issues were discussed at the annual meeting of the Defence Planning Committee in Defence Ministers' Session, and nuclear planning issues at the Nuclear Planning Group.

In addition, Afghanistan's Defence Minister, Abdul Rahim Wardak attended a special session of the North Atlantic Council together with the non-NATO nations contributing to the International Security Assistance Force. Allies underlined their commitment to the mission in Afghanistan, noted the progress that has already been made, and stressed the importance of Afghan ownership of security issues. The Council noted that the UN had been given a wider remit in the current Security Council Resolution and supported the efforts of the UN to maximise its impact and to expand its presence in the provinces of Afghanistan.

The Council also condemned the Taliban practice of deliberately endangering the civilian population of Afghanistan and underlined NATO's commitment to avoiding civilian casualties.

Project Al Yamamah

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what funds have been held by the Defence Export Services Organisation in relation to the Al Yamamah defence contract since May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [143089]

Des Browne: The financial arrangements of the Al Yamamah programme are confidential between the two Governments. I am withholding details as they would, or would be likely to, prejudice international relations and harm the interests of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will take steps to authorise the publication of the Comptroller and Auditor General's reports on the Al Yamamah contract. [142299]

Des Browne: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 8 December 2005, Official Report, column 1495W, to the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Lynne Featherstone).

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will publish the annexes to the Al Yamamah contract which cover support services; [142301]

(2) what requirement was laid down in the Al Yamamah contract on BAE to inform Ministers of payments made under the support services annexes of the contract; and if he will list all payments reported to Ministers as having been made under those provisions showing (a) the date, (b) the purpose and (c) the recipients of such payments. [142302]

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) which Ministers in his Department have been informed of payments made under the support services annexes of the Al Yamamah contract since 1997; [143183]

(2) when Ministers in his Department were first informed of payments being made by BAE Systems under annexes on support services to the Al Yamamah contract; [143005]

(3) what mechanisms were in place in his Department for official authorisation of payments made under the support services annexes of the Al Yamamah contract by BAE Systems before 1 June 2007; [143197]

(4) when the last payment was made by BAE under the support services annexes of the Al Yamamah contract of which his Department was made aware; and what information he has on arrangements for any future payments. [143198]

Des Browne [holding answers 19 June 2007]: Agreements reached under the Al Yamamah programme are confidential between the two Governments. I am withholding details as they would, or would be likely to, prejudice international relations and harm the interests of the United Kingdom.

RAF Brize Norton

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether landing rights have been provided to Prince Bandar of Saudi Arabia at RAF Brize Norton; and if he will make a statement. [143093]

Des Browne: A Saudi Arabian Ministry of Defence and Aviation registered aircraft used by Prince Bandar of Saudi Arabia, HZ-124, has been granted landing rights at RAF Brize Norton. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 21 May 2007, Official Report, column 1053W, to the hon. Member for Twickenham (Dr. Cable).

Technology Readiness and Risk Assessment Programme

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the status of the Technology Readiness and Risk Assessment Programme. [144013]

Des Browne [holding answer 19 June 2007]: The Technology Readiness and Risk Assessment Programme was completed in July 2001; an unclassified summary of the work is available in the Library of the House.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Anthony Bailey

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what role (a) Anthony Bailey and (b) Eligo International played in the Academies programme; and what payments each received. [144543]

Jim Knight: Anthony Bailey is on the governing body for Sheffield Park academy and Sheffield Springs academy, which are sponsored by the United Learning Trust.

Eligo International has no role in the Academies programme.

There have been no payments made by the Department to either Anthony Bailey or Eligo International.

Apprenticeships

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of students entering (a) apprenticeships and (b) advanced apprenticeships were already in employment in each year since 1997. [128574]

Phil Hope: Data on apprenticeships and advanced apprenticeships are collected on the Learning and Skills Council's (LSC) individualised learner record (ILR). The work-based learning (WBL) ILR was collated for the first time in 2002/03 and figures are given from that time. The following table shows the number of learners starting advanced apprenticeships and apprenticeships each year who were in employment on the day before their training commenced as a percentage of all starts.

	Learners in employment
	Number	Percentage	Total learners
2002/03
Advanced Apprenticeship	38,110	57	67,120
Apprenticeship	82,570	61	136,400
2003/04
Advanced Apprenticeship	38,510	68	56,960
Apprenticeship	95,970	70	136,610
2004/05
Advanced Apprenticeship	36,020	67	53,920
Apprenticeship	93,590	69	135,120
2005/06
Advanced Apprenticeship	39,400	76	52,130
Apprenticeship	88,450	72	122,850

Note:
Learners who are not employed on the day before their apprenticeship starts could enter as an employed status apprentice and their employment status then changes because of the Apprenticeship programme.

Children in Care: Standards

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will ensure that Ofsted involve young people with experience of care in its inspecting of care homes. [142311]

Jim Knight: This is a matter for Ofsted. HM Chief Inspector, Christine Gilbert, has written to my hon. Friend and a copy of her reply has been placed in the Library.

Letter from Christine Gilbert, dated 15 June 2007:

Your recent parliamentary question has been passed to me, as Her Majesty's Chief Inspector, for reply.

You asked whether Ofsted would ensure that young people with experience of care are involved in its inspection of care homes.

Ofsted involves young people by seeking their views during inspection and through highly focused surveys and consultation exercises. Seeking the views of young people is part of the statutory duties of the new Ofsted and developing this further is explicitly outlined in our new Strategic Plan.

Following the expansion of our remit in April this year, Ofsted is working hard to bring together the very best from all four predecessor organisations. At this stage, we are focusing on creating a high quality inspection programme across our expanded remit. We are also looking to incorporate the changes made to the National Minimum Standards and develop this work further over the next few years. This development work will include a range and choice of different methods for all children in inspected services to feed in their views about inspection outcomes.

A copy of this reply has been sent to Jim Knight MP, Minister of State for Schools, and will be placed in the library of both Houses.

City Academies: Private Sector

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether any city academy school sites are owned by private sector interests. [141025]

Jim Knight [holding answer 7 June 2007]: We are aware of one case where the freehold of an academy site is held by a private sector organisation. In this case, the land has been leased to the local authority which in turn has leased it to the Academy Trust.

We do not maintain central records which record whether Academy Trusts have freehold or leasehold interests and who granted them. This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

However, in all cases, the Academy Trust either owns the freehold of the site or will have been granted a lease of either 99 or 125 years. Where academies are being developed as part of the Building Schools for the Future programme, the Academy Trust will be granted a 125-year lease from the local authority which will commence upon completion of the building.

Class Sizes

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of all pupils aged five, six or seven have been taught in classes of 31 or more in each local education authority in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [142155]

Jim Knight: The information requested has been placed in the House Library.

Class Sizes: Middlesbrough

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average class size was for (a) secondary schools and (b) primary schools in Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland in each of the last 10 years. [143435]

Jim Knight: The available information is given in the table.

Maintained primary and secondary schools[1]: average class size[2]: Position in January each year 1998 to 2007[3]: Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland constituency

Classroom Assistants

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many learning support assistants there were in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in each local authority area in each of the last 10 years. [141222]

Jim Knight: The information is not available in the format requested.

Tables have been placed in the House Library showing the full-time equivalent number of teaching assistants employed in local authority maintained primary and secondary schools by local authority in each year from January 1997 to 2006 the latest information available.

Curriculum: Citizenship

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the scope for teaching citizenship outside places of education. [143816]

Jim Knight: The post 16 Citizenship support programme encourages development of relevant curriculum models across a wide range of provider types (including work-based, and youth and community providers). The emphasis is on active participation in young people's own communities. The Ofsted report on Citizenship found that the programme has been successful in showing what can be done in schools, colleges, youth centres and work-based training and recommended that such examples be shared more widely. This recommendation is being taken forward by the programme.

Degrees: Gender

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of (a) women and (b) men did not complete their degree in each of the last five years, broken down by the number of UCAS points on university entry. [144907]

Bill Rammell: Projected non-completion rates are released by the Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA) each year within the performance indicators in higher education publication.

The latest available non-completion projections are shown in table 1.

The 2004-05 figure will be released by HESA on 19 July 2007. These non-completion rates are not available broken down by gender or entry qualification. Drop-out is more likely to occur during the first year of higher education. The performance indicators also include non-continuation rates, which show the proportion of entrants who are not detected in higher education after their first year. The latest available non-continuation rates are shown in table 2.

Departments: Compensation

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was paid in compensation to (a) pupils and (b) teachers by his Department in each year since 1997. [132382]

Jim Knight: We have no records of any compensation payments made to pupils by the Department in the period since 1997. In 2003, a payment was made by the Department to a teacher assigned to the European Schools system in respect of the threshold pay that would have been paid had the teacher remained employed in maintained schools in England and Wales. The amount paid was £2,001. This answer has been provided on the assumption that it relates to payments to serving teachers. It therefore excludes any payments made under the Teachers' Pension Scheme to retired teachers.

Departments: Vetting

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which Ministers in his Department have been Criminal Records Bureau checked. [139185]

Alan Johnson: No DfES Minister is Criminal Records Bureau checked for holding ministerial office because such an office is not one of the excepted professions, offices, employments, work and occupations listed in the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974 (Exceptions) Order 1975, as amended.

Education: Capital Investment

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much capital expenditure there was in the education sector in Blackpool, North and Fleetwood in each year since 1997. [143974]

Jim Knight: The Department maintains records of capital allocations on a local authority rather than a constituency basis, also not on an expenditure basis. This is because local authorities may have access to other capital resources, and they decide locally when and how resources should be spent. Capital allocations by the Department to Blackpool, North and Fleetwood in each year since 1997 are set out in the following table.

	£ million
1996-97	0.00
1997-98	0.00
1998-99	2.81
1999-2000	4.33
2000-01	7.30
2001-02	8.83
2002-03	7.38
2003-04	17.03
2004-05	14.99
2005-06	11.61
2006-07	8.81
2007-08	5.04

The nil figures in 1996-97 and 1997-98 reflect local authority re-organisation.

The drop in 2007-08 is due to the fact that no Targeted Capital Fund (TCF) allocations are being announced this year. However, £3.8 million TCF allocations in 2005-06, and £3.9 million TCF allocations in 2007-08, will result in phased expenditure over a three year period commencing in the year of TCF allocations, including 2007-08. Other changes, from year to year, are affected by local authority forecasts of pupil numbers.

Education: West Lancashire

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much capital expenditure there was in the education sector in West Lancashire constituency in each year since 1997. [143526]

Jim Knight: The Department maintains records of capital allocations on a local authority rather than a constituency basis, also not on an expenditure basis. This is because local authorities may have access to other capital resources, and they decide locally when and how resources should be spent. Capital allocations by the Department to Lancashire in each year since 1997 are set out in the following table.

	£ million
1996-07	12.9
1997-08	13.3
1998-09	19.5
1999-2000	36.8
2000-01	42.2
2001-02	36.0
2002-03	55.5
2003-04	62.6
2004-05	44.2
2005-06	38.1
2006-07	54.7
2007-08	46.7

The increase in funding of £16.6 million in 2006-07, compared with 2005-06, is largely explained by Targeted Capital Fund schemes and a maintained boarding schools grant.

English Language: Education

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the number of English as an additional language pupils in West Lancashire constituency. [143535]

Jim Knight: The information is given in the following table.

Maintained primary and secondary schools[1] : number ad percentage of pupils whose first language is known or believed to e other than English[2]

	Number of pupils[2]	Number of pupils whose first language is known or believed to be other than English	Percentage of pupils whose first language is known or believed to be other than English[3]

Ethnic Minority Achievement Grant: Peterborough City Council

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he next plans to review the allocation of ethnic minority achievement grant to Peterborough city council; and if he will make a statement. [144094]

Jim Knight: The Government allocate resources to Departments on a three year cycle through spending reviews. DfES received its settlement for 2008-11 in the 2007 Budget. We are currently reviewing the Ethnic Minority Achievement Grant allocation for the next spending review period and aim to make an announcement in the autumn.

Every Child Counts Initiative

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) pursuant to the answer of 5 June 2007, Official Report, column 365W, on the Every Child Counts initiative, how many children are expected to participate in each tuition programme in each financial year until 2010-11; [144488]

(2) how many hours per week of one-to-one tuition in mathematics he expects to be provided to each child per week under (a) the Making Good Progress scheme and (b) the more intensive initiative; [144489]

(3) on what date he expects detailed funding allocations for the two schemes to be announced; [144505]

(4) whether his Department received its full allocation of finances for the two programmes within its settlement in the 2007 Budget; [144507]

(5) what estimate he has made of the cost of employing new staff to provide the one-to-one tuition in each financial year until 2010-11; [144508]

(6) on what date his Department first announced the more intensive initiative; [144509]

(7) when his Department first started making plans for the more intensive initiative. [144511]

Jim Knight: The Department is planning two separate, but related one-to-one tuition programmes, which will raise standards in maths:

one-to-one tuition to help 300,000 children who have fallen behind in English and mathematics by 2010-11. Such support is being trialled in the 'Making Good Progress' pilot; and a more intensive initiative specifically designed for early intervention in mathematics; a counterpart to the 'Every Child a Reader' literacy programme, on which we are already committed to nationwide roll-out.

The possibility of establishing a numeracy equivalent to Every Child a Reader was under consideration within the Department early in the new year, prior to the Chancellor's announcement at the Confederation of British Industry on 15 May.

We are currently in the process of planning the scope, resources and roll-out of the early intervention programme and analysing which areas of maths require most support. This will include looking at the numbers of children expected to participate as well as costs of employing new staff.

Under the Making Good Progress pilot children who have been identified for tuition in either mathematics or English will be entitled to up to 10 hours of one-to-one support. We have not recommended a particular pattern of delivery but have suggested that this should be decided on an individual basis. We estimate that the tuition offered through Making Good Progress pilot will reach 10,750 children in each of English and Maths in each of 2007-08 and 2008-09. The comprehensive spending review provides for 300,000 children in each of English and maths in 2010-11. We are currently considering plans on how to build up to that number.

Funding of £20 million for implementation of the Making Good Progress pilot in the first academic year, 2007/08, was announced on 6 June along with details of participating pilot schools. There will be further funding for implementation in the second academic year which will be settled through the Comprehensive Spending Review process.

We will announce detailed allocations for the more intensive initiative in due course.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 5 June 2007, Official Report, column 365W, on the Every Child Counts initiative, on what date the Making Good Progress pilot was (a) first announced and (b) started. [144490]

Jim Knight: The initial proposal for the Making Good Progress pilot was set out in the consultation document "Making Good Progress: How can we help every pupil to make good progress at school?" and launched on 8 January 2007. Following the consultation the list of participating schools and further details about the proposed pilot were announced on 6 June. The pilot, which will span two academic years, will begin in schools in September 2007 and finish in July 2009.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 5 June 2007, Official Report, column 365W, on the Every Child Counts initiative, how much has been spent on the Making Good Progress pilot. [144506]

Jim Knight: Funding of £20 million for implementation of the Making Good Progress pilot in the first academic year, 2007/08, was announced on 6 June along with details of participating pilot schools. There will be further funding for implementation in the second academic year which will be settled through the Comprehensive Spending Review process.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 5 June 2007, Official Report, column 365W, on the Every Child Counts initiative, what programmes his Department has run since 1997 prior to the two programmes for providing one-to-one tuition in (a) English and (b) mathematics. [144510]

Jim Knight: The Department is implementing the Every Child a Reader (ECAR) programme. We are in the third year of a three-year pilot which is helping over 5,000 six-year-olds with significant literacy difficulties to learn to read. It does this by placing highly skilled reading recovery teachers in schools to provide intensive one-to-one or small group support to children most in need.

As a result, we have announced that ECAR will be rolled out nationally from 2008-09, benefiting 30,000 children a year by 2011.

In mathematics, intervention 'Springboard materials' have been used for a number of years to support those children who have been identified as working just below age-related expectations and who, with support, might catch-up with their peers. Although they are more often used in group work, they can be used on a one-to-one basis. Wave three intervention materials have more often been used for individuals as well as small groups. Both these materials offer teachers a tracking chart to audit the child's attainment and to identify where to pitch the support.

The Department is also currently providing funding for reading mentors. We provide funding to Volunteer Reading Help (VRH); a charitable organisation which recruits, trains and places volunteers to give one-to-one help twice a week to children aged 6 to 11-years who find reading a challenge. Currently VRH has around 2,000 volunteer readers working with around 5,000 children.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 5 June 2007, Official Report, column 365W, on the Every Child Counts initiative, what contents and methods will be used in the (a) Making Good Progress pilot and (b) more intensive initiative. [144958]

Jim Knight: In "Making Good Progress" the one-to-one tuition will be a programme delivered by a qualified teacher and tailored to meet the needs of each individual child. As such there is no one method or set of materials which will be used. Tutors will liaise with the class teacher to ensure that the tuition that they offer meets the needs of that child and is closely tied in to the work that the child is doing in class.

We are currently in the process of planning the scope and resources of the more intensive initiative. We will make a further announcement in due course.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 5 June 2007, Official Report, column 365W, on the Every Child Counts initiative, how his Department will determine whether a child has fallen behind in English and mathematics and is therefore eligible for one-to-one tuition. [144959]

Jim Knight: In the "Making Good Progress" pilot teachers will use assessment for learning techniques to make judgments about where a child is in their learning, identifying areas of pupil strength and priorities for improvement. Teachers will use these judgments to assess whether a pupil is falling behind age-related expectations and should be offered one-to-one support.

We are currently in the process of planning the scope, resources and roll-out of the more intensive maths intervention programme, announced by the Chancellor on 15 May. This will include looking at how children will be assessed.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to implement the Every Child Counts initiative on a national basis. [140148]

Jim Knight: The Department is planning two related one-to-one tuition programmes, which will raise standards in maths:

one-to-one tuition to help 300,000 children who have fallen behind in English and in mathematics by 2010-11. Such support is being trialled in the 'Making Good Progress' pilot and a more intensive initiative specifically designed for early intervention in mathematics; a counterpart to the 'Every Child a Reader' literacy programme, on which we are already committed to nationwide roll-out.

We are currently in the process of planning the scope and roll-out of the early intervention programme and we will make a more detailed announcement in due course. Delivery is expected to begin during 2008.

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many girls from maintained schools were accepted to study (a) physics, (b) chemistry, (c) biochemistry, (d) psychology and (e) sports science at (i) a Russell Group university and (ii) other universities in each of the last five years; [142981]

(2) how many girls from maintained schools applied to study (a) physics, (b) chemistry, (c) biochemistry, (d) psychology and (e) sports science at (i) a Russell Group university and (ii) other universities in each of the last five years; [142982]

(3) how many girls from (a) independent and (b) grammar schools applied to study (i) physics, (ii) chemistry, (iii) biochemistry, (iv) psychology and (v) sports science at (A) a Russell Group university and (B) other universities in each of the last five years; [142983]

(4) how many girls from (a) independent and (b) grammar schools were accepted to study (i) physics, (ii) chemistry, (iii) biochemistry, (iv) psychology and (v) sports science at (A) a Russell Group university and (B) other universities in each of the last five years. [142984]

Bill Rammell: The available information is shown in the following tables. The figures are taken from data collected by the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS) which are limited to students who apply to full-time undergraduate courses via the UCAS application system. The figures do not therefore cover part-time students, nor those full-time students who apply directly to Higher Education Institutions.

Foundation Degrees

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of employers involved in foundation degrees were in the public sector in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and how many students studied for such degrees with public sector employers in each year. [142157]

Bill Rammell: We do not classify foundation degrees as public or private sector because students are recorded according to subjects studied and many courses would apply to the public, private and third sectors. Foundation degrees graduates are, however, well-represented in education, and subjects allied to medicine (which together amount to around 35 per cent. of all FD graduates) where the employment opportunities are largely in the public sector, and around a third of all FD courses currently running are in the areas of education, health and care, community or public services.

Employer involvement is an essential feature of all foundation degree programmes. Employers can be involved in the design, delivery and regular review of programmes. It is also expected that there will be recognition from employer bodies such as sector skills councils and professional bodies as well as close collaboration between employer and provider institutions—to ensure foundation degrees are responsive to meeting the nation's skill needs.

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many foundation degrees were awarded in each employment sector in each of the last five years. [142158]

Bill Rammell: The available information shows the number of Foundation Degrees awarded by subject area of study. The latest figures are shown in the table; comparable information for 2006/07 will be available in January 2008.

Free School Meals

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what proportion of children qualifying for free school meals had (a) one parent, (b) two parents and (c) neither parent in paid work in each year for which figures are available. [141691]

Further Education: Student Wastage

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students in further education in each of the regions failed to complete their course in the last 12 months; and how many of those were in the final year of their course. [132186]

Bill Rammell: Non-completion is not a standard measure used in further education (FE). The standard measure of success used in FE is the success rate, which refers to the proportion of qualifications achieved in each academic year against those who start working towards a particular learning aim. Learners who transfer to alternative provision during their programme of study are excluded from the calculation. The following table shows the regional success rates for 2002/03 to 2005/06—the latest full year for all FE funded courses.

FE success rates by region

Region	2002/03	2003/04	2004/05	Percentage 2005/06
East Midlands	69	73	74	76
East of England	67	70	72	75

The concept of learners on their final year of a course is also non-standard and is complex to derive and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Further Mathematics

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students are studying further mathematics A or AS level via the further mathematics network in (a) West Sussex and (b) England. [135179]

Jim Knight: The Department does not hold information on the subjects being studied by students at A level. However, data from examination awarding bodies show that 121 students aged 16-18 were entered for GCE A level further mathematics in West Sussex institutions in 2005/06. The number of entrants in England was 6,516. Equivalent figures for GCE AS level entries in further mathematics in 2005/06 were 60 in West Sussex and 4,078 in England. The data do not show how many of these were via the further mathematics network.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many students were entered for A level further mathematics examinations in each year since 1997; [135180]

(2) how many students were entered for further mathematics A level in each year since 1997. [135696]

Jim Knight: The figures requested are in the following table.

Table 1: GCE A level entries in further mathematics by candidates aged 16-18 in all schools and colleges

[143358]

(2) how many students obtained a grade C or above at GCSE level in Mandarin in each local authority in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [137431]

Jim Knight: This information can be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

GCSEs

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 15 March 2007 to question 117654, on GCSEs, how many mainstream (a) maintained and (b) independent secondary schools fell within each percentage point in terms of the proportion of pupils who achieved (i) seven and (ii) nine or more GCSEs at A*-C including English and mathematics in 2006. [132344]

Jim Knight: The information requested can be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of 15-year-olds attending (a) independent mainstream schools and (b) maintained mainstream schools achieved five or more GCSEs at A*-C including English, mathematics and science in each year since 1997 (i) in total and (ii) as a proportion of pupils entered for a full GCSE in English, mathematics and science. [143126]

Jim Knight: The information requested can be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Head Teachers: Science

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of head teachers have a degree in a science subject. [141488]

Jim Knight: The information is not available in the format requested.

Hearing Impaired: Sign Language

Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many lip reading and sign language teachers are employed in Copeland. [143177]

International GCSEs

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent discussions the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority has had with Cambridge International Examinations and Edexcel on the accreditation of the international GCSE; and if he will make a statement. [143952]

Jim Knight: As regulators of the public examination system, it is QCA's role to make sure they have reliable, current and comprehensive information on the qualifications market in England. The chairman and chief executive of QCA met Cambridge Assessment's Group chief executive and discussed iGCSEs at a meeting on Tuesday, 13 March 2007.

Languages: East Sussex

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which foreign languages were studied by pupils in (a) Eastbourne and (b) East Sussex for (i) GCSE, (ii) A/S-Level and (iii) A-Level in each of the last five years. [130950]

Jim Knight: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Maintained Schools: Qualifications

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many and what proportion of pupils in maintained schools did not achieve five A*-G grades at GCSE in each year since 1997, broken down by gender; [132180]

(2) how many and what proportion of pupils in maintained schools obtained A*-G grades at GCSE in each year since 1997, broken down by gender. [132181]

Jim Knight: This information is available in the Department's GCSE and Equivalent Statistical First Releases which have been placed in the House Library.

Nurseries: Fees and Charges

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the impact of increases in business rates on fee levels in (a) private day nurseries, (b) voluntary day nurseries, (c) nurseries located in schools and (d) Sure Start children's centres over the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [139717]

Beverley Hughes: No such assessment has been made. Costs and prices in the nursery sector are affected by a wide range of factors.

Some nurseries may be eligible for rate relief to ease the impact of business rates and some voluntary providers, if they pay rates, may be exempt under Schedule 5 of the Local Government Finance Act 1988.

Nurseries: Finance

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will take action to assist nurseries and childcare organisations which no longer receive funding from the National Nursery Initiative and are ineligible to become children's centres; and if he will make a statement. [145018]

Beverley Hughes: 1,400 Neighbourhood Nurseries were set up under the Neighbourhood Nurseries Initiative (NNI) which ran from 2002 until 2007, in the most disadvantaged areas within local authorities. 774 of these will become children's centres by March 2008 while others will link to children's centres for delivery of childcare places. The remainder will continue to operate as stand alone nurseries.

All NNs were required to develop a five-year business plan, demonstrating sustainability when Government funding ended.

Any Neighbourhood Nursery experiencing difficulty when their Government funding comes to an end, should contact their local authority in the first instance. They can provide support for business planning and marketing and in some circumstances may be able to provide financial support to aid sustainability. From 2008, all local authorities will have a duty to secure sufficient childcare in their areas and former Neighbourhood Nurseries will have a substantial part to play in that.

Nursery Schools: Codes of Practice

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what representations he has received on implementing the Code of Practice for Nursery Education in pilot areas; and if he will make a statement; [144893]

(2) when he expects the Code of Practice for Nursery Education to be fully applied (a) in pilot areas and (b) across England. [144894]

Beverley Hughes: The 2006 Code of Practice on the provision of free nursery education places for three and four-year-olds came into force on 1 April 2006. The Code of Practice is statutory guidance that all local authorities, including Pathfinder local authorities delivering the extended free early education entitlement from April 2007, must have regard to when fulfilling their statutory duty to secure sufficient nursery education for children in their area.

Officials meet regularly with representatives from the 20 Pathfinder local authorities. These meetings are opportunities to review progress and discuss emerging issues relating to the extension of the free entitlement to 15 hours.

Ofsted

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 124W, on Ofsted, how much Ofsted spent on legal advice on the drafting of the answer. [143261]

Jim Knight: This is a matter for Ofsted. HM chief inspector, Christine Gilbert, has written to my hon. Friend and a copy of her reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Christine Gilbert, dated 19 June 2007:

Your recent Parliamentary Question has been passed to me as Her Majesty's Chief Inspector, for reply.

You asked, following our response of 4th June 2007, Official Report, column 124W, how much Ofsted spent on legal advice on the drafting of that answer.

This information is not available as Ofsted obtains legal advice from an in-house Treasury Solicitors team on the basis of an overall monthly charge. Time is not recorded on a topic specific basis.

A copy of this reply has been sent to Jim Knight MP, Minister of State for Schools, and will be placed in the library of both Houses.

Ofsted: Pay

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what remuneration is received by the Chair of the Ofsted Board for that role. [144544]

Jim Knight: Remuneration for the Chairman of the Ofsted Board is £40,000 per annum.

Personal, Social and Health Education

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the evidential basis was for the statement made by Ofsted in its report "Time for Change? Personal, Social and Health Education" that (a) research suggests that education that promotes abstinence but withholds information about contraception can place young people at higher risk and (b) school nurses provide a particularly valuable service in providing emergency hormonal contraception to pupils; and if he will make a statement. [141462]

Jim Knight: This is a matter for Ofsted. HM Chief Inspector, Christine Gilbert, has written to the hon. Member and a copy of her reply has been placed in the Library.

Letter from Christine Gilbert, dated 13 June 2007:

Your recent parliamentary question has been passed to me, as Her Majesty's Chief Inspector, for reply.

You asked what the evidential basis was for the statements made by Ofsted in its report, "Time for Change? Personal, Social and Health Education (HMI 070049)", that (A) research suggests that education that promotes abstinence, but withholds information about contraception, can place young people at higher risk; and (B) school nurses are providing a valuable service by offering emergency hormonal contraception to pupils.

Our report states that 'there is no evidence, however, that 'abstinence-only' education reduces teenage pregnancy or improves sexual health. There is also no evidence to support claims that teaching about contraception leads to increased sexual activity. Research suggests that education and strategies that promote abstinence but withhold information about contraception can place young people at a higher risk of pregnancy and sexually transmitted infections (STIs).' There has been widespread international research in this area, including three pieces of research completed by the National Children's Bureau:

1. Blake, S and Frances, G (2001) Just Say No to Abstinence Education. London

2. Abstinence-only Education, Sex Education Forum, briefing May 2004

3. Swann, C., Bowe, K. MCCormick, G. and Kosmin, M. (2003) Teenage Pregnancy and parenthood: a review of reviews. Evidence briefing. London: Health development Agency. www.hda.nhs.uk/evidence

We found this research persuasive because it reflected our discussions with pupils in 350 inspections who said they valued clear sex and relationship education in school.

Our report states that 'school nurses can also provide a valuable service, particularly in terms of providing emergency hormonal contraception and advising on other forms of contraception'. This is in line with non-statutory guidance published by the Department for Education and Skills (DfES). The DfES publication "Teenage Pregnancy Next Steps: Guidance for Local Authorities and Primary Care Trusts on Effective Delivery of Local Strategies" (2006) sets out the key findings from 'deep dive' reviews carried out by the Teenage Pregnancy Unit to identify factors responsible for the significant variation in performance between local areas, including between areas that are statistically similar. The guidance states:

'Provision of young people focused contraception/sexual health services, trusted by teenagers and well known by professionals working with them.' This was the factor most commonly cited as having the biggest impact on conception rate reductions in the high performing areas. Features of successful services reflected the "Best practice guidance on the provision of effective contraception and advice services for young people" issued by the Teenage Pregnancy Unit in 2000: easy accessibility in the right location with opening hours convenient to young people; provision of the full range of contraceptive methods, including long acting methods; a strong focus on sexual health promotion (as well as reactive services) through, for example, outreach work in schools, work with professionals to improve their ability to engage with young people on sexual health issues; and through highly visible publicity. Effective services also had a strong focus on meeting the specific needs of young men. All high-performing areas also had condom distribution schemes involving a wide range of local agencies and/or access to emergency contraception in non-clinical settings.

Ofsted's own discussions with young people suggest they want and trust services in schools and welcome and recognise the commitment that schools show to meeting their wider health needs.

A copy of this reply has been sent to Jim Knight MP, Minister of State for Schools, and will be placed in the library of both Houses.

Pupil Exclusions

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils had been permanently excluded more than once in each of the last five years, broken down by (a) sex and (b) ethnicity; and how many such pupils had special educational needs. [142549]

Jim Knight [holding answer 20 June 2007]: The available information is given in the table.

[3] Less than 5 pupils.

Notes:
1. Information presented here has been derived from an extract of the National Pupil Database which has selected pupils with multiple cases of permanent exclusion from different schools collected via the 2002 through to 2006 School Census'. The characteristic data shown relates to information provided for the pupils' most recent exclusion.
2. A new set of codes to record the ethnicity of pupils was introduced in 2002. Schools were initially permitted to report ethnic data using either the old and new set of codes between which there is no direct mapping. This analysis separately shows data for those pupils whose ethnic group has been classified under the old coding framework.
3. The new SEN code of practice came into force in 2002 and introduced new codes for recording stage of SEN. Both the new and old codes have been used here.
4. Numbers have been rounded to the nearest 10. There may be discrepancies between the sum of constituent items and totals as shown.

Pupil Referral Units

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many pupils ceased attendance at a pupil referral unit because they had been sentenced to a term in a young offender institution in each year for which figures are available; [143806]

(2) what information he has collected on the number of pupils placed in pupil referral units who are later (a) sentenced to a term in a young offender institution and (b) subject to an antisocial behaviour order. [143807]

Jim Knight [holding answer 20 June 2007]: The Department does not collect this information.

Pupil Referral Units: Qualifications

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what proportion of pupils in pupil referral units did not obtain (a) five A*-C grades including English and mathematics at GCSE, (b) five A*-G grades at GCSE and (c) any passes at GCSE in each year since 1997, broken down by ethnic group. [132178]

Jim Knight: The information requested is not held centrally.

Pupils: Eastern Region

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total recurrent funding per pupil was in real terms in (a) Suffolk, (b) Bedfordshire, (c) Cambridgeshire, (d) Essex, (e) Hertfordshire and (f) Norfolk in each year from 1998-99 to 2007-08. [143926]

Jim Knight: The revenue funding figures per pupil aged 3 to 19 for Suffolk, Bedfordshire, Cambridgeshire, Essex, Hertfordshire and Norfolk for years 1998-99 to 2005-06 are provided in the following table:

Local authority	1998-99	1999-00	2000-01	2001-02	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06

Notes:
1. Price Base: Real terms at 2005-06 prices, based on GDP deflators as at 27.09.06
2. Figures reflect relevant sub-blocks of Standard Spending Assessment / Education Formula Spending (EFS) settlements and exclude the pensions transfer to EFS and LSC.
3. Total funding also includes all revenue grants in DFES Departmental Expenditure Limits relevant to pupils aged 3 to 19 and exclude Education Maintenance Allowances (EMAs) and grants not allocated at LEA level.
4. The pupil numbers used to convert m figures to per pupil are those underlying the SSA/EFS settlement calculations plus PLASC 3 year old maintained pupils and estimated 3 to 4 year olds funded through state support in maintained and other educational institutions where these are not included in the SSA pupil numbers.
5. Rounding: Figures are rounded to the nearest 10.
6. Status: Some of the grant allocations have not been finalised. If these do change, the effect on the funding figures is expected to be minimal.

The revenue per pupil figures shown in the table below are taken from the new dedicated schools grant (DSG) and are in cash terms. They are not comparable with those for the years 1997-98 to 2005-06 because the introduction of the DSG in 2006-07 fundamentally changed how local authorities are funded. The DSG is based largely on an authority's previous spending.

The 1997-98 to 2005-06 figures are based on education formula spending (EPS) which formed the education part of the local government finance settlement, plus various grants. This was an assessment of what local authorities needed to fund education rather than what they spent. In addition, the DSG has a different coverage to EFS. EFS comprised a schools block and an LEA block (to cover LEA central functions) whereas DSG only covers the school block. LEA block items are still funded through DCLG's local government finance settlement but education items cannot be separately identified. Consequently, there is a break in the Department's time series as the two sets of data are not comparable. An alternative time series is currently under development.

To provide figures for 2006-07 DSG, the Department has isolated the schools block equivalent funding in 2005-06. There are other grants that support the schools budget, these are not included in the DSG figures provided. The figures are for all funded pupils aged 3-15.

Local authority	2005-06 Baseline	2006-07	2007-08

Hertfordshire	3,294	3,507	3,730
Norfolk	3,208	3,423	3,648
Suffolk	3,160	3,372	3,591

Notes:

1. The revenue funding per pupil figures only run to 2005-06 because the Department cannot provide a consistent time series beyond that year as the introduction of the Dedicated Schools Grant (DSG) in 2006-07 fundamentally changed how Local Authorities are funded. The 1998-99 to 2005-06 figures are based on Education Formula Spending (EPS) which formed the education part of the Local Government Finance Settlement, plus various grants. 3. To provide a comparison for 2006-07 DSG, the Department has isolated the schools block equivalent funding in 2005-06; as described above this does not represent the totality of 'education' funding in that year. There are other grants that support the schools budget, these are not included in the provided DSG figures.

Pupils: EC Enlargement

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children originally from EU accession states were enrolled in schools in (a) Somerset and (b) Taunton constituency in (i) 2002, (ii) 2004 and (iii) 2006. [141229]

Jim Knight: The requested information is not held centrally.

Within the School Census (SC), schools are required to record ethnicity data that reflects the main categories used in the 2001 National Population Census. Children from the Czech Republic, Estonia, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Slovakia and Slovenia are recorded under the ethnic category 'Any Other White Background'.

Following a consultation exercise in 2002, local authorities (LAs) were given the option of using extended ethnicity categories in their schools if they felt that the main ones did not meet their local management needs. However, the extended ethnicity categories do not include separate codes relating to the eight European Union accession countries. They are all included within the 'White Eastern European' code.

Not all LAs have chosen to use the extended categories. The majority of authorities use a mixture of main and extended codes. As a consequence the Department does not hold complete data for the extended ethnic background categories.

Pupils: Languages

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of children in (a) Somerset and (b) Taunton constituency have English as a second language; and what funding has been made available for individual schools in each area to support those children in each of the last five years. [141231]

Jim Knight: The available information is given in the following table.

The revenue funding that local authorities allocate to their schools is a matter for local authorities to decide locally through their own local funding formulae (subject to satisfying the minimum funding guarantee for schools from 2004-05 onwards). According to their Section 52 Budget Statements, Somerset LA's local funding formula does not allocate any funding to schools via their individual school budget share specifically on the basis of having pupils for which English is a second language attending the school.

However, local authorities do receive additional funding from the Ethnic Minority Achievement Grant (EMAG). EMAG is intended to help local authorities narrow achievement gaps for those minority ethnic groups who are underachieving and to meet particular needs of pupils for whom English is an additional language. It is distributed to local authorities by formula which includes the number of EAL pupils in each LA. For this year, Somerset LA will receive an EMAG totalling £37,585, with locally determined formulae devolving at least 85 per cent. of this to schools. The grant is worth £179 million nationally in 2007-08.

Pupils: Vocational Guidance

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the provision of careers advice for (a) secondary school and (b) post-16 pupils; what steps his Department takes to ensure that provision is met; and what requirement there is for such provision to be inspected. [142976]

Jim Knight: Under section 114 of the Learning and Skills Act 2000, the Secretary of State has the power to provide or secure the provision of services which he thinks will encourage, enable or assist (directly or indirectly) effective participation by young people in education or training. This power is discharged through the Connexions service who provide careers advice (among a wider range of services designed to improve levels of participation in education and training) to young people aged 13 to 19.

Additionally, all maintained schools have a statutory duty to provide a planned programme of careers education from years 7 to 11. How schools deliver this requirement is up to the individual school, although the DfES provides a non-statutory framework as a guide. There are no statutory duties on providers of post-16 learning to provide a programme of careers education.

From April 2008, local authorities will have responsibility for the provision of Connexions services.

Connexions services are within the scope of annual performance assessments and joint area reviews of children's services, led by Ofsted.

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what records his Department has of the numbers of young people in secondary schools in England who accessed careers advisers in each of the last three years. [142989]

Jim Knight: Personal advisers in the Connexions service provide information, advice and guidance to young people on a range of issues. Information on these interventions is collected centrally, but we do not collect information specifically relating to careers advice given in schools.

Qualifications: Greater London

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many pupils obtained (a) no, (b) one, (c) two, (d) three and (e) four GCSEs at grades A*-C in English in (i) England, (ii) each region and (iii) each London borough in each of the last five years; [132137]

(2) how many pupils obtained (a) five, (b) six, (c) seven, (d) eight and (e) nine GCSEs at grades A* to C including English in (i) England, (ii) each region and (iii) each London borough in each of the last five years. [132174]

Jim Knight: The information requested has been placed in the House Library.

Reading: Mentors

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 6 June 2007, Official Report, column 508W, on reading: mentors, (1) whether it is part of the role of paid support staff acting as learning mentors in schools to provide intensive or one-to-one tuition in mathematics; [144446]

(2) what qualifications paid support staff acting as learning mentors in schools are required to have. [144447]

Jim Knight: Mentors can be used to offer specific support in mathematics as well as offering a wider role in supporting children as learners across a range of subjects. Support of a one-to-one type is more often undertaken by a teaching assistant who, working with the teacher, would identify the specific learning needs of the child. This one-to-one support is a mix of in-class support and out of class focused work.

There are no specific qualifications that support staff acting as learning mentors in schools are required to have. It is for individual head teachers to assess and decide whether staff have the necessary skills and experience to carry out the role and whether they need to access the range of training and support opportunities that exist for support staff acting as mentors.

School Leaving: Qualifications

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils leaving school at 16 there were without (a) five GCSEs at A-C, (b) five GCSEs at A-E and (c) GCSEs in (i) 2006 and (ii) 2005. [143138]

Jim Knight: The answer to parts (a) and (c) is given as follows:

Number of 15-year-old pupils[1] who did not achieve the above indicators in 2005 and 2006:

	2005	2006
Number of 15-year-old pupils[1]	636,771	648,043
Number of 15-year-old pupils[1] who did not achieve 5+ GCSEs at Grades A*-C	278,173	268,366

The answer to part (b) can be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Schools: Admissions

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many appeals were lodged by parents against non-admission of their children to (a) maintained primary schools and (b) maintained secondary schools by Cambridgeshire local education authority in each of the last 10 years; and how many were successful. [142513]

[1] Includes Peterborough local authority as before local government reorganisation (LGR).
[2] From 1 April 1998 : It is expected that the majority of appeals for the 1997/98 academic year will have been lodged prior to April 1998. In some cases these figures are either included in the original authority totals or were not available.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what estimate he has made of the total number of places in schools in each year to 2025; [143323]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of surplus places in schools in each year to 2025. [143325]

Jim Knight: The responsibility in law to plan school places is placed on local authorities. Local authorities are expected to take robust measures to remove surplus places and ensure that school places are where parents want them.

The Department collects data on the number of school places and numbers of pupils on roll on a school by school basis, together with LA wide pupil projections via an annual survey. The Department does not collect projections of the capacity of schools or the numbers of school places from local authorities.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the number of pupils in full-time education in each year to 2015. [143324]

Jim Knight: The Department's estimates for the number of pupils in full-time education in schools in England are shown as follows:

Projected numbers of pupils[1] in all schools

As at January each year	2007	2008	2009	2010	2011
All Maintained Schools[2]	7,383	7,300	7,208	7,157	7,076

All schools	8,010	7,953	7,911	7,885	7,860

[1] Full-time equivalents, counting each part-time pupil as 0.5. The numbers have been rounded to the nearest thousand.
[2] Pupil numbers in maintained schools includes those in nursery, primary, secondary (including pupils in sixth forms in secondary schools), maintained special schools and maintained Pupil Referral Units.
[3] Projections are based on a target of 200 academies by 2011.

Projections are not shown beyond 2011 because of the increasing degree of uncertainty over time, particularly for post-compulsory schooling.

Schools: Census

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he expects the January 2007 schools census data to be published; and if he will make a statement. [144095]

Jim Knight [holding answer 19 June 2007]: Provisional data from the January 2007 census were published on 16 April 2007 in the Statistical First Release on the Department's website:

http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000726/index.shtml

Final data will be published in September 2007. The Secretary of State is not expected to make a statement. Final data on special educational needs (also taken from the census) are published on 26 June.

Schools: Crimes of Violence

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils were excluded from school for violent conduct in each local education authority in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [142147]

Jim Knight: The available information has been placed in the Library.

The Department does not collect data on exclusions for violent conduct. We do have information on exclusions where the reason cited is 'physical assault against an adult' or 'physical assault against a pupil' and this is set out in tables which have been placed in the Library. Further information on reasons for exclusion is contained in SFR 24/2006.

Only two years of data relating to the reason for exclusion are currently available. The first year for which information on the reason for exclusion is available relates to the 2003-04 academic year. Exclusions data for 2004-05 academic year were published in June 2006. Data for the 2005-06 academic year are scheduled for publication on 26 June, 2007.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many pupil-on-pupil assaults there have been in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in each local education authority in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement; [142148]

(2) how many (a) primary and (b) secondary school teachers and teaching assistants have been assaulted in the classroom more than once in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [142152]

Jim Knight: The number of incidents of assaults towards staff and pupils in schools is not collected centrally.

From the academic year 2003/04, information is available on the reasons for pupil exclusions. These reasons include 'physical assault against a pupil' and 'physical assault against an adult'.

The tables provide a breakdown of the number of pupils who have been excluded for a fixed period or permanently from maintained primary and secondary schools for physical assault against a pupil or an adult.

Local authority level tables showing the number of permanent and fixed period exclusions by reason have been placed in the Library.

Schools: Finance

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding streams local authorities receive to facilitate the (a) expansion of existing schools and (b) construction of new schools as a result of a planned increase in (i) population and (ii) housing supply. [143477]

Jim Knight: It is the DfES which provides capital support for local authorities and schools to invest in school infrastructure, including for new pupil places as a result of population and housing growth. Allocations are made over each spending review period, and local authorities and schools plan their investment according to local priorities.

Allocations currently include capital support for new pupil places which takes account of local authority forecasts of pupil growth. Over the current spending review period this has been around £400 million per year. In addition, Building Schools for the Future plans take account of the future need for secondary age pupils; and the Primary Capital Programme from 2008-09 will also do this for primary pupils.

Where there is a clear exceptional demand which cannot be met from existing resources, local authorities can apply to the 'Basic Need Safety Valve' for additional capital.

Schools: Immigrants

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will discuss future allocations of funding in respect of the English as an additional language excellence programme with Peterborough city council; and if he will make a statement. [144347]

Phil Hope: It is a matter for each local authority—in consultation with their schools forums—to determine the level of funding between different providers and different programmes based on an assessment of local circumstances.

Schools: Middlesbrough

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many school places in Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland were not filled in 2006-07. [143436]

Jim Knight: The latest available data we have on the number of unfilled school places relate to January 2006, when there were 1,042 unfilled primary school places and 179 unfilled secondary school places in Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland.

Schools: Playing Fields

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether there is an appeal process for his decision to grant consent for a school playing fields to be sold off. [143649]

Jim Knight: There is no formal right of appeal other than through the courts.

Schools: Sports

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on his plans to expand competitive sport in schools. [143160]

Jim Knight: This Government are committed to the expansion of competitive school sport. The PE National Curriculum requires that all pupils are taught competitive games throughout key stages one to three, and pupils may choose to pursue them in key stage four, if they wish. Competition is also a key component of the National School Sport Strategy. The 2005-06 school sport survey found that:

71 per cent. of pupils are now participating in intra-school competitive activities and 37 per cent. of pupils are taking part in inter-school competition. Both figures have been rising year on year.

97 per cent. of schools held a competitive sports day in the last academic year and the network of school sport partnerships staged over 10,700 festivals of sport—multi-sport events organised by secondary pupils for partnership primary schools.

In addition, the introduction of a national network of Competition Managers, and events like the UK School Games, are building a stronger framework for competitive sport.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what representations he received from (a) hon. and right hon. Members, (b) schools, (c) teachers, (d) parents and (e) others on the funding position of the Panathlon Challenge in each of the last two years; [143162]

(2) what recent research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the effectiveness of the Panathlon Challenge in increasing the involvement of school children in competitive sport; and if he will make a statement; [143163]

(3) if he will make it his policy to offer the Panathlon Challenge further financial support. [144063]

Jim Knight: No such research has been commissioned. In the last two years, the Department has received one representation from a Member of Parliament and one from a teacher.

The Department provided the Panathlon Challenge with £850,000 of seed corn funding between 2003 and 2006 to support competitive sport in schools. It was made explicit that the funding was time limited and would not be extended beyond March 2006. Continued funding would divert resources away from direct investment in competitive sport in schools through the National School Sport Strategy.

Science: Higher Education

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many pupils from maintained schools were accepted to study (a) physics, (b) chemistry, (c) biochemistry, (d) psychology and (e) sports science at (i) a Russell Group university and (ii) other universities in each of the last five years; [142159]

(2) how many pupils from (a) grammar schools, (b) independent schools and (c) maintained schools with more than 14 per cent. pupils eligible for free school meals (i) applied and (ii) were accepted to study (A) physics, (B) chemistry, (C) biochemistry, (D) psychology and (E) sports science at (1) a Russell Group university and (2) other universities in each of the last five years. [142160]

Bill Rammell: The available information is shown in the tables. The figures are taken from data collected by the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS) which are limited to students who apply to full-time undergraduate courses via the UCAS application system. The figures do not therefore cover part-time students, nor those full-time students who apply directly to higher education institutions.

UCAS do not hold details of the level of free school meal eligibility at each school.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time students were studying on recognised courses at level (i) 2, (ii) 3 and (iii) 4 in (A) further education colleges, (B) universities and (C) institutions of higher education in each year since 1997. [127842]

Bill Rammell: Figures for those participating in further education (FE) can be derived from the individualised learner record (ILR). The FE ILR was collated for the first time in 2002/03 and figures are presented from that time.

Students: Loans

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will commission a study of the average number of years a graduate has to work to pay off student debt, basing the calculation on the additional earning power of their degree over the salary of a non-graduate. [143441]

Bill Rammell [holding answer 18 June 2007]: Graduates earn considerably more than non-graduates. Over their working life, the average graduate will earn comfortably over £100,000 more in today's valuation, than a similar individual who just had A-levels. The benefits of a degree are not just financial: holders of HE qualifications are about half as likely to be unemployed as non-graduates and graduates tend to live longer and be healthier than non-graduates.

The repayments on student loans vary according to the income of the individual borrower. Based on projected lifetime earnings for all graduates, the average time taken by individuals entering HE in 2006/07 who will fully repay their student loans is estimated to be around 13 years.

Sure Start Programme: Health Visitors

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance he gives local authorities on the involvement of health visitors in the provision of services for children and families in Sure Start centres; and what assessment he has made of the nature and extent of that involvement. [139231]

Beverley Hughes: The Government's planning and practice guidance for local authorities and the health service says that in the most disadvantaged areas we expect to see health visitors ideally working from Sure Start children's centres, or at least having strong links with centres.

The health-led parenting support project has been established in 10 areas to test an intensive home visiting programme for young, vulnerable first-time mothers. Visits are carried by health visitors and midwives linked to children's centres.

We do not collect information at national level on the nature and extent of services provided in every children's centre. We have however asked our delivery contractors Together for Children to ensure that LAs and local health partners are working together to plan and deliver children's centres. TfC are also collecting evidence of good practice to share and disseminate with LAs and the health service.

Teachers: Citizenship

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what progress has been made in the training of specialist teachers of citizenship. [143817]

Jim Knight: Since the introduction of citizenship education in 2002, over 800 teachers have completed Initial Teacher Training courses to become specialist citizenship teachers. In addition, places are available to train up to 1,200 existing teachers on the Citizenship Continuing Professional Development programme over the next two years which will allow citizenship teachers to broaden and deepen their subject knowledge.

Teachers: Pay

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average (a) primary and (b) secondary school teacher's wage was in the last 12 months in West Lancashire constituency. [143683]

Jim Knight: The information requested is not available at constituency level.

In March 2005 the provisional average salary of full-time regular qualified teachers employed in Lancashire local authority maintained schools was £31,670 in nursery and primary and £33,360 in secondary schools. This information is from the Database of Teachers' Records which is maintained primarily for pensions administration purposes and is the latest available.

Teachers: Science

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the (a) number and (b) percentage of (i) physics, (ii) chemistry and (iii) biology teachers holding a degree from a Russell Group university, broken down by age group. [142601]

Jim Knight: This information requested is not collected centrally.

The following table shows the number of mainstream science initial teacher training (ITT) trainees who gained qualified teacher status (QTS) in academic year 2004-05 and are known to be in a teaching post six months after they gained their QTS. It also shows the number of these science trainees who completed their training in Russell Group universities and the proportion of all newly qualified teachers (NQTs) in science in 2004-05 that completed their training in a Russell Group university.

1. Those in teaching post include those in the maintained sector and non-maintained sector as well as those where the sector is unknown.
2. Figures include those qualifying from secondary science courses and key stage 2/3 courses.
3 Figures are rounded to the nearest 10.
4. Russell group universities include, University of Birmingham, University of Bristol, University of Cambridge, Kings College London, University of Leeds, University of Manchester, Newcastle University, University of Nottingham, University of Oxford, University of Sheffield, University of Southampton and University of Warwick.
5. Science figures are for Mainstream ITT trainees and includes those trained though SCITTs, but excludes completers through employment based routes.
6. In addition to those known to be in employment there are an additional 230 science NQTs with unknown destinations across all ages, 50 of these NQTs are from Russell Group Universities. There were also 60 science NQTs who were seeking teaching posts six months after gaining QTS, of which 28 per cent. trained in Russell group universities.

TDA Performance Profiles

The break down of science courses in to the individual specialism is not available.

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the number and percentage of (a) physics, (b) chemistry and (c) biology teachers who qualified in each year since 1990 who are teaching in 2006-07 in (i) independent schools, (ii) maintained schools, (iii) grammar schools and (iv) city technology colleges and academies. [142602]

Jim Knight: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Teachers: Termination of Employment

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what his estimate is of the number of newly qualified teachers (NQTs) who left the profession within three years of obtaining NQT status in each of the last five years. [142523]

Jim Knight: The following table provides the number of teachers who had left service from the maintained sector in England by March in each of the last five years for which information is available having entered full or part-time regular service three years previously and having qualified during the year prior to that. This is the latest information available. It is not known how many of these teachers have left the teaching profession permanently and it is difficult to determine the number of those who have subsequently returned to service.

Full and part-time[1] teachers entering maintained sector service in England the year after attaining qualified teacher status who were no longer in such service three years later[2] by year

Year of qualification	No longer in service by March	Number of NQTs
1997	2001	3,880
1998	2002	3,640
1999	2003	3,860
2000	[3]2004	3,530
2001	[3]2005	3,520

[1] Part-time service may be under-recorded by between 10 and 20 per cent. and therefore these figures may be slightly underestimated.
[2] For example teachers qualifying in calendar year 1997 who have been recorded as in service in March 1998 and out of service in March 2001. Teachers may have returned to service since the date where they are shown as no longer in service or may have moved to teaching service outside of the English maintained sector.

Teachers: Training

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps he plans to take to secure recognition of employment-based teacher training programmes in countries outside the European economic area. [138847]

Jim Knight: It is not in our gift to secure recognition of employment based teacher training programmes in countries outside the European economic area. However in the light of a range of inquiries from teachers seeking to work in Commonwealth countries, I will be sending a letter to Commonwealth Education Ministers underlining the fact that, irrespective of the route by which teachers are trained—whether undergraduate, post-graduate or school-based—qualified teacher status is conferred only on the basis of rigorous assessment against an agreed set of professional standards.

Teaching Methods

Mr. Anthony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps his Department is taking to encourage place-based learning. [135216]

Phil Hope: There are two major areas of workplace training supported by Government to achieve an increase of employer engagement in training. Firstly, the number of young people participating in apprenticeships is at a record level with more than a quarter of a million now in learning involving 130,000 employers across 80 sectors. Secondly, from August 2006, "Train to Gain" was rolled out nationally. It is a new service to help businesses get the training they need to succeed including offering free training for low skilled employees. It offers employers impartial advice and easy access to quality training, matching training needs with training providers and ensuring that training is delivered to meet employers' needs. In its first year it has engaged more than 40,000 employers and over 150,000 learners in learning.

Both these approaches follow a structured training programme leading to qualifications with learning in the workplace being a key factor.

To encourage further training, the Government launched the "Skills Pledge" on 14 June. The Skills Pledge—open to all employers—is a voluntary public commitment by the leadership of an organisation to ensure that all staff are skilled, competent and able to make a full contribution to the success of that organisation.

Teaching Methods: Bedfordshire

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when Stratton Upper School and Community College in Bedfordshire adopted the Students As Learning Partners scheme at Key Stage 4; what results were achieved in (a) English, (b) mathematics and (c) other GCSEs in (i) the year before this approach was adopted and (ii) each year since this approach was adopted. [130316]

Jim Knight: Stratton Upper School adopted the Students As Learning Partners Scheme in the summer of 2003. The information requested for the years 2002-2003 to 2005-2006 can be provided only at a disproportionate cost. However indicators on the percentage of pupils to achieve five or more A*-C at GCSE including English and Maths GCSE, and the percentage to achieve five or more A*-C at GCSE for the years 2003 to 2006 can be found in the House Libraries in the Secondary School (GCSE and equivalent) Achievement and Attainment Tables 2006.

Thomas Telford School: Admissions

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what discussions he has had with Thomas Telford school in Shropshire on its admissions policy. [144279]

Jim Knight: Discussions are taking place with Thomas Telford school to amend its Funding Agreement to reflect a change in its post 16 admission arrangements. The Department has agreed to an increase in post 16 student numbers at Thomas Telford school to provide post 16 education for 100 Madeley academy students as part of Madeley Court school's conversion to an academy.

No discussions have taken place about admissions to year 7 in September.

Training

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many companies have signed a Skills Pledge; how many employees these companies employ; how many employees these companies expect to participate in the Skills Pledge's aim of obtaining a first level 2 qualification; and what proportion of these companies and employees are in the (a) public and (b) voluntary sector; [144597]

(2) what proportion of private sector companies which have signed the Skills Pledge work with Government agencies in a contractual relationship; and how many employees these companies have. [144598]

Phil Hope: On 14 June 157 employers made the Skills Pledge, which was launched by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions and Sir Digby Jones, the UK Skills Envoy. Thus far more than 1.7 million employees, of which around 1.1 million are public sector and over a 1,000 from the third sector, are covered by the commitment of these employers.

It is not possible to provide a detailed breakdown of the proportion of employees who will undertake their first full level 2 as each company will be working with the Learning and Skills Council to understand their skills gap and how best to meet that need. We expect that for some companies the gap may translate into higher level skills, as well as supporting those employees to gain basics skills, such as literacy and numeracy. All of these companies have access to the advice and guidance of independent skills brokers, should they need one. For companies with more than 5,000 employees they receive a similar service through the National Employer Service.

Information on which of these companies hold a contract with Government agencies is not held centrally.

Truancy

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils were persistent truants in schools with (a) fewer than 1,000 pupils, (b) 1,000 to 1,500 pupils and (c) more than 1,500 pupils in the latest period for which figures are available; and what proportion this represented of all pupils in each category. [142504]

Jim Knight [holding answer 20 June 2007]: The Department does not maintain records of 'truancy', as authorised absence rates include lateness and unauthorised holidays during term time.

Information relating to persistent absentees by size of school is given in the table. Persistent absentee pupils are absent (authorised and unauthorised) for 20 per cent. of schooling.

The first year for which information on persistent absentees is available relates to 2005/06 and covers only maintained secondary schools, city technology colleges and academies. For the 2006/07 school year this information will also be available for maintained primary schools and special schools. This is expected to be available in February 2008.

Some pupils may be counted more than once (if they moved school during the school year or are registered at more than one school).
[4] There were some 7,240 cases from maintained secondary schools; 20 cases from CTCs and 370 cases from academies for whom absence data were missing. These cases have been excluded from the total number of pupil enrolments.

Vocational Training

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many individuals in each region are undertaking training as part of the Train to Gain scheme in 2007-08; and if he will make a statement. [138758]

Phil Hope [holding answer 14 June 2007]: Train to Gain is an ongoing service and as such performance is updated on a regular basis. Detailed operational information is not held centrally by the Department but is collected by the Learning and Skills Council (LSC); Mark Haysom as the LSC chief executive has written directly to my hon. Friend and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Rob Wye dated, 21 June 2007:

I am writing in response to your recent parliamentary question to the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, about how many individuals in each region are undertaking training as part of the Train to Gain scheme in 2007-08. I am writing on behalf of Mark Haysom as he is on annual leave.

In the period April 2006 - March 2007, the regional breakdown of Train to Gain learners was as follows

	Number
East of England	9,500
East Midlands	10,440
London	8,340
North East	10,690
North West	21,990
South East	11,640
Southwest	9,120
West Midlands	17,510
Yorkshire and the Humber	16,370

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many qualifications have been awarded under Train to Gain, broken down by (a) sector and (b) (i) level and (ii) year awarded. [142161]

Phil Hope: The Train to Gain programme commenced in select regions from April 2006. A full rollout of Train to Gain commenced from August 2006.

To date 38,760 learners have succeeded in gaining their qualifications:

	Number
Skills for Life achievements	3,920
Level 2 achievements	32,800
Level 3 achievements	2,040

Source: LSC Management Information

The LSC is planning to report on Train to Gain success rates, including sector breakdowns, in the 2006-07 learner outcomes statistical first release: Further education and work-based learning for young people—learner outcomes in England, which is expected to be published in April 2008.

West Jesmond School: Newcastle

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what advice he has received from the Highways Agency on the proposed temporary relocation of West Jesmond Primary School to the Castle Dene site in the Dene ward of Newcastle upon Tyne East and Wallsend Parliamentary constituency; [143729]

(2) what information he has received from Newcastle City Council about the proposed temporary relocation of West Jesmond Primary School to the Castle Dene site in the Dene ward of Newcastle upon Tyne East and Wallsend Parliamentary constituency. [143730]

Jim Knight: The Department normally allocates capital funding to local authorities, and relies on them to determine how this should be used. Decisions on relocation and reorganisation of the school estate are also made locally, and the Department does not generally receive information on such changes. However, exceptionally Newcastle local authority have been granted additional funding for this off-site decant (£900k), by the Department, after presenting a case based on health and safety concerns. This school is to be rebuilt as part of the 'Building Schools for the Future' Programme. I understand, from an update report published by Newcastle city council, that this decant will take place over Christmas 2007. I have received no information from the Highways Agency.

Departments: Aviation

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many flights to overseas destinations were taken by (a) civil servants and (b) Ministers in her Department in each of the last three calendar years; and what the total cost of such flights was. [144934]

Hilary Armstrong: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost. Since 1999, the Government have published on an annual basis, a list of all overseas visits by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500, as well as the total cost of all ministerial travel overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Library of the House. Information for 2006-07 is currently being compiled and will be published before the summer recess. All travel is undertaken in accordance with the "Civil Service Management Code", the "Ministerial Code" and "Travel by Ministers".

Departments: Energy

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many energy saving lightbulbs were purchased by her Department for use on the departmental estate in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006. [144933]

Hilary Armstrong: The information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Official Visits

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Minister without Portfolio which destinations she visited in an official capacity between 17 May and 17 June. [144550]

The Minister without Portfolio: On Friday 25 May, I visited St. John's Church of England Primary School in Croydon to participate in "The Big Stand", an event organised by the charity "Beatbullying".

Departments: Remploy

Danny Alexander: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what (a) services and (b) products her Department has procured from Remploy in the last 12 months; and at what cost. [143801]

Hilary Armstrong: The Cabinet Office has not procured any services or products from Remploy in the last 12 months.

Peninsula Business Services

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what payments (a) her Department and (b) its agencies have made to Peninsula Business Services since May 1997. [144534]

Hilary Armstrong: The Cabinet Office has not made any payments to Peninsula Business Services since May 1997.

Voluntary Organisations: Public Service

Mr. Bone: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment her Department has made of the effectiveness of the use of third sector organisations to undertake public functions. [143868]

Edward Miliband: In December, 2006, the Government published "Partnership in Public Services: An action plan for third sector involvement". The plan notes that third sector organisations are particularly effective in delivering services where the high levels of public trust, confidence and affection they enjoy are most important. From enabling patient self-care to engaging parents in their children's education, third sector organisations' strengths often lie in developing services that empower people and which are tailored to their needs. In addition, third sector organisations play a highly effective role as a catalyst for service improvement. However, the plan also notes that there is variation in the performance of different organisations across all sectors and that opportunities should be open to all without bias to one sector.

Voluntary Work

Ann Keen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of (a) volunteer week in raising awareness of the role volunteers play in local communities and (b) measures taken by local authorities to harness third sector public service provision. [144151]

Edward Miliband: Volunteers' week (1-7 June) is the UK's annual celebration of the work volunteers do and is co-ordinated by Volunteering England (VE). VE assess the effectiveness of the week by analysing media coverage and data collected via a questionnaire given to those who participated in the week. The closing date for this year's survey is 20 July therefore the analysis is not currently available.

The Government are committed to working with local government to enable the third sector to make an effective contribution to better public services. One mechanism for this is through the Compact. 99 per cent. of local authorities have local compacts in place or under development with the third sector. These provide the basis for partnership working within the sector and support local area agreements by setting out priorities for improving public services in local areas.

Third sector organisations still face barriers to delivery of public services. However, the Office of the Third Sector (OTS) and Communities and Local Government are taking steps to address these barriers through OTS action plan: "Partnership in Public Services". This includes a programme to train 2000 of the most significant public sector commissioners, many of whom will be drawn from local authorities.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Departments: Foreign Relations

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many memorandums of understanding are in force as a result of agreements with foreign Governments entered into by Ministers in his Department; and what executive actions each entails. [144473]

The Deputy Prime Minister: My Department has not agreed any memorandums of understanding with foreign Governments.

Departments: Official Residences

Mrs. May: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the official ministerial residences allocated to him; and what the total annual cost is of running each. [141974]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I refer the right hon. Lady to the answer given to her by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 14 June 2007, Official Report, column 1263W, and to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) by the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Doncaster, North (Edward Miliband) on 25 July 2006, Official Report, column 1637W.

Departments: Sign Language

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the merits of providing British Sign Language (BSL) videos on his departmental website for the benefit of those whose first language is BSL. [142498]

The Deputy Prime Minister: Following the recognition of British Sign language (BSL) as a language in its own right in March 2003, the Government committed £1.5 million funding for 10 projects designed to improve the infrastructure supporting BSL tutors and to raise awareness of the communication needs of Deaf BSL users among employers, service providers and in the wider community. The aim is for the outputs from the projects to have a lasting and sustainable impact. There are no videos on my departmental website.

Government Departments: Health

Mr. Bone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent steps he has taken to improve the coordination of the work of Government Departments on health matters. [143962]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I am Chair of the Cabinet Committee on Public Health (DA(PH)). Its terms of reference are to co-ordinate and monitor the implementation of the Government's policies to improve public health and reduce health inequalities.

Co-ordination across Government has been necessary to address a range of public health issues, including reducing smoking rates, tackling obesity, reducing teenage pregnancy rates, promoting sport and physical activity, developing Healthy Schools, and tackling drug and alcohol abuse and misuse. Owing to these developments, our reform programme and the fact that 10 years of economic prosperity, we have been able to treble the health budget in cash terms between 1996-97 and 2007-08. This has allowed us to employ over 79,000 more nurses and over 36,000 more doctors, significantly to reduce waiting lists (the average wait for inpatient treatment is now 6.4 weeks) and to regenerate the NHS estate (with 150 new hospitals open, under construction or in procurement).

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departments: Homeworking

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in his Department have been allowed to work from home for part of the week in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on home working. [143879]

Paul Goggins: Some members of staff in the Northern Ireland Office work from home from time to time on an ad hoc basis, with agreement from their local management. We do not record these details centrally.

The Department is currently examining whether it would be possible to expand these arrangements to allow people to work from home on a more regular basis, bearing in mind cost, security, and health and safety issues.

Departments: Manpower

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many officials work in his Department. [143175]

Paul Goggins: As at 1 June 2007 the Northern Ireland Office employed 2,172 officials; this figure includes non-uniformed staff in the Northern Ireland prison service, staff within Youth Justice Agency, Compensation Agency and Forensic Science Northern Ireland.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of staff in his Department are (a) male, (b) female, (c) registered disabled and (d) aged 55 or over. [143917]

Paul Goggins: Within the Northern Ireland Office:

	Percentage of staff
Male	39
Female	61
Registered disabled	4
Aged 55 years or over	11

Departments: Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff in his Department received bonus payments in 2006-07; what proportion of the total workforce they represented; what the total amount of bonuses paid was; what the largest single payment was; and if he will make a statement. [143095]

Paul Goggins: The information set out as follows comprises bonuses paid under the special bonus scheme, and the performance arrangements for all NIO staff at senior civil service level and below. Performance bonuses are paid subsequent to the reporting year. Bonuses relating to the 2005-06 reporting year were paid in 2006 and were as follows:

Number of staff receiving a bonus: 1,024

Proportion of total work force: 49.2 per cent.

Total amount of bonuses £686,425

Largest single payment: £11,000

Statistics are not yet available for the 2006-07 reporting year, as decisions on performance are currently being taken.

All of these bonus payments are non-consolidated and non-pensionable and therefore do not have associated future costs for paybill.

Departments: Sick Leave

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what average number of days per year was taken by staff in his Department as sick leave in each of the last five years for which records are available. [143083]

Paul Goggins: The following table details the average number of days per year taken as sick leave by staff in the Northern Ireland Office in the last five years.

	Days lost per staff year
2000-01	12.8
2001-02	13.4
2002-03	13.7
2003-04	14.0
2004-05	12.6
2005-06	11.2

Driving Offences: Convictions

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were convicted of driving offences in (a) each constituency and (b) each council area in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [142633]

Maria Eagle: Conviction data are not available by Northern Ireland constituency. The statistics included within the response are based on the 12 police divisions for the years 1996 to 1999 and the 29 police district command units (DCUs) for the years 2000 to 2005. It is not possible to disaggregate data by DCU for years prior to 2000.

With the exception of overall totals, figures in Table 1 should not be compared with those in Table 2, as Table 1 figures relate to the police division to which an offence was reported, while those in Table 2 relate to the police district command unit in which an offender's address falls.

Data are collated on the principal offence rule; thus only the most serious offence with which an offender is charged is included.

There has been a steady growth in academic qualifications taken and achieved over the last six years. A culture of learning is well established amongst staff and young people and the centre will seek further to strengthen this ethos by continuing to motivate, encourage and promote the value of education in improving the life chances and opportunities for young people. Service delivery is regularly reviewed and additions to the curriculum will be made in response to the requirements of custody and community plans.

Paul Goggins: The locations of static speed traps are recorded by district council area rather than by constituency. The PSNI have advised us that the number of speed traps in each area is as follows:

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Broadband

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps the Government offices in the regions are taking to expand (a) their own broadband use and (b) broadband use within their regions. [143155]

Angela E. Smith: I have been asked to reply.

Government Offices are committed to providing staff with remote broadband access to their work systems where there is a justified business need. A number of staff have been provided with broadband access from their homes and further staff will be receiving connections in due course as business needs are identified.

Government Offices have no remit to expand broadband usage through their geographic boundaries.

Departments: Foreign Relations

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many Memoranda of Understanding are in force as a result of agreements with foreign Governments entered into by Ministers in his Department; and what executive actions each entails. [144466]

Mr. McCartney: This information is not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Electronic Equipment: Waste Disposal

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment his Department has made of the effect of UK implementation of the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment on product design. [144039]

Malcolm Wicks: The Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive encourage producers of electrical equipment to consider design of new products to facilitate environmentally sound treatment and reprocessing when equipment reaches its end of life.

The UK has addressed this issue through regulation 59 of the waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Regulations 2006 (SI 3289).

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many electronics producers have recycling obligations under the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment (WEEE) Regulations which come into force on 1 July; and how many of these are registered with a WEEE compliance scheme. [142770]

Malcolm Wicks: The regulatory impact assessment issued alongside the WEEE Regulations estimated that there could be up to 7,000 producers with obligations under the WEEE Regulations which place around 2 million tonnes of electrical and electronic equipment (EEE) on the UK market annually.

To date over 3,100 producers have registered in the UK representing all the major producers with a combined sales of just under 2 million tonnes of EEE sales. This total compares well with levels of producers registered in other European member states and we are confident that we have captured the bulk of UK obligated producers in terms of sales.

The Government do recognise that there are a number of small producers who have yet to register. The DTI in conjunction with the environment agencies will therefore continue to promote the WEEE Regulations and encourage these producers into the UK WEEE system.

Energy Supply

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions his Department has had with Ofgem on the information the regulator needs to meet the new role assigned to it in the Energy White Paper of analysing the long term energy outlook in order to address concerns about security of supply. [143864]

Malcolm Wicks: As explained in the White Paper, the new Energy Markets Outlook is to be jointly run by my Department and Ofgem and will draw on analysis from National Grid, the wider industry and other sources. Information gathering and analytical work is now under way for the first report which will be published in the autumn.

Environment Protection

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps are being taken to improve and reinforce consumer and investor confidence in new environmental technologies. [144248]

Malcolm Wicks: The UK has a thriving environmental sector, employing around 400,000 people, and forecast to grow from £25 billion in 2005 to £46 billion by 2015.

Supporting the development of new environmental technologies is key to the Government's aim to enhance the UK's position in worldwide environmental markets and to realise the benefits of the jobs it can create. Engaging the knowledge and experience of business to direct DTI support for new technology will help grow consumer and investor confidence in this area. Through the DTI's technology programme, the Government have ring fenced £20 million per annum between 2005 and 2008 for investment in low carbon energy technologies.

Other investments support innovative technologies that can enhance the efficiency with which materials, energy and water are utilised, and through the minimisation of waste. Examples include lean manufacturing and environmentally-friendly vehicles.

The Commission on Environmental Markets and Economic Performance was established in November last year and intends to publish its report in this parliamentary Session (before 26 July 2007). It will make recommendations for action by Government and business on how the UK can make the most of the opportunity that environmental protection can present for wealth creation and employment growth.

The Commission is jointly-chaired by the Secretaries of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs and Trade and Industry, and its membership is drawn from business, non-governmental organisations, academia, trade unions and public sector organisations.

Furniture: Imports

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps trading standards enforcement officers take to ensure that furniture imported into the UK from other EU member states meets the safety requirements of the relevant legislation. [143112]

Mr. McCartney: Under single market rules, goods from other EU countries must be allowed to circulate freely. Products accepted for sale in one member state cannot be banned from sale in any other member states, except on safety grounds. How Trading Standards undertake market surveillance with regard to the safety legislation they enforce is a matter for them. I understand Trading Standards liaises with HM Revenue and Customs on furniture imports as appropriate, and that this has resulted in furniture being detained and convictions obtained for non-compliance with the Furniture and Furnishings (Fire) (Safety) Regulations 1988 (FFRs). They also act on tip-offs regarding unsafe furniture being sold door-to-door, at boot sales or at the side of the road, and make routine checks of furniture in retail outlets. In the period 1 April 2003-31 May 2007 there were 48 convictions for furniture not complying with the FFRs. This figure is from the Office of Fair Trading who stress it is based on returns received and that the actual figure is likely to be somewhat higher.

Gardens: Heating

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his Department's policy is on the labelling of outdoor patio heaters for energy efficiency standards. [140648]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

Mandatory energy labelling in the European Union (EU) is covered by Framework Directive 92/75/EC, which requires that certain appliances display an energy label where they are offered for sale. This does not apply to outdoor patio heaters.

The European Commission has started a review of the EU mandatory energy labelling scheme and the most recent information we have is that it intends to bring forward a revised proposal in early 2008.

The UK supports the extension of the labelling scheme to a much wider range of energy using products.

International Atomic Energy Agency: Recruitment

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with the International Atomic Energy Agency on its recruitment policy, with particular reference to the advertising of its vacancies; and if he will make a statement. [144001]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 19 June 2007]: The Government are aware that the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) advertises vacancies for Professional and General Service posts on its website. Officials from the UK Mission to the IAEA in Vienna have met several times with the agency's personnel division to discuss their recruitment practices. The IAEA's personnel systems, including their recruitment section, are subject to oversight by the agency's external auditors, the latter are appointed by members of the IAEA board of governors of which the UK is a permanent member. In addition the IAEA division of management publishes a biennial report on human resource management, which is issued to IAEA member states. The Government believe this is an acceptable level of scrutiny for such an organisation and are therefore satisfied that the recruitment policy of the IAEA is fair and transparent.

Internet: Counterfeit Manufacturing

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate his Department has made of the losses suffered in each of the last five years by the British film, music, retail and rental industries as a result of internet piracy and the production and distribution of illegal copies of film and music; and if he will make a statement. [143213]

Malcolm Wicks: Industry estimates that in 2005 the worldwide value of trade in pirate music discs was $4.5 billion while 20 billion tracks were illegally downloaded. In the same time the criminal gain in the UK from DVD piracy was estimated at £278 million. The Government are committed to working with industry to address this problem.

Better intelligence is the key work to combating intellectual property crime across the board. We need a better understanding of the criminals involved and their business methods. The Government have been working on this and a number of areas where existing material appears to be deficient. The UK Intellectual Property Office has set up an intelligence hub and is bringing in expert resources. Collaboration is vital, and I call on all sectors to become involved in the important work and to share the information they have.

Nanotechnology

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much the Government spent on nanotechnology in each of the last 10 years; and how much it plans to spend in the next 10 years. [143207]

Malcolm Wicks: A wide variety of Government supported research activities could to some extent be deemed to embrace nanoscience and nanotechnologies, thus it is not possible to accurately identify all Government funding in this area in the last 10 years.

With this proviso, the estimated Government support committed for nanotechnology work over the last 10 years amounts to about £408 million as follows:

	£ million
2006-07	66.27
2005-06	66.0
2004-05	65.76
2003-04	60.80
2002-03	40.58
2001-02	50
2000-01	35.5
1999-2000	11.00
1998-99	12.39
1997-98	[1]

[1] No data available (as there was no nanotechnology relevant coding at this time).

It is not possible to say precisely how much the Government will spend on nanotechnology over the next 10 years. These decisions will be based on the outcome of the comprehensive spending review and commercial and academic opportunities identified by the DTI's Technology Strategy Board and the Research Councils.

New Businesses: Stafford

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many new business start-ups there were in Stafford constituency in each of the last three years; and what estimate he has made of the likely start-up rate in the next three years. [122236]

Margaret Hodge: The figures in the following table reflect the number of business start up activity in Stafford assisted by Business Link funding, they are:

	New business starts
2005-06	150
2004-05	125
2003-04	110

From April this year the five existing Business Link services have been replaced by a single, regionally managed and locally delivered service. As a result there will be no dedicated/targeted services for Stafford/ Staffordshire as we have now set-up a regionally wide consistent service.

Over the same period, Advantage West Midlands (AWM) through its business creation activity has assisted:

	Business creation[1]
2005-06	1,650
2004-05	225
2003-04	864

[1] Businesses created and demonstrating growth after 12 months and businesses attracted to the region.

Disaggregated figures are unavailable on a sub regional basis.

In the current FY 2006-07 AWM, has assisted 1,293 business start ups from a forecast target range of 1,232-1,848. For FY 2007-08 the target range for new business creation is 1,264-1,896.

Forecast estimates over the next two financial years (2008-09, 2009-10) on a sub regional or on a regional basis is not available. The outcome of the comprehensive spending review 2007 will determine how regional development agencies corporate plans, explains what it plans to deliver in return for the resources allocated to it, are being developed and it is difficult at this stage to provide forecasts.

Nuclear Decommissioning Authority: Finance

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what effect he expects the planned change in funding for the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority in financial year 2007-08 and subsequent years to have on employment at the UK Atomic Energy Authority's Harwell and Winfrith sites. [142651]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 14 June 2007]: The outcome of the Government's comprehensive spending review (CSR07) is not expected until autumn 2007. It is for the Site Licence Company to determine what effect CSR07 funding might have on employment at the sites.

Radioactive Wastes: Waste Management

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 11 June 2007, Official Report, column 772-73W, on radioactive wastes: waste management, what definition he uses of full share of waste management costs. [143292]

Malcolm Wicks: The reference in the Energy Review report to sharing costs reflects the fact that the storage facilities and deep repository will be primarily for waste that already exists: this will be for the public sector to fund. But we need to decide what contribution owners of new nuclear plant should make to the total costs. Our principle is that they should meet their "full share" of these costs, but we need to do more detailed work on how this should be calculated.

Science: Education

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps have been taken to evaluate the 21st century science GCSEs, and other new syllabi. [141468]

Bill Rammell: I have been asked to reply.

I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given on 11 June 2007, Official Report, column 790W.

Science: Government Assistance

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what mechanisms exist in Government to coordinate, develop and evaluate science centres. [144107]

Malcolm Wicks: DTI supported the start up of Ecsite UK, an umbrella organisation for science and discovery centres, to provide a national voice to the Government and to be the point of reference for the work of science and discovery centres. The Government have never had any direct responsibility for the set up and development of any individual science centres.

DTI and DfES are funding an Ecsite-UK initiative, totalling £750,000 between November 2006 to March 2008, for work which will enable consortia of science centres to work more effectively together and in collaboration with other organisations, with the objective of achieving financial sustainability.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of science centres in the UK and of their role in science education; and what the Government's plans are for the development of science centres in the next five years. [144108]

Malcolm Wicks: Science centres are one of the many ways in which enthusiasm for science can be generated among young people. DTI and DfES are currently providing £750,000 to Ecsite UK, an umbrella body for science and discovery centres, for work specifically designed to allow science centres to assess how they can work in combination with others, to achieve financial sustainability.

Future development of science centres is a matter for the science centres themselves.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Asylum: Deportation

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with how many people against whom removal proceedings had commenced the Immigration and Nationality Directorate lost contact in each month of the last two years; and what percentage this represents of the total number of people against whom removal proceedings were commenced in each month. [123572]

John Reid: The information requested could be obtained only by the detailed examination of individual records at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) which countries received returning failed asylum applicants under the UK enforced returns programme in each year since 2004; how many enforced returnees were sent back to each of those countries in each year; and what packages of assistance were provided in each case; [131570]

(2) which countries have received returning failed asylum applicants under the UK voluntary returns programme since 2004; how many voluntary returnees have been sent back to each; and what packages of assistance were provided by each. [131594]

Mr. Byrne: The first of the accompanying tables shows the number of asylum applicants, including dependants, who were recorded as being "forcibly" removed from the UK since 2004, broken down by destination. These figures include enforced removals, persons departing 'voluntarily' after enforcement action had been initiated against them and since 2005 those who it is established have left the UK without informing the immigration authorities.

The second of the accompanying tables shows the number of asylum applicants, including dependants, leaving the UK under Assisted Voluntary Return Programmes run by the International Organisation for Migration since 2004, broken down by destination. These figures may include some cases where enforcement action had been initiated.

It is not possible to say at what stage in the asylum process people are at the time of their removal, as those departing voluntarily can do so at any stage.

Information relating to the reintegration assistance package provided in each case is not available; it would be available by examination of individual records only at disproportionate cost.

Published statistics on immigration and asylum are available on the Home Office's Research, Development and Statistics website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Asylum: Iran

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what account is taken of membership of the Kurdistan Democratic Party of Iran in assessing applications for asylum in the UK. [141361]

John Reid: Guidance to case owners on the handling of asylum claims made by Iranian nationals on the basis of their membership of the Kurdistan Democratic Party of Iran is contained in the Operational Guidance Note on Iran which is published on the Home Office website at:

http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/documents/countryspecificasylumpolicyogns/

Case owners are also able to utilise country information on the Kurdistan Democratic Party of Iran in the Iran country of origin information report also available on the Home Office website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/country_reports.html.

Children: Abuse

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the progress of the Association of Chief Police Officers' review of the guidance for the investigation of historical child abuse. [144166]

Mr. Coaker: We continue to work with the ACPO Working Group reviewing the guidance on the investigation of historic child abuse. The development of practice and guidance from the National Centre for Policing Excellence (NCPE) will also help ensure that there is a consistent approach across the police service and prevent duplication. In the light of this activity, the Working Group is reviewing the work requirements and hopes to be in a position to share the revised document in the autumn.

Departments: Advertising

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much revenue his Department has received from (a) advertisements on his Department's public information leaflets and (b) advertisements on his Department's public websites in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [142531]

Mr. Byrne: In the last 10 years the Home Office has not generated any advertising income from its leaflets or websites.

Departments: Foreign Relations

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Memorandums of Understanding are in force as a result of agreements with foreign governments entered into by Ministers in his Department; and what Executive actions each entails. [144469]

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many requests were made to his Department under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 in each month of the last two years; what percentage of requests were responded to within 20 working days of their receipt; how many requests were successful; how many were rejected; and how many are the subject of (a) an appeal and (b) a complaint. [122053]

John Reid: The following table includes figures for the number of requests received each month in 2005 and 2006. The percentage of requests responded to within 20 working days of their receipt are included in the quarterly statistical reports produced by the Ministry of Justice.

The number of successful and rejected requests are included in the quarterly statistical reports produced by the Ministry of Justice. We have interpreted the request for the number of requests subject to complaint as cases where an internal review has been requested, these figures are included on the following table.

We have interpreted the request for the number of requests subject on an appeal, as cases where a complaint has been made to the Information Commissioner, these figures are included on the following table. These figures relate to cases where the Information Commissioner has advised us that an appeal has been received, and are provided as an annual figure as we are not always informed of the month when a complaint was made to the Commissioner.

There has been one Information Tribunal case.

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent by his Department on legal fees in each of the last five years. [139398]

Mr. Byrne: The expenditure on legal fees for the Home Office and Borders and Immigration Agency, Identity and Passport Service and the Criminal Records Bureau, for the requested period, is in the following table.

	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06	2006-07
Home Office/ BIA	10,067	11,505	17,362	28,075	23,614
IPS	98	292	363	766	1,214
CRB	0	0	8	35	29

The aforementioned table covers external legal fees only. Home Office numbers include the National Offenders Management Scheme and the Office of Criminal Justice Reform which have now transferred from the Home Office to the Ministry of Justice.

Departments: Remploy

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) services and (b) products his Department has procured from Remploy in the last 12 months; and at what cost. [143794]

John Reid: From best available records between June 2006 and May 2007 the Home Office procured from Remploy (a) no services and (b) 1,750 operational and 2,314 training civil responder personal protective ensembles for police officers trained in Chemical, Biological, Radiological and Nuclear (CBRN) response at a cost of £3,211,466.36 inclusive of VAT.

Deportation: Afghanistan

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people whose asylum claims had failed were deported to Afghanistan in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [142270]

Mr. Byrne: Information on the destination of persons removed from the UK has only been collated since 2004. The table shows provisional figures rounded to the nearest five persons, who had claimed asylum at some stage, who were removed from the United Kingdom to Afghanistan between January 2004 and March 2007, inclusive.

It is not possible to say what stage in the asylum process people have reached at the time of their removal, because those departing voluntarily can do so at any stage.

Deportations are a specific subset of removals; most illegal immigrants are removed under administrative or illegal entry powers from the UK and not deported. It has therefore been assumed that your question refers to the number of asylum applicants removed to Afghanistan; information on those deported is not separately available.

The information provided comes from published statistics, which are available from the Home Office's Research, Development and Statistics website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html

Removals and voluntary departures[1,2] of asylum applicants, including dependants, to Afghanistan, January 2004 to March 2007

Destination	2004	2005[3,4]	2006[3,4]	January to March 2007[3,4]
Afghanistan	575	910	970	255

[1] Includes persons departing 'voluntarily' after enforcement action had been initiated against them, persons leaving under assisted voluntary return programmes run by the International Organisation for Migration and removals on safe third country grounds.
[2] Figures have been rounded to the nearest five and may not sum due to rounding.
[3] Figures since 2005 include those who it is established have left the UK without informing the immigration authorities.
[4] Provisional figures.

Detainees

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under what circumstances embassy officials from foreign countries are given access to detained asylum seekers before their claims have been refused. [141406]

John Reid: Embassy officials are not given access to asylum seekers before their claims are refused, unless the individual in question makes a specific request for consular access. Asylum seekers will not be prevented from meeting officials from the embassy of their country of origin if they make a specific request for consular access.

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether detained asylum seekers are given a choice whether to meet officials from the embassy of their country of origin. [141407]

John Reid: The Home Office would not ask an asylum seeker to meet officials from the embassy of their country of origin until and unless a negative decision was taken in respect of his claim for protection in the United Kingdom. After that time, refused asylum seekers may be requested to meet officials from the embassy of their country of origin to assist in the process of obtaining documents for their return. Such meetings are not compulsory although refused asylum seekers are expected to co-operate in arrangements for their return.

Domestic Violence: Lancashire

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of domestic violence were recorded in West Lancashire in each of the last five years. [144813]

Mr. Coaker: From the information collected centrally on recorded crime, it is not possible to identify recorded cases of domestic violence. Such offences are not specifically defined by law and details of the individual circumstances of offences are not collected.

Driving Under Influence: Lancashire

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many drink-driving tests were carried out in West Lancashire in 2004. [144970]

Mr. Coaker: Data relate to the number of screening breath tests conducted and are available at police force areas only. The number of screening breath tests carried out in the Lancashire police force area in 2004 was 10,200.

Detailed information on screening breath tests is given in the Home Office Statistical Bulletin, Motoring Offences and Breath Test Statistics, England and Wales, 2004. The publication is available in the Library and on the Home Office website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs06/hosb0506.pdf

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) UK and (b) non-UK seizures there were of (i) cocaine, (ii) heroin, (iii) cannabis, (iv) LSD and (v) ecstasy within the responsibility of the Serious and Organised Crime Agency in 2006-07. [143811]

Mr. Coaker: Details of drug interdictions flowing from the Serious Organised Crime Agency's work are provided in the agency's 2006-07 annual report. This was published on 18 May 2007.

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what the (a) date and (b) weight was of each individual (i) UK and (ii) non-UK seizure of (A) cocaine, (B) heroin, (C) cannabis, (D) LSD and (E) ecstasy in operations involving the Serious and Organised Crime Agency in 2006-07; [143812]

(2) which agencies were responsible for each (a) UK and (b) non-UK seizure of (i) cocaine, (ii) heroin, (iii) cannabis, (iv) LSD and (v) ecstasy in operations involving the Serious and Organised Crime Agency in 2006-07; and in which country each individual seizure is being prosecuted. [143813]

Mr. Coaker: Information on drugs seizures in England and Wales in 2006-07 is not yet available.

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints of (a) racial discrimination and (b) sex discrimination have been made against Greater Manchester police by (i) all employees, (ii) all police officers and (iii) officers above the rank of inspector in the last five years. [141353]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 12 June 2007]: The available data on the number of compensation claims are available from 2002-03 onwards and are given in the table. The data are not available by staff type or rank.

Homicide: Females

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the time scale is for the internal police inquiry into the handling of honour killings; whether the results of the inquiry will be made public; and if he will make a statement. [143862]

Mr. Coaker: After an internal review by the Metropolitan Police Service's Professional Standards Directorate, the recent honour killing case involving Miss Banaz Mahmod was referred to the Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC) for investigation on 13 June 2007.

It would be inappropriate to commit to time scales as this stage. The IPCC will, where appropriate, make their findings public at the conclusion of their investigation.

Human Trafficking

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the right hon. Member for Birmingham Hodge Hill will attend a meeting of the all party group on trafficking in women and children with Ms Liz Hermer, Head of Immigration Services, as requested in the letter from the hon. Member for Totnes of 16 April, to give a presentation on child asylum seekers and their traffickers. [142455]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 12 June 2007]: The letter of 16 April was delayed in reaching my office. I wrote to the hon. Member on 19 June to advise that Lin Homer, Chief Executive of the Border and Immigration Agency, will attend on my behalf and her office will be in touch to arrange a suitable date and time.

Immigration Controls: Biometrics

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what response he has made to the conclusions of the Joint Committee on Human Rights on the decision to bring in biometric immigration documents for all non-EU nationals in the UK next year. [141105]

Mr. Byrne: I have written to the Joint Committee on Human Rights in response to their Report on the UK Borders Bill. My response addresses all the points raised by the Committee, including those on biometric immigration documents.

Internet: Counterfeit Manufacturing

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans his Department has to improve data gathering capabilities on internet piracy. [143189]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

The National IP Crime Strategy, led by the UK Intellectual Property Office, aims to co-ordinate the work done by the range of government enforcement agencies and industry bodies in order to tackle the problem posed by counterfeiting and piracy. One of the key priorities of the strategy has been to develop a national intelligence database, to share information and better join up enforcement strategies. The UK-IPO will continue to work with industry, police, customs and others to ensure that the database effectively facilitates information collection, sharing and effective targeting of resources.

Ministerial Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to answer the letter dated 11 April from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton on Mrs P. Akhtar. [140582]

John Reid: I wrote to my right hon. Friend on 31 May 2007.

Offensive Weapons: Convictions

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were convicted of stabbings in each of the last three years. [143449]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 20 June 2007]: Information on the number of persons found guilty at all courts for stabbings is not available because the individual circumstances of offences are not centrally collected. As a result, data on convictions for offences involving stabbings cannot be separated from cases of murder, manslaughter and assaults etc. and cannot be provided.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people convicted of knife crime in each of the last three years were suffering from mental illness. [143450]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 20 June 2007]: It is not possible to identify the number of people convicted of knife crime who were suffering from mental illness because the individual circumstances of offenders are not centrally collected.

Personation: Lancashire

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of (a) identity and (b) online fraud were recorded in West Lancashire in each of the last five years. [144812]

Joan Ryan: The information requested is not available centrally. The use of another person's identification details (or the use of false identification details), often referred to as identity theft, is not in itself an offence in law. It is the action that is undertaken, using those identification details, that needs to be considered in respect of whether an offence has occurred and should be recorded.

With regard to online fraud, this is not a separately defined offence in law and such instances will be recorded under the appropriate fraud classification depending on the circumstances of the offence.

Police: Boats

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police boats were being operated by each police authority in each of the last five years. [143931]

Mr. McNulty: This information is not collected by the Home Office in respect of police forces in England and Wales.

Police: Bridgend

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) police officers and (b) police community support officers were based in Bridgend constituency in each of the last 10 years. [144292]

Mr. McNulty: The available data are for the Bridgend Basic Command Unit (BCU) and are given in the following table. Data for police officers are available from 2003 onwards, and for police community support officers from 2005 onwards.

Police officer strength (FTE)[1] for Bridgend Basic Command Unit, as at 31 March 2003 to 31 March 2006[2]

Police: Gender

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research his Department has undertaken to compare the effects of mixed gender and single gender frontline policing in local communities. [144070]

Mr. McNulty: Home Office research programme on policing has not included any research to compare the effects of mixed gender frontline policing in local communities and single gender frontline policing. The National Policing Improvement Agency (NPIA) has operational responsibility in this area and I am advised by the NPIA that they currently have no plans to carry out research into effects of mixed gender and single gender frontline policing.

Police: Motor Vehicles

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police response vehicles were in road accidents while on operational duty in each of the last five years; how many injuries were sustained by (a) police officers and (b) police community support officers in such accidents; and if he will make a statement. [143251]

Mr. McNulty: The available data refer to all vehicles being used for a police purpose and to all police personnel, not separately to police officers and police community support officers. They cover the period from 2002-03. The information is given in the following tables.

Number of road traffic collisions on public roads involving police vehicles, from 2002-03 to 2005-06: England and Wales

	Number of accidents
2002-03[1]	18,644

Police: Pay

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the ranges of pay are for all ranks in the police force. [144170]

Mr. McNulty: This information is available in 'the Determinations of the Secretary of State under the Police Regulations 2003' Annex F. This information is too large to be included in the Official Report, but I will arrange for a copy of the document to be placed in the House of Commons Library shortly. It can also be found in Home Office circular 014/2007 on the Home Office website under:

http://www.knowledgenetwork.gov.uk/HO/circular.nsfA/iewTemplatepercent20Forpercent20HOCircularsWeb?OpenForm&Start=1&Count=30&Expand=1&Seq=1

Police: Protective Clothing

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of police officers are provided with stab-proof vests while on duty in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) the South West. [143195]

Mr. McNulty: Decisions about the selection, purchase and issue of body armour are matters for individual chief officers of police.

Police: Uniforms

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) guidance he has issued to police authorities and (b) recent discussions he has held with police staff associations on police uniforms style; and if he will make a statement. [143249]

Mr. McNulty: The design of police uniforms is a matter for individual chief constables and their police authorities. A national advisory specification has been provided to forces by the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO), who have met with police staff associations to discuss this issue.

Police: Weapons

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what non-lethal weaponry is in development for use by the police. [143753]

Mr. McNulty: The Home Office Scientific Development Branch (HOSDB) completed a comprehensive survey of less lethal technologies in 2001. That survey, and the work that followed, resulted in the introduction of conducted energy devices to England and Wales in the form of the Taser M26 in 2003 and the Taser X26 in 2005. Kinetic energy devices were introduced to the United Kingdom in the form of the L21A1 baton round system in 2002. The L21A1 system was replaced by the L60A1 Attenuating Energy Projectile system in 2005.

HOSDB has since been tasked with assessing promising commercial off-the-shelf products against the Association of Chief Police Officers' operational requirement as they become available. Additionally the UK Steering Group on Alternative Policing Approaches Towards the Management of Conflict has put in place a programme to develop a Discriminating Irritant Projectile (DIP) that will provide police with a round that will produce a discriminating cloud of irritant at distances of up to 40 metres.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what newly-developed non-lethal weapons have been supplied to police officers in the last five years. [143754]

Mr. McNulty: The Home Office Scientific Development Branch completed a comprehensive survey of less lethal technologies in 2001. That survey, and the work that followed, resulted in the introduction in England and Wales of conducted energy devices (CED) in the form of the Taser M26 in 2003 and the Taser X26 in 2005. Kinetic energy (KE) devices in the form of the L21A1 baton round system were introduced in the United Kingdom in 2002 in support to firearms. The L60A1 Attenuating Energy Projectile system replaced the L21A1 system in 2005 as part of a cross government development programme to identify a less potentially lethal alternative to the baton round. Water cannon were made available to the Police Service of Northern Ireland in 2004. CS spray was approved for use by the Police Service in Northern Ireland in 2003, having previously been introduced in England and Wales in 1997.

Proceeds of Crime: Wales

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much the South Wales police authority recovered under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 in each year since its introduction. [144310]

Mr. Coaker: The total value of confiscation orders and cash forfeiture orders obtained by South Wales police in each of the last four years under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 and earlier legislation is as follows:

2003-04	75,637
2004-05	400,577
2005-06	5,167,828
2006-07	2,392,216

These include cases involving Regional Asset Recovery Teams. Confiscation orders are enforced by the magistrates courts.

Serious and Organised Crime Agency: Manpower

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) police officers and (b) police support staff have been reassigned to the Serious and Organised Crime Agency since its creation, broken down by the region and branch from which they were reassigned. [141919]

Mr. Coaker: Prior to the launch of SOCA, police officers who were seconded into National Crime Squad (NCS) and National Criminal Intelligence Service (NCIS) were given the opportunity to become directly employed by the NCS. Most of the police officers took this opportunity. On 1 April 2006 1,104 police officers and 760 non-police staff transferred into SOCA from National Crime Squad as permanent staff. A further 72 police officers retained their secondment status on transfer. Seconded police officers will return to their home force on completion of their period of secondment. No police officers or support staff transferred onto SOCA's staff directly from a police force. Since April 2006 no police officers have been reassigned to SOCA.

SOCA's functions are set out in the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005. They are to prevent and detect serious organised crime, to contribute to its reduction in other ways and the mitigation of its consequences. All SOCA officers in the UK and overseas are deployed in support of these functions.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) police officers and (b) support staff (i) the Sussex branch and (ii) other UK operational regions of the Serious and Organised Crime Agency has at its disposal. [141920]

Mr. Coaker: As reported in SOCA's 2006-07 annual report, at the year end actual employment was at approximately 4,400 full-time equivalent staff. These represented a mix of staff from precursor agencies (NCIS, NCS, IND and HMRC), Government Departments, secondees and some new recruits.

SOCA's functions are set out in the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005. They are to prevent and detect serious organised crime, to contribute to its reduction in other ways and the mitigation of its consequences. All SOCA officers in the UK and overseas are deployed in support of these functions.

SOCA is not a police force. Its officers may be designated by the Director General with the powers of a Constable and/or Immigration Officer and/or Customs Officer dependent on operational need and on the basis of the capability, suitability and training of the individual officer. On 1 April 2006, 1,821 SOCA Officers were designated with the power of arrest.

Sexual Offences

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were (a) prosecuted and (b) convicted on charges relating to having sexual intercourse with an underage person in each police force in (i) England and (ii) Wales in each of the last three years; what percentage of these cases resulted in a custodial sentence; and what the average length of the prison term was. [132152]

Mr. Coaker: The number of people (a) prosecuted and (b) convicted of charges related to having sexual intercourse with an underage person can be viewed in the following table.

Court proceedings data for 2006 will be available in the autumn of 2007.

Number of defendants proceeded against at magistrates court, found guilty at all courts, the percentage of defendants given immediate custody, and the average sentence length given to defendants sentenced at all courts for offences relating to various sexual offences with persons under the age of 16 years old by police force area in England and Wales, 2003 to 2005[1,2,3,4]

[1] These data are on the principal offence basis.
[2] Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the police forces and courts. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.
[3] Includes data from the Sexual Offences Act 2003, which came into force on 1 May 2003.
[4] Data includes those offences where there has been unlawful sexual intercourse and the age of the victim has been specified as being under 16 years of age in the offence description.
[5] Care should be taken when using the immediate custody and average sentence length data, as in a number of instances force data is based on less than 100 cases. Immediate custody data includes those offenders given life sentences etc. (and may include indeterminate sentences). Average sentence length (months) does not include life sentences and indeterminate sentence lengths.

Terrorism: Finance

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment his Department has made of the sources of funding for extremist imams in the UK; and which countries have been identified as sources of funding. [142123]

Mr. McNulty: The Home Office has made no assessment about the sources of funding for extremist imams in the UK. However, the Government are undertaking a range of measures to tackle violent extremism, which includes strengthening the role of faith institutions and leaders, further details of which can found in the Communities and Local Government publication 'Preventing Violent Extremism' (http://www.communities.gov.uk/index.asp?id=1506079) and a public consultation, run by the Home Office and HM Treasury, on how charitable organisations can best be safeguarded from exploitation (http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/documents/Charities_consultation.pdf?view=Binary).

Valuation Office Agency: Surveillance

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance the Office of the Surveillance Commissioner has provided to the Valuation Office Agency on the practice of inspections and surveillance for valuation purposes. [141809]

Mr. McNulty: The Office of Surveillance Commissioners has not given the Valuation Office Agency (VOA) any advice or guidance, nor been asked to, in relation to conduct undertaken by the agency for the purpose of valuing properties for council tax. The Agency does not carry out surveillance of individuals and does not operate covertly, and its officers always identify themselves as VOA officers when carrying out their duties.

Warehouse Parties

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to tackle illegal rave activity. [144023]

Mr. Coaker: The Government and the police are clear that illegal rave activity is not acceptable and are committed to tackling the disorder and antisocial behaviour associated with raves which intimidates and alienates local communities.

The police are equipped with a range of powers to deal with raves. Section 63 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 allows police to direct rave goers to leave an event. Following reports of problems with raves in buildings such as barns, the police were given powers in the Anti-Social Behaviour Act 2003 to direct participants at indoor raves to leave buildings where trespass is involved, and to include events of 20 or more people. The Government have also made it a criminal offence for a person on whom a direction under section 63 has been served to attend any rave within 24 hours of the direction being given.

Work Permits: Doctors

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultation was carried out with the NHS and its associated bodies prior to the implementation of the new immigration rules on how the rules would affect foreign national doctors employed by the NHS. [122182]

John Reid: On 7 November, the Government announced changes to the Highly Skilled Migrant programme (HSMP). These changes included the removal of a GP Priority category, which awarded points to GPs registered with the General Medical Council, on the strength that the increase in funding for doctors' training has increased the number of qualified GPs available, removing the need for special arrangements to attract GPs from abroad.

The removal of the GPs provision was agreed with the Department of Health and cleared across Government.

It is not the Government's intention to disqualify highly-skilled applicants with medical qualifications, who could still qualify under the new HSMP criteria.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Carbon Dioxide Reduction

11. Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the carbon price necessary to achieve the Government's carbon dioxide reduction objectives. [144194]

Ian Pearson: The Government do not set or seek a particular price for carbon allowances under the EU Emissions Trading Scheme. As it is a Market Mechanism the Government believe it is the role of the market to establish the carbon price. The Government's role is to ensure sufficient scarcity in the market and its proper functioning.

Biomass Industry

20. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with ministerial colleagues on Government support for the biomass industry in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [144204]

Ian Pearson: I have regular contact with ministerial colleagues on a range of biomass issues. The Energy White Paper and the UK Biomass Strategy set out the Government's commitment to increasing the use of biomass and the support needed to achieve our goals.

GM and Non-GM Crops

21. John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether he plans to modify the minimum separation distances between GM and non-GM crops. [144205]

Ian Pearson: We are still considering the responses to the proposed coexistence separation distances we set out for consultation last year.

Recycling Advice

22. Ms Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assistance his Department provides to businesses to improve their management of waste, with particular reference to recycling. [144206]

Mr. Bradshaw: DEFRA's Business Resource Efficiency and Waste Programme is returning £284 million of landfill tax receipts to businesses, over the three years to March 2008, through targeted waste projects designed to help them increase recycling, minimise waste and improve resource efficiency. The Waste and Resources Action Programme is helping businesses in a range of sectors to recycle more and landfill less.

Abandoned Vehicles

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many abandoned cars were recorded in (a) Suffolk, (b) Bedfordshire, (c) Cambridgeshire, (d) Essex, (e) Hertfordshire, (f) Norfolk and (g) England in each year since 1997. [143927]

Mr. Bradshaw: Data on the number of abandoned vehicles both removed and destroyed by local authorities or their agents are shown in the following table.

Numbers of abandoned vehicles (thousands)

	2000-01	2001-02	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
(a) Suffolk	2.5	4.3	4.8	3.2	3.3	2.0
(b) Bedfordshire	4.4	8.8	9.1	7.3	3.4	2.4

England	223.5	284.4	291.7	221.1	150.2	126.1

Results, which include estimated values for authorities not responding, are available for each year from 2000-01 to 2005-06. Prior to 2000-01, this information was not collected by this Department.

Results are recorded collectively from district councils within each county council area. Results from the four unitary authorities have been included with their county of original origin, hence: Luton DA with Bedfordshire, Peterborough UA with Cambridgeshire and Southend-on-Sea and Thurrock UAs with Essex.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average retail price was of (a) apples, (b) beef, (c) cabbages, (d) carrots, (e) chicken, (f) eggs, (g) lamb, (h) onions, (i) pork, (j) potatoes, (k) tomatoes, (l) wheat and (m) milk in each year since 1995. [144241]

Barry Gardiner: The retail prices from 1995 up to 2006 for the listed commodities are shown in the following table:

Agriculture: Subsidies

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many and what percentage of single farm payment scheme claims have been paid for (a) 2005 and (b) 2006 (i) in part and (ii) in full in (A) North West Cambridgeshire, (B) the East of England and (C) England and Wales. [143511]

Barry Gardiner: In England, as of 13 June 2007, 20 claimants have not received a payment for the 2005 Single Payment Scheme (SPS).

As of 13 June 2007, 105,415 farmers have received either a full or partial payment under the 2006 SPS year. This total includes 101,890 full and 3,525 partial payments, representing 96.7 per cent. of the estimated total claimant population of 109,000.

RPA's target is to pay 96.14 per cent. of the total value of the fund by 30 June 2007.

Detailed analysis of all the payments made under the SPS is not yet available. Once the remaining scheme payments have been completed, a decision will be taken on the level of detail that will be published.

The National Assembly for Wales is responsible for administering the SPS in Wales.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many and what proportion of farmers are yet to receive their full single payment scheme payment for (a) 2005 and (b) 2006 in (i) the UK, (ii) the South West and (iii) Cornwall. [144230]

Barry Gardiner: In England, as of 13 June 2007, 20 claimants have not received a payment for the 2005 single payment scheme (SPS).

As of 13 June 2007, 105,415 of farmers have received either a full or partial payment under the 2006 SPS year. This total includes 101,890 full and 3,525 partial payments, representing 96.7 per cent. of the estimated total claimant population of 109,000.

Carbon Dioxide: Environment Protection

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the likelihood of reaching the target of a 60 per cent. carbon dioxide reduction by 2020. [144242]

Ian Pearson: The measures in the Energy White Paper, and those they build on, are expected to achieve a reduction of up to 26 per cent. in carbon dioxide over 1990 levels by 2020. This would put us on track to achieve real progress towards our goal of reducing carbon emissions by at least 60 per cent. by 2050.

Carbon Sequestration

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on the development in the UK of technology for carbon capture and storage. [144188]

Ian Pearson: I regularly meet my Cabinet colleague to discuss a wide range of energy and environmental issues—including carbon capture and storage, where DTI and DEFRA both have a strong interest.

Carbon Trading Allowances

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans he has to introduce personal carbon trading allowances. [144195]

David Miliband: The Government are looking at the feasibility of personal carbon trading allowances and a range of other long-term options to help individuals feel more informed and involved in tackling climate change.

Commercial Whaling

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress his Department made at the recent conference of the International Whaling Commission on the moratorium on commercial whaling. [144203]

Barry Gardiner: Since the UK and the anti-whaling bloc had a simple majority at this year's meeting of the International Whaling Commission (IWC), we were able to sponsor and secure a resolution reaffirming the continued need for the IWC moratorium on commercial whaling. This resolution subsequently served us well in the conference of parties to the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species, enabling us to defeat proposals aimed at eventually allowing trade in whale products to take place.

Consumption: Sustainable Development

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress has been made on the development of a national sustainable consumption programme. [144250]

Ian Pearson: Action to promote more sustainable consumption by citizens is being taken forward under a range of policies, including the recent Energy White Paper and the Waste Strategy.

In addition, to help develop policies further in future, DEFRA has been working on an environmental behaviour change framework, applying a social marketing approach to major areas of consumption. This work has included workshops organised by Green Alliance and a Stakeholder Forum covering 100 stakeholders from the public sector, business, NGOs, academia and marketing. The outputs from these discussions and further consumer research will help us to further develop this work later this year.

DEFRA has launched an online calculator that enables people to work out their carbon footprint. The calculator is part of DEFRA's Act on CO2 campaign which aims to make people aware of the link between their own everyday behaviour—including the consumption and use of products—and climate change.

Departments: Epilepsy

Mr. Hurd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people with epilepsy are employed by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [139107]

Barry Gardiner: DEFRA does not hold data on the number of employees with epilepsy. DEFRA requests staff to declare types of impairment on a disability declaration but does not keep data of specific conditions.

DEFRA has a Disability Factsheet Series that is available to all staff. One of these factsheets is a specific guide to epilepsy. The guide includes suggestions of what to discuss with a member of staff who has declared the condition and also the types of reasonable adjustments that may be made for individuals. It includes information of the causes and features of the condition as well as advice on what to do if someone has a seizure.

Departments: Manpower

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many staff funded by the public purse in the Rural Payments Agency are classified as people without posts. [141648]

Barry Gardiner: No staff in the Rural Payments Agency are classified as people without posts.

Departments: Public Participation

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what proportion of his Department's administration costs was spent on running public consultations in 2006-07; [142738]

(2) how many civil servants in his Department worked on public consultations in the 2006-07 financial year; [142739]

(3) how many public consultations his Department has undertaken since its institution. [142740]

Barry Gardiner: Since its institution in June 2001 until December 2006, the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) has undertaken 581 public consultations.

The breakdown, per year, is as follows:

June 2001-December 2001	50
January 2002-December 2002	91
January 2003-December 2003	112
January 2004-December 2004	120
January 2005-December 2005	100
January 2006-December 2006	108

Each consultation is worked on by policy staff from the Department but information is not held about the proportion of the Department's administration costs that are spent on running public consultations.

Similarly, information is not held centrally about the number of civil servants in the Department who worked on public consultations in the last financial year. This information could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Surveys

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will place in the Library copies of his Department's employee surveys for (a) 2006 and (b) 2007. [142029]

Barry Gardiner: Staff surveys are valuable tools used by Departments to help them improve performance. The results of the 2005 DEFRA survey are available on the civil service website at:

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management/statistics/news/staff_survey/index.asp

DEFRA's approach has been to undertake a full staff survey every 18 months. As such, the most recent published results are for 2005. A new staff survey is planned for June 2007 and these results will be published on the civil service website once the full analysis of data has taken place.

Departments: Travel Agents

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much his Department and its agencies paid in travel agencies' fees in each year since 1997. [139908]

Barry Gardiner: DEFRA came into being in June 2001. From information held centrally, the amount (including VAT) paid by core DEFRA in travel agencies' fees in each financial year commencing with 2001-02 is shown in the following table.

2001-02	28,256.40
2002-03	49,601.45
2003-04	73,477.45
2004-05	84,238.10
2005-06	133,132.20
2006-07 (April-December 2006)	144,172.50

Expenditure on travel agencies' fees by DEFRA's Executive agencies is not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Dog Breeders: Regulation

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government on the monitoring and regulation of dog breeders by local authorities. [144202]

Mr. Bradshaw: Discussions between the Departments in 2005 concluded it was better to see how the Kennel Club's Accredited Breeder scheme progressed before reviewing the existing regulations on dog breeding.

Domestic Wastes: Waste Disposal

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research (a) his Department and (b) the Waste and Resources Action Programme has commissioned or undertaken into the average costs of (i) alternate weekly collection and (ii) weekly collection of household rubbish. [143492]

Mr. Bradshaw: A Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) research project is currently in progress, entitled "Cost and Performance—Collection Systems". Phase 1 is analysing the cost models used by a number of consultants active in the municipal waste management sector, with the aim of comparing and estimating the costs of a number of common waste collection systems, including alternate week collection. Phase 2 will involve a detailed appraisal of the costs and performance of the more common kerbside recycling and collection systems, again including alternate week collection. A full report will be available later this year.

DEFRA and WRAP have also funded work to appraise different waste collection options for particular local authorities, in some cases looking at alternate week collection, following requests from these authorities.

EU Inspire Directive

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the timetable is for the implementation of the EU INSPIRE Directive. [143486]

Ian Pearson: European Parliament Directive 2007/2/EC, establishing an Infrastructure for Spatial Information in Europe (INSPIRE), came into force on 15 May 2007. Member states have two years to transpose it into national legislation.

A series of technical implementing rules will accompany the directive. These are currently being developed by several drafting teams under the auspices of the European Commission. They include Implementing Rules on the interoperability and, where practicable, harmonisation of spatial data sets.

The Implementing Rules will be subject to expert and public review. DEFRA and other Government organisations are participating in this process. In addition, as part of the process for developing the interoperability implementing rules, the Commission (with input from member states) will undertake analyses to ensure that the rules are feasible and proportionate in terms of their likely costs and benefits. They will be adopted between 2008 and 2012 and come into force between 2010 and 2019.

On 16 May 2007, the Commission published an INSPIRE Work Programme for development of the Implementing Rules during the transposition phase. This contained a roadmap for the development and implementation of the Implementation Rules.

The Implementing Rules will be adopted through the Comitology procedure. The first meeting of the INSPIRE Committee will be on 26 June 2007.

Fisheries: Bankruptcy

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many and what proportion of fishermen were declared bankrupt in (a) Cornwall, (b) the South West and (c) the UK in each year since 1979. [144237]

Mr. Bradshaw: My Department does not hold the information requested. Although data on the number of individuals filing for bankruptcy are collected, these are not at a sufficient level of detail to allow for numbers of fishermen to be identified.

Fisheries: National Income

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the gross value added (GVA) and proportion of total GVA of fishing in (a) Cornwall, (b) the South West and (c) the UK was in each year since 1979. [144234]

Mr. Bradshaw: My Department does not hold the information requested.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what arrangements he has made to deal with liability in the event that BASF's genetically modified potato trials cause damage to the local economies, environment or health. [142666]

Ian Pearson: No specific arrangements have been made. The Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment (ACRE) is satisfied that the trials will not have any adverse effect on human health or the environment. It is also difficult to see how the trials might unreasonably prejudice local economies. A concern has been raised about a possible indirect impact on growers of borage and this is being considered by BASF.

Genetically Modified Organisms: Standards

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what evidence he considered before agreeing to the 0.9 per cent. threshold for genetically modified organisms in the new organic standards adopted on 12 June 2007. [143957]

Ian Pearson: We share the view of the Commission and most other member states, that it would be too difficult and costly for organic producers to apply a GM threshold significantly lower than 0.9 per cent. It would imply, for example, that the organic supply chain would need to undertake widespread testing where products were liable to have an unintended GM presence. Such testing is expensive and time-consuming. During discussions, organic stakeholder groups indicated that they did not favour including a threshold below 0.9 per cent. in the EU organic production regulation.

Land: Contamination

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when his Department last assessed the available technologies for cleaning up contaminated land. [144436]

Mr. Bradshaw: The choice of technologies for the remediation of land contamination is a matter for those responsible for taking action at a particular site. My Department has helped fund the Contaminated Land: Applications in Real Environments (CL:AIRE) organisation, which provides independent reports on trials of individual technologies in this field.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether his Department has targets for making good contaminated land. [144437]

Mr. Bradshaw: My Department has not set targets for the remediation of contaminated land.

In April 2000, part 2A of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 created a new framework for the identification and remediation of contaminated land in England, in circumstances where there has not been any identifiable breach of a current pollution prevention regime.

The framework places a duty on local authorities in England to identify contaminated land in their area, and to ensure that the appropriate remedial action is taken. Where land has been identified as 'contaminated land', the local authority will seek the person who caused or knowingly permitted the presence of the substances causing the problem to carry out any necessary remedial works. Where this person cannot be found, for example because a company is no longer in existence, the landowner may be the appropriate person, subject to detailed rules in the Act and the accompanying guidance (DEFRA Circular 01/2006).

The regime allows for voluntary remediation, and also for the authority to carry out remediation on behalf of those considered liable, allowing the authority to recover the cost. As a last resort, the authority can serve a remediation notice requiring work to be done, subject to the usual right of appeal. The regime also recognises that remediation can also be secured through the planning system in appropriate cases.

Low Carbon Building Programme

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions he has had with ministerial colleagues from the Department of Trade and Industry on the environmental consequences of changes to the Low Carbon Building programme. [144197]

David Miliband: I regularly meet my Cabinet colleagues to discuss policies, including microgeneration technologies and the renewables market, where DTI and DEFRA both have a key role to play in their successful delivery.

Nature Conservation: Severn Estuary

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the merits of designating the Severn estuary as a special area of conservation; and if he will make a statement. [142304]

Barry Gardiner: I am currently considering a proposal from our statutory conservation advisers to notify the Severn estuary to the European Commission as a candidate special area of conservation and hope to be able to make a statement on this soon.

Nuclear Power: Japan

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the joint UK-Japan workshop on achieving a sustainable low-carbon society held from 13 to 15 June included discussion of nuclear power co-operation and development. [143940]

Ian Pearson: Discussions took place on the scale of investment needed for the deployment of cleaner technologies and on the mechanisms that can mobilise investment. There was no specific discussion on nuclear power co-operation and development.

Packaging: Wastes

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what measurements were taken of the amount of packaging waste produced by each of the signatories to the Courtauld Commitment when the Commitment was signed in July 2005; [144353]

(2) what measurements will be used to assess reductions in packaging waste in relation to the Courtauld Commitment. [144354]

Mr. Bradshaw: Each of the signatories to the Courtauld Commitment is an obligated company for the purposes of the Packaging Regulations and declares their total packaging use each year to the relevant regulators.

The Courtauld Commitment objectives relate to primary packaging taken home by consumers. When I met the signatories last November, I asked them to agree a protocol with the Waste and Resources Action Programme for reporting progress in a consistent and transparent way. A draft protocol is currently being consulted on, with a view to it being agreed and implemented in this reporting year.

Radioactive Wastes: Waste Management

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been (a) allocated and (b) spent by the Government on research and development on deep geological disposal of radioactive waste since (i) the end of the NIREX Inquiry in April 1997 and (ii) November 2006. [143774]

Ian Pearson: The Government spent about £0.5 million on research and development (R&D) on deep geological disposal of radioactive waste between April 1997 and November 2006. We have not spent on R&D in this area since then. However, the main expenditure on deep geological disposal R&D during these periods has been by United Kingdom Nirex Limited (Nirex). The Government owned Nirex from April 2005 until November 2006, when it became part of the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA). This is funded by Government through the Department of Trade and Industry and, partially, through its commercial activities. During the period of Government ownership of Nirex, the company was largely funded by the NDA, with a small additional percentage coming from the Ministry of Defence (MOD).

The following table shows the expenditure on R&D on geological disposal while Nirex was in Government ownership, and expenditure from November 2006 until end of May 2007 by the NDA following the acquisition and integration of Nirex into the NDA. Prior to April 2005, Nirex R&D activities were funded by its nuclear industry shareholders and the MOD.

From	Until	Approximate expenditure (£ million)
1 April 2005	31 March 2006	12
1 April 2006	end October 2006	7
November 2006	end March 2007	9
April 2007	end May 2007	2

Recycling: Standards

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress he has made on amending the performance indicator applicable to local councils in respect of recycling levels to reflect performance in terms of waste minimisation. [141320]

Mr. Bradshaw: The recently published Waste Strategy 2007 put forward a range of measures to reduce waste arisings and build on recent improvements in recycling. A greater focus on waste prevention has been recognised through a new target to reduce the amount of household waste not re-used, recycled or composted, from over 22.2 million tonnes in 2000 by 29 per cent. to 15.8 million tonnes in 2010, with an aspiration to reduce it to 12.2 million tonnes in 2020—a reduction of 45 per cent. This is equivalent to a fall of 50 per cent. per person (from 450 kg per person in 2000 to 225 kg in 2020).

Waste minimisation is not directly measured by any of the Best Value Performance Indicators (BVPI). However, it is reflected in BVPI 84a, which measures kilograms of household waste collected per head of population. In addition, household waste sent for reuse, including items such as furniture delivered to civic amenity sites, would be excluded from the calculation of BVPI 82.

In October 2006, the Government published the local government White Paper, "Strong and Prosperous Communities". This set out a new vision for delivering better public services through a rebalancing of the relationship between central Government, local government and local people. Local public service providers will be given more freedom to bring about the changes they want to see. The White Paper sets out a radical simplification of the local authority performance framework including fewer indicators and centrally set targets. This means that 2007-08 will be the final year of best value indicators and targets.

Indicators in the new framework will reflect national outcomes, to be agreed later this year in the comprehensive spending review 2007, which will be delivered through local area agreements. The future framework will enable local authorities to contribute to an overall waste outcome that leads us towards more sustainable management of waste in England, focused on minimising the amounts of municipal waste produced and landfilled.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress has been made on the development of a renewable energy and efficiency partnership. [144251]

Ian Pearson: The Renewable Energy and Energy Efficiency Partnership (REEEP) was established in 2003 in response to the world summit on sustainable development. REEEP has been recognised by the G8 in the outcomes of Gleneagles, St Petersburg and Heiligendamm as a key delivery vehicle for accelerating the uptake of renewables and energy efficiency in developing countries.

REEEP has over 200 partners, including over 35 governments and a global network of eight secretariats based in leading energy organisations around the world. It has also developed strong links with the private sector, academia and international bodies such as the World Bank, UN agencies and the International Energy Agency.

DEFRA provides funding to REEEP of £2.5 million each year for 2005-08. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) provided funding of £1 million each year for 2004-06. Several Governments, notably the US, Australia, a number of EU states and Norway now also provide funding.

REEEP is well positioned to support future action on climate change and is already beginning to scale up and replicate its successful interventions. As the partnership develops it is now able to engage more strategically with key government, international bodies and the private sector in support of UK energy and climate objectives, and act as a platform for international co-operation on these issues.

Waste Disposal: Microprocessors

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance (a) his Department and (b) the Waste and Resources Action programme has issued on the use of microchips or radio frequency identity tags in domestic rubbish or recycling bins. [142255]

Mr. Bradshaw: No specific guidance on the use of microchips or radio frequency identity tags has been issued by either my Department or the Waste and Resources Action programme.

Microchips installed on wheelie bins are identification tags which allow a bin to be matched to a particular property—they do not record information on what is put into the bin. It is up to local authorities to decide whether to install the chips. Authorities that have installed microchips have used them to identify lost bins or, when used with weighing trucks, to monitor levels of waste created in different neighbourhoods and target information and education accordingly.

Waste Management

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures his Department has put in place to reduce its waste arisings; and what the quantitative impact of each measure has been. [142611]

Mr. Bradshaw: Each site within the Department for Environment Food and Rural Affairs has a programme of waste reduction measures appropriate to their site in order to enable them to meet the sustainable operations on the Government Estate (SOGE) targets. Performance information is continually monitored and reported quarterly and collated into a central report.

Latest performance data show that the total waste arisings for the Department have decreased by 8.12 per cent. from 5,716 tonnes in 2005-06 to 5,252 tonnes in 2006-07.

In order to further reduce waste arisings, we are about to conduct trials of other measures, which we hope will further reduce our waste output.

Water Companies: Standards

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures he is taking to ensure that water companies reduce leakages from water pipes. [144201]

Ian Pearson: Leakage targets are set, monitored and enforced by the Economic Regulator, Ofwat, which also determines the regulatory action needed when companies fail their leakage targets.

Whales: Conservation

Anne Moffat: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assessment he has made of the likelihood of securing a majority in the International Whaling Commission for a complete ban on commercial whaling; [144140]

(2) what measures to protect whales were agreed at the recent International Whaling Commission meeting. [144141]

Mr. Bradshaw: Since the UK and the anti-whaling bloc had a simple majority at this year's meeting of the International Whaling Commission (IWC), we were able to sponsor and secure several key resolutions: calling on Japan to halt its lethal "scientific" research programme; promoting the non-lethal use of cetaceans; and reaffirming the continued need for the IWC moratorium on commercial whaling. This last resolution subsequently served us well in the Conference of Parties to the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species, enabling us to defeat proposals aimed at eventually allowing trade in whale products to take place.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Council Tax: Valuation

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will place in the Library a copy of the internal guidance produced by the Valuation Office Agency on sending questionnaires to householders for council tax valuation purposes. [141813]

Ruth Kelly: The guidance is currently being updated to reflect feedback from customer working groups. A copy will be placed in the Library of the House when it is available.

Departments: Advertisements

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much revenue her Department received from advertisements on its (a) public information leaflets and (b) public websites in each of the last 10 years; and if she will make a statement. [142339]

Angela E. Smith: The Department's general policy is not to accept advertisements for public information leaflets produced by the Communications Directorate or for its main corporate website. Information on this subject covering our leaflets and the range of our websites over the last 10 years is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. In the last year, no advertisements have been accepted for public information leaflets produced by the Communications Directorate or for the corporate website.

Departments: Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many people in her Department have been allowed to work from home for part of the week in the last 12 months; and if she will make a statement on her Department's policy on home working. [143889]

Angela E. Smith: At present no records are kept centrally on requests to work from home for part of the week as this is a local agreement between staff and the line manager.

Communities and Local Government supports all forms of flexible working and is currently reviewing its policy to make it clearer for staff and line managers to understand the balance between the work we need to do and the achievement of a successful work/life balance, including home working arrangements.

Departments: Manpower

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many people granted (a) temporary part-time, (b) temporary full-time, (c) permanent part-time and (d) permanent full-time contracts of employment in her Department in each of the last three years were (i) male, (ii) female, (iii) registered disabled and (iv) aged 55 years or over. [143906]

Angela E. Smith: For staff for whom the information requested is available, the numbers requested are:

	Male	Female	Disabled	Aged 55 or over
2006-07
Temporary part-time	0	0	0	0
Temporary full-time	28	27	0	4
Permanent part-time	2	10	0	2
Permanent full-time	138	150	7	12
2005-06
Temporary part-time	1	0	0	0
Temporary full-time	28	16	0	2
Permanent part-time	0	3	0	0
Permanent full-time	61	78	2	4
2004-05
Temporary part-time	0	0	0	0
Temporary full-time	46	44	0	3
Permanent part-time	2	8	0	3
Permanent full-time	120	135	9	14

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what percentage of staff in her Department are (a) male, (b) female, (c) registered disabled and (d) aged 55 or over. [143907]

Angela E. Smith: At 31 May 2007 percentages of staff, for whom information is available, is as follows:

	Percentage
Male	52.9
Female	47.1
Disabled	6.5
Aged 55 years or over	11.4

Departments: Remploy

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what (a) services and (b) products her Department has procured from Remploy in the last 12 months; and at what cost. [143800]

Angela E. Smith: Communities and Local Government has only purchased one service in the last 12 months from Remploy. This was for binding documents and cost £307.80.

Departments: Research

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will list all the unpublished research commissioned from (a) individuals and (b) organisations outside her Department which was supplied to her Department and its predecessor in each year since 2002. [143638]

Angela E. Smith: Details of projects commissioned by Communities and Local Government research programmes are available from our Research Management Database (RMD) at http://www.rmd.communities.gov.uk.

This includes information about publications associated with individual projects. Research is also funded from non-research budgets.

Departments: Sick Leave

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what average number of days per year was taken by staff in her Department as sick leave in each of the last five years for which records are available. [143108]

Angela E. Smith: The average working days lost per staff year for four of the past five calendar years are set out in the following table. Information for the calendar year 2006 is not yet available.

	Department identity	Average working days lost per staff year
2005	Office of the Deputy Prime Minister	5.7
2004	Office of the Deputy Prime Minister	5.0
2003	Office of the Deputy Prime Minister	6.0
2002	Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions	7.7

Figures are taken from the annual series of reports "Sickness Absence in the Civil Service" published by the Cabinet Office at http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management/occupational_health/publications/index.asp

Departments: Sign Language

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the merits of providing British Sign Language (BSL) videos on her departmental website for the benefit of those whose first language is BSL. [142489]

Angela E. Smith: The Department would consider the need to provide a version of individual publications in British Sign Language on a case-by-case basis.

Derelict Land: Contamination

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what proportion of brownfield sites are on (a) contaminated and (b) recently decontaminated land in (i) England and (ii) East Anglia. [144438]

Yvette Cooper: Information on the numbers of contaminated sites is not available centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Energy Performance Certificates

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the objectives of energy performance certificates are with regard to the reduction of (a) carbon emissions and (b) fuel costs. [142777]

Yvette Cooper: Energy performance certificates will give people energy ratings and recommend measures to make improvements to the energy performance of buildings, helping them to reduce fuel bills and cut carbon emissions.

Energy Performance Certificates: EC Law

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which EU directive requires UK homes to have an energy performance certificate, and what its implementation date is. [144183]

Yvette Cooper: The directive that requires UK homes (and indeed other buildings) to have an Energy Performance Certificate is Directive 2002/91/EC on the Energy Performance of Buildings. The implementation date was January 2006. However the directive allows an additional period of up to three years to apply fully the requirements for Energy Performance Certificates where there is a shortage of trained and/or accredited assessors.

Fire Prevention

Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether she intends to require a single enforcing authority for fire safety in residential accommodation under the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order 2005. [144450]

Angela E. Smith: Premises occupied as a private dwelling are not covered by the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order 2005 and so residential accommodation is not covered unless that accommodation is a workplace. Fire and rescue authorities are the enforcing authority for premises which do not fall within any of the exceptions in article 25 (b)-(e) of the 2005 Order 2005.

Fire Services: Public Appointments

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what process will be used to appoint members of the Regional Fire Management Boards. [143542]

Angela E. Smith: It is for Fire and Rescue Authorities to decide the criteria by which representation and appointments will be made, subject to any statutory constraints.

The Department worked closely with the Local Government Association to establish voluntary Regional Management Boards (RMBs) in all English Regions outside London. All were constituted as joint committees under Section 102 (l)(b) of the Local Government Act 1972. Under Section 15 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989, a Fire and Rescue Authority's appointments to a joint committee must reflect an Authority's political balance where each constituent authority appoints three or more members to the RMB.

Home Information Packs

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the likely effect of the introduction of home information packs on the stability of the housing market. [140454]

Yvette Cooper: We published our assessment of the introduction of home information packs on 11 June 2007.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will list the research which her Department or its predecessor has (a) commissioned and (b) undertaken into the effect of introducing home information packs on the economy. [141928]

Yvette Cooper: Communities and Local Government commissioned Europe Economics to carry out independent research into the potential impact of introducing home information packs on the housing market. The results of the research will be published in due course.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what factors were taken into account when deciding whether to undertake a public consultation exercise in relation to the new plans to introduce home information packs on 1 August only for homes with four or more bedrooms. [143474]

Yvette Cooper: I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by the Secretary of State to the House on 22 May 2007.

Housing: Armed Forces

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether service personnel may be accepted as having a local connection for the purposes of social housing if they grew up in the same area in which they served; and if she will make a statement. [133145]

Yvette Cooper: I refer the hon. Member to the joint ministerial statement laid in the House by the Minister for Housing and Planning and my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Twigg) on 21 June 2007.

Housing: Valuation

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many domestic dwellings in England are currently assigned the value significant code of (a) FC and (b) FP in each local authority area for which figures are available. [141738]

Ruth Kelly: The VOA has not undertaken a comprehensive exercise to gather value significant coding information on all domestic dwellings in England.

Land: Databases

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) if she will list the data sources for the National Land and Property Gazetteer database; [143464]

(2) which department or agency is responsible for the National Land and Property Gazetteer. [143472]

Angela E. Smith: The National Land and Property Gazetteer is the responsibility of the Improvement and Development Agency (IDeA). The IDeA is owned by the Local Government Association and belongs to local government.

Local Government: Reorganisation

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of implications for Government policy of the High Court judgment on the application of Shrewsbury and Atcham district council for judicial review in relation to local government re-organisation; and if she will make a statement. [144599]

Ruth Kelly: The court has granted permission for a full hearing on three of Shrewsbury and Congleton's four grounds. The court refused their application for interim relief and hence we will be continuing with our original restructuring timetable. As this matter is currently before the courts, it would not be appropriate to say more than that we believe we have acted entirely appropriately and within our powers, and will contest vigorously the remaining elements of Shrewsbury and Congleton's claim.

Rented Housing

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many residential lettings were marketed in (a) England and (b) Wales in the last year for which figures are available. [143470]

Yvette Cooper: Information on how many residential lettings were marketed in England and Wales is not held centrally.

However the Survey of English Housing (SEH) asks private renters how long they have been in their current accommodation. In 2005-06, 960,000 of the estimated 2.5 million private renters in England had been resident for less than 12 months.

Repossession Orders: Eastbourne

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many orders for repossession were (a) applied for and (b) granted to Eastbourne borough council in each of the last 10 years. [141888]

Vera Baird: I have been asked to reply.

The following table shows the number of orders for landlord possession applied for and granted to Eastbourne borough council for each year since 2001, the earliest year for which we have consistent data.

Number of landlord possession orders[1] applied for and granted to Eastbourne borough council, 2001-06

	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006
Eastbourne borough council
Applied for	39	44	84	48	66	102
Granted to	22	38	57	52	43	74
England and Wales (Thousands)
Applied for	175	177	159	154	144	134
Granted to	116	118	107	102	97	89

[1] The court, following a judicial hearing, may grant an order for possession immediately. This entitles the claimant to apply for a warrant to have the defendant evicted. However, even where a warrant for possession is issued, the parties can still negotiate a compromise to prevent eviction.

These figures do not indicate how many properties have been repossessed through the courts, since not all orders result in the properties actually being repossessed.

TRANSPORT

Airports: Transport

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate his Department has made of the number of passengers travelling to and from (a) Stansted, (b) Bristol and (c) Manchester airport by (i) private motor vehicles, (ii) taxis, (iii) rail and (iv) coach or bus in each of the last five years. [144804]

Gillian Merron: Information on number of passengers travelling to and from UK airports by each mode of surface transport is published in table 9 of the Civil Aviation Authority's (CAA) "Passenger Survey Report". Reports for each of the last five years can be found on the CAA website:

http://www.caa.co.uk/default.aspx?catid=81&pagetype=90&pageid=7640

Stansted and Manchester were surveyed in each of the last five years. Bristol airport was surveyed in 2003 only.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate his Department has made of the number of passengers travelling to and from (a) Newcastle, (b) Bristol, (c) Gatwick, (d) Luton, (e) Birmingham, (f) Cardiff and (g) Leeds/Bradford airport by (i) private motor vehicle, (ii) taxi, (iii) rail and (iv) coach and bus in each of the last five years. [144828]

Gillian Merron: Information on number of passengers travelling to and from UK airports by each mode of surface transport is published in table 9 of the Civil Aviation Authority's (CAA) "Passenger Survey Report". Reports for each of the last five years can be found on the CAA website:

http://www.caa.co.uk/default.aspx?catid=81&pagetype=90&pageid=7640.

Gatwick and Luton were surveyed in each of the last five years; Bristol, Birmingham and Cardiff were surveyed in 2003 only; Newcastle and Leeds/Bradford were surveyed in 2005 only.

Aviation

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many airports (a) which have runway development plans approved in the Future of Air Transport White Paper and (b) where land is safeguarded for future development have implemented voluntary plans to tackle generalised blight; [144826]

(2) which of the airports (a) which have runway development plans approved in the Future of Air Transport White Paper and (b) where land is safeguarded for future development have implemented voluntary schemes to address general blight. [144834]

Gillian Merron: "The Future of Air Transport" White Paper invited airport operators to bring forward voluntary schemes to address generalised blight where new runways are supported by the White Paper or where land is safeguarded for future development. The Government published a progress report in December 2006, reaffirming their commitment to the strategy set out in the White Paper. BAA has implemented voluntary blight schemes at Stansted, Heathrow, Gatwick, Edinburgh and Glasgow airports. Schemes have also been introduced by the operators of Birmingham and Luton airports.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many UK airports have safeguarded land for future development. [144835]

Gillian Merron: This is a matter for airport operators in conjunction with local planning authorities. Airport master plans, encouraged in "The Future of Air Transport" White Paper, do, however, set out airport-specific development proposals in detail. Most airports have now published master plans on their websites.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which UK airports had runway development approved in the Future of Air Transport White Paper. [144837]

Gillian Merron: "The Future of Air Transport" White Paper does not authorise or preclude particular development, but sets out a policy framework against which interested parties can plan ahead and which will guide decisions on future planning applications. The Government published a progress report in December 2006, reaffirming its commitment to the strategy set out in the White Paper. In the South East, the White Paper supports a second runway at Stansted and an additional runway at Heathrow, providing strict environmental conditions can be met. A new runway at Birmingham and the safeguarding of land at Edinburgh for a new runway are also supported.

Aviation: Noise

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many UK airports with over 50,000 movements per year have produced strategic noise maps. [144836]

Gillian Merron: Under the Environmental Noise Directive, airports with over 50,000 movements per year are required to submit noise maps to the Department by 30 June 2007. To date, 12 airports have submitted maps. Outstanding maps for other airports are expected by the end of June. Airports have been encouraged to publish these maps on their websites.

Aviation: Security

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the benefits to the UK arising from those additional security restrictions on the number of pieces of hand baggage for passengers departing UK airports which are not applied to passengers arriving in the UK on flights from overseas countries. [143737]

Gillian Merron: The UK limit on the number of items of cabin baggage permitted was introduced as part of a package of security measures which has enabled airlines to keep flying safely in the face of a very serious and continuing threat. Like all security measures, it is being kept under review and will be maintained only for as long as it is necessary.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what comparative research his Department has assessed on the level of security and hand baggage restrictions in place in UK airports and those in (a) other EU countries and (b) the US. [143966]

Gillian Merron: UK restrictions on the size and number of items of cabin baggage permitted are part of a package of security measures reflecting the higher level of threat currently facing the UK compared to other states. The UK is aligned with other EU member states and the US on the controls limiting liquids being carried through airport search points. Research continues, with international partners, to quantify the security benefits of limiting the size of cabin baggage. Like all security measures, the limit on the number of cabin bags is being kept under review and will be maintained only for as long as is necessary.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has had from business leaders on the security and hand baggage restrictions on UK air travellers. [143968]

Gillian Merron: The Secretary of State has received written representations from various business representatives, drawing his attention to the impact the restriction on the number of items of hand baggage is having on UK air travellers. The current security regulations remain under constant review and we have made clear our readiness to remove the one bag limit once the aviation industry has demonstrated its collective ability to deliver effective security without it.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the effect of security regulations for UK air travellers on (a) UK business competitiveness and (b) London's status as a global financial centre. [143969]

Gillian Merron: The Secretary of State for Transport is in regular contact with all his Cabinet colleagues.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the impact on the UK aviation industry of the additional security regulations for air travellers. [143970]

Gillian Merron: The current security regulations are necessary to manage the very real threat and are kept under constant review to ensure that they remain necessary and proportionate. We are in close consultation with the industry to ensure that the measures are capable of being delivered for as long as is necessary.

Bus Services: North East Region

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average age is of the bus fleet in each (a) county and (b) district in the north east. [144832]

Gillian Merron: The average age of the bus fleet in the north east at 31 March 2006 was 9.0 years. The average for GB on this date was 8.4 years. Data on the average age of the bus fleet are not available for local authority areas.

Car Sharing

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many car-share lanes he has authorised in each of the last five years. [141011]

Dr. Ladyman: Although High Occupancy Vehicle (HOV) lanes can be introduced using existing legislation, the associated signs and carriageway markings require authorisation. The Department has authorised two HOV schemes in the last five years (the A256 Sandwich East Kent Access (2004) and the A370 Long Ashton Bypass (North Somerset) (2005 and 2006)).

Departments: Aviation

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many flights to overseas destinations were taken by (a) civil servants and (b) Ministers in his Department in each of the last three calendar years; and what the total cost of such flights was. [144952]

Gillian Merron: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost. Since 1999, the Government have published on an annual basis, a list of all overseas visits by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500, as well as the total cost of all ministerial travel overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. Information for 2006-07 is currently being compiled and will be published before the summer recess. All travel is undertaken in accordance with the Civil Service Management Code, the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers.

Departments: Energy

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many energy saving lightbulbs were purchased by his Department for use on the departmental estate in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006. [144951]

Gillian Merron: Departmental performance against Government estate targets has been published in annual Sustainable Development in Government Reports. The last report, produced by the Sustainable Development Commission, the independent watchdog, was in March 2006. It covered the reporting period April 2005 to March 2006 and is available at:

http://www.sd-commission.org.uk/watchdog.

Information relating to performance in the 2006-07 reporting period is in the process of being collated and will be published later this year by the Sustainable Development Commission.

Departments: Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people in his Department have been allowed to work from home for part of the week in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on home working. [143876]

Gillian Merron: The Department has 88 members of staff which it formally recognises as home workers. The Department for Transport's staff may also make individual requests to work flexibly based on a local business case, both to meet their personal needs, such as caring responsibilities, reasonable adjustments under the Disability Discrimination Act and to meet the needs of the Department to have a well motivated and flexible workforce.

The policy on home working is contained in the Departments staff handbooks and staff intranets.

Departments: Manpower

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people granted (a) temporary part-time, (b) temporary full-time, (c) permanent part-time and (d) permanent full-time contracts of employment in his Department in each of the last three years were (i) male, (ii) female, (iii) registered disabled and (iv) aged 55 years or over. DVLA note no temporary contracts have been granted.

MCA note no temporary contracts have been granted.

DSA does not employ staff on a temporary contract.

GCDA the information provided corresponds to the period since the GCDA became part of the DfT in November 2005.

DfT (c) Temporary staff were not recorded on PIMS until late 2005 also note that part-time status, disability and age are not recorded for non-employees/temporary workers database.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of staff in his Department are (a) male, (b) female, (c) registered disabled and (d) aged 55 or over. [143920]

Gillian Merron: Departmental information is that there are currently (a) 57 per cent. male staff, (b) 43 per cent. female staff, (c) 6 per cent. staff who have declared that they are disabled and, (d) 16 per cent. staff who are aged 55 and over.

Departments: Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff in his Department received bonus payments in 2006-07; what proportion of the total workforce they represented; what the total amount of bonuses paid has been; what the largest single payment was; and if he will make a statement. [143085]

Gillian Merron: In 2006-07 the total number of staff to receive a bonus payment was 7,121. This represents 38.08 per cent. of the total workforce. The total amount of bonuses paid was £3,863,521.76. The largest single payment was £23,575.00.

Departments: Sick Leave

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what average number of days per year was taken by staff in his Department as sick leave in each of the last five years for which records are available. [143062]

Gillian Merron: The Department was formed in May 2002. The information requested is in the following table.

	Average days absent per staff year
2002	9.1
2003	10.2
2004	10.7
2005	10.4
2006[1]	10.2

[1] Data for 2006 is provisional as some data cleansing is still being carried out.

Dial-a-Ride

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much he has allocated to dial-a-ride systems operated by local authorities in each of the last three years. [144269]

Gillian Merron: The Department does not allocate funds specifically for dial-a-ride type services.

The majority of support for local bus services, some £350 million a year outside London, is provided by local authorities using the Government's revenue support grant (RSG). As well as conventional bus services, RSG is used by local authorities to support dial-a-ride type services or other demand responsive transport (DRT). Decisions on which services to support are a matter for individual authorities.

The Department also provides support for rural bus services through rural bus subsidy grant (RBSG). The grant to local authorities in England—£55.6 million in 2007-08—can also be used to support DRT type services.

Several DRT services benefited from the department's rural and urban bus challenge programme between 1998 and 2003. In total the challenge provided £160 million to over 400 schemes around the country.

We have also changed the bus route registration rules to encourage flexibly routed, demand responsive bus services and made these services eligible for bus service operators grant (BSOG) from the Department. Community transport organisations are a major provider of dial-a-ride and DRT services and many receive funding through BSOG.

Driving Under Influence

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many deaths and serious injuries were attributed to the actions of drivers recorded with (a) 140 or more, (b) more than 120 but less than 141, (c) more than 100 but less than 121, (d) 80 or more, (e) less than 80 but 50 or more and (f) less than 50 milligrammes of alcohol in 100 millimetres of their blood in each year from 1997 to 2006; [144853]

(2) how many deaths and serious injuries were attributed to the actions of drivers recorded with (a) 80 or more, (b) less than 80 but 50 or more and (c) less than 50 milligrammes of alcohol in 100 millimetres of their blood who had previous convictions for drink-driving offences in each year from 1997 to 2006; [144854]

(3) how many deaths and serious injuries were attributed to the actions of drivers suspected of drinking but where no alcohol in blood levels was officially recorded in each year from 1997 to 2006. [144855]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many drivers who were killed in each year from 1997 to 2006 were known or suspected to have consumed alcohol in sufficient quantity for their blood levels to be excess of 50 milligrammes in 100 millilitres of blood but less than the current statutory limit; [144908]

(2) how many drivers who were killed in each year from 1997 to 2006 were known or suspected to have consumed alcohol in sufficient quantity for their blood levels to be in excess of the current statutory limit. [144909]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is available in tables (2a) and (2i) of the article Drinking and Driving, published in Road Casualties Great Britain—the annual report. The annual reports for the years 1998 to 2005 contain the information requested and are available in the Libraries of the House.

2004 is the most recent year for which the information requested is available.

Driving Under Influence: EC Action

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what (a) oral and (b) written representations he has received from (i) European Union and (ii) other European authorities on the harmonisation of a statutory blood alcohol level limit for drivers; [144838]

(2) what agreements have been made with European Union members on the statutory blood alcohol level limit for drivers; [145003]

(3) what steps the Government have taken to introduce a 50 milligramme blood alcohol level following the EU Transport Council in November 2006. [145024]

Dr. Ladyman: Written representations were received from the European Commission in 2001 concerning the publication of the Commission's recommendation on the maximum permitted BAL for drivers of motorised vehicles. No agreements have been made with EU members on the legal alcohol limit for drivers.

We have made clear our view in the report of the second three-year review of the road safety strategy that the legal limit cannot be considered in isolation from other drink-drive measures, but we will keep the case for a reduction in the limit under review.

Driving: Methadone

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether it is permissible for an individual to drive a car while being prescribed methadone. [145074]

Dr. Ladyman: Those complying fully with a consultant supervised oral methadone maintenance programme may be licensed to drive, subject to favourable assessment and, normally, annual review. However, it is an offence to drive or attempt to drive while unfit due to any drug, illicit or prescribed.

Exhaust Emissions

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what response he has made to representatives from the British Airlines Pilots Association on the comparative emissions from different forms of transport. [144960]

Gillian Merron: None.

Government Car and Despatch Agency: Fines

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) speeding fines, (b) London congestion charge fines and (c) parking fines were incurred by the Government Car and Despatch Agency in 2006-07. [144369]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government Car and Despatch Agency (GCDA) paid £5898.02 in parking fines and £50 in congestion charge fines in 2006-07.

The Agency has paid no speeding fines.

Government Car and Despatch Agency: Vehicles

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the number of miles travelled by cars in the Government Car and Despatch Agency in 2006-07. [144368]

Dr. Ladyman: It is estimated that cars in the Government Car and Despatch Agency fleet travelled approximately 2,189,000 miles in 2006-07. These figures are for the entire car fleet operated by GCDA, including its short-term hire and Green Car services.

Lorries

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will ask the European Commission for a clear ruling on whether member states may make retro-reflective markings mandatory on newly registered heavy goods vehicles in the UK before the date of 10 October 2009 stipulated in the 03 series of amendments to United Nations Economic Commission for Europe Regulation 48. [144913]

Dr. Ladyman: There are no plans to do so. Work is already in hand to bring in the retro-reflective tape requirement by amending Road Vehicle Lighting Regulations in time for the internationally-agreed 10 October 2009 date.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the (a) European Commission and (b) United Nations Economic Commission for Europe on making retro-reflective markings mandatory on newly registered heavy goods vehicles in the UK before the date of 10 October 2009 stipulated in the 03 series of amendments to United Nations Economic Commission for Europe Regulation 48. [144914]

Dr. Ladyman: None.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he plans to make retro-reflective markings mandatory on all newly registered heavy goods vehicles before 10 October 2009 if the European Commission rules that member states are free to do so. [145108]

Dr. Ladyman: We are working to implement the retro-reflective tape requirement via amendment to Road Vehicle Lighting Regulations by 10 October 2009 in accordance with international agreement. It is doubtful that any ruling by the European Commission would materially advance our national implementation, due to the timescales needed to make amending regulations.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average journey of (a) three and a half and (b) 12 tonne trucks on (i) motorways and (ii) A roads in England was in the last period for which figures are available. [145124]

Dr. Ladyman: Average length of trip per annum by company owned vehicles not exceeding three and a half tonnes gross-plated weight is published in Table 4.1 of Road Freight Statistics 2005.

Data on the average length of haul by goods vehicles over 3.5 tonnes are published in Table 1.15 of Road Freight Statistics 2005.

Data on the exact weights of 3.5 tonnes and 12 tonnes are not available separately because of the small survey sample sizes.

Printed copies of the publication are available in the House Library. It is also available on the Department for Transport's website at the following link:

http://www.dft.gov.uk/pgr/statistics/datatablespublications/freight/goodsbyroad/

Lorries: Tolls

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether his Department is conducting work on the lorry road user charge; [141858]

(2) what steps the Government is taking to ensure that foreign hauliers pay for their financial and environmental impact on UK roads. [141866]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department is not conducting work on a specific lorry road user charging scheme. It was announced to the House on 5 July 2005 that the specific procurement exercise for a lorry road user charging scheme would not continue, but that we would continue to work with the industry and to ensure that we carry the full experience gained from the project into the wider work on road pricing for cars and lorries.

The Department is currently undertaking a feasibility study to explore ways of delivering better targeted enforcement on foreign heavy goods vehicles. This is looking at a range of potential schemes including a vignette. No decisions have been taken on this.

M1

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the carriageways of the M1 motorway between junctions 26 and 27 are next scheduled to be resurfaced. [144139]

Dr. Ladyman: The M1 motorway between junctions 26 and 27 forms part of the M1 J21—J30 widening contract 1. As part of this widening programme, all the carriageways will be re-surfaced providing a new low noise surface. Subject to the satisfactory completion of statutory procedures and approved funding, Contract 1 work is planned to start in late 2007.

Motor Vehicles

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many vehicle defect notices were issued for each year since 1997 in respect of (a) British registered vehicles and (b) vehicles registered in other EU member states, broken down by country. [145118]

Dr. Ladyman: The Vehicle and Operator Service Agency (VOSA) is responsible for road safety enforcement. Inspection notices are issued to British vehicles only. Prohibitions are issued to British and international traffic. Statistics for both are reported annually in VOSA's Effectiveness report. This is available on-line at www.vosa.gov.uk or in the House of Commons Library, Business and Transport section.

Motor Vehicles: Testing

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether he plans to make it Government policy to extend the MOT testing regime to every other year after cars' fourth year as recommended by the Davidson review; and if he will make a statement; [145119]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effect on vehicle emissions as a result of extending the MOT testing regime to every other year after cars' fourth year as recommended by the Davidson review; [145120]

(3) whether he has made an assessment of the impact that lengthening the time between MOT tests will have on (a) road safety and (b) driver behaviour as referred to on page 5, paragraph 13 of the Davidson report; [145126]

(4) whether he has made an assesment of the frequency of MOT equivalent tests in other EU member states; [145127]

(5) whether he has made an assessment of the comparable rates of accidents in which vehicle defects are a contributable factor in other EU member states with an MOT equivalent regime of testing every other year; [145128]

(6) what estimates he has (a) made and (b) evaluated of the potential increase in (i) deaths and (ii) serious injuries from a change from annual to biannual MoT tests; [145154]

(7) what estimate he has made of the financial implications for (a) MOT garages, (b) motorists and (c) manufacturers and retailers of cars and components arising from a change from annual to biannual MOT tests; and if he will make a statement. [145156]

Dr. Ladyman: I intend to issue a consultation paper shortly which will cover these issues.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on the environmental impact of extending the allowed period between MOT tests to every other year after cars' fourth year as recommended by the Davidson review. [145122]

Dr. Ladyman: None.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many vehicles failed MOTs on grounds of emissions standards in each year since 1997, broken down by vehicle type. [145123]

Dr. Ladyman: The Vehicle and Operator Services Agency (VOSA) is responsible for the operation of the MOT Scheme. Statistics regarding the number of vehicles that failed the MOT test on the grounds of emissions standards are published annually in VOSA's Effectiveness Report. This is available on-line at www.vosa.gov.uk or in the House of Commons Library, Business and Transport Section.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with (a) the motor insurance industry, (b) MOT garages, (c) the police and (d) the motor car manufacturing industry on lengthening the time between MOT tests. [145130]

Dr. Ladyman: None.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many MOT tests were carried out on (a) private and (b) commercial vehicles in each year since 1997. [145132]

Dr. Ladyman: The Vehicle and Operator Services Agency (VOSA) is responsible for the supervision of the MOT Scheme. Statistics regarding the number of MOT tests carried out on (a) private and (b) commercial vehicles are reported annually in VOSA's Effectiveness Report.

This is available on-line at www.vosa.gov.uk or in the House of Commons Library, Business and Transport Section.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many approved MOT garages there are. [145133]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of approved MOT garages at 19 June 2007 was 18,858.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the average investment on equipment made by an MOT garage to carry out MOT tests on (a) private and (b) commercial vehicles. [145135]

Dr. Ladyman: The Vehicle and Operator Services Agency (VOSA) is responsible for the supervision of the MOT scheme. VOSA authorises a range of equipment for use when carrying out MOT tests. However, the equipment purchased remains a business decision for the MOT garage owner. VOSA does not hold records of the expenditure of MOT garages, therefore, no estimate is available.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much a garage is required to pay in fees in order to gain approval as a registered MOT provider; and to which agency such fees are payable. [145150]

Dr. Ladyman: The Vehicle and Operator Services Agency (VOSA) is responsible for the supervision of the MOT scheme. Garages applying to the Secretary of State for authorisation to be a registered MOT provider are not required to pay a fee.

Motorcycles

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) pursuant to the answer of 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 108W, on motorcycles, what reservations were expressed by motorcycle racing and motorcycle sports organisations on the Off-Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill; and if he will place copies of the representations in the Library; [144322]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 114W, on vehicles, what reservations were expressed by rural and farming organisations on the Off-Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill; and if he will place copies of the representations in the Library. [144323]

Dr. Ladyman: Motorcycle racing and motorcycle sports organisations and rural and farming organisations have expressed reservations about the impact of the Off-Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill. Those representations were made to the Department for Transport in confidence.

Off-Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will make an assessment of the likely implications for the staffing of his Department and its agencies of the Off-Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill if enacted in its current form; [144343]

(2) if he will estimate the (a) initial cost and (b) subsequent annual costs of implementing the Off-Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill if enacted in its current form; [144345]

(3) what estimate he has made of the size of the advertising budget required to publicise the Off-Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill as it stands following Second Reading should it be passed into law; [144408]

(4) what assessment he has made of likely levels of non-compliance should the Off-Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill be passed into law as it stands following Second Reading; [144409]

(5) what additional equipment would be needed to enforce the Off-Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill if passed into law as it stands following Second Reading; and what estimate he has made of the likely cost; [144410]

(6) what additional training will be needed to enforce the Off-Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill if passed into law as it stands following Second Reading; and what estimate he has made of the likely cost; [144411]

(7) what assessment he has made of the possible overall impact of the Off-Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill on his Department and its agencies should it be passed into law as it stands following Second Reading. [144412]

Dr. Ladyman: It is estimated that around 230 additional staff would be required for DfT and its Agencies.

The overall cost to implement the Bill as drafted has been estimated as approximately £80 million over three years.

The costs required for advertising have not yet been estimated.

No estimate has been made of the likely levels of non-compliance.

It has not been established whether additional equipment would be required.

The estimated cost of enforcement is £50 million over two years.

The estimated cost to this Department and its Agencies is £30 million over three years.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of which programmes managed by his Department and its agencies would have to be delayed or postponed should the Off Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill pass into law as it stands following Second Reading; what estimate he has made of the cost of such delays; and if he will make a statement. [144413]

Dr. Ladyman: No formal assessment has yet been made, but it is likely that the proposals would require significant additional changes to the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency's (DVLA's) IT systems and processes. This would be likely to have an adverse impact on other DVLA IT programmes and hence on the quality of services to the public. It is likely that one of the projects that would be rescheduled would be the delivery of continuous insurance enforcement.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what recent discussions he has had with the First Minister for Northern Ireland on the possible implications of the Off-Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill if enacted; [144318]

(2) what recent discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on the possible implications of the Off-Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill if enacted; [144325]

(3) what recent discussions he has had with (a) the Secretary of State for Scotland and (b) the First Minister for Scotland on the possible implications of the Off-Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill if enacted. [144326]

Dr. Ladyman: No discussions on the implications of the Off-Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill have taken place with the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, the First Minister for Northern Ireland, the Secretary of State for Scotland or the First Minister for Scotland.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what assessment he has made of the possible impact on the rural and farming community of the Off-Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill if enacted in its current form; [144338]

(2) what assessment he has made of the possible impact on the agricultural industry of the Off-Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill if enacted in its current form; [144339]

(3) what assessment he has made of the possible impact on motorcycle sport of the Off-Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill if enacted in its current form. [144340]

Dr. Ladyman: The Off-Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill has been interpreted as making provisions which would apply to certain vehicles used in rural areas for agriculture and forestry, and vehicles used for motor sport. No detailed assessments have yet been made, but it is clear that, in its current form, the Bill would require many such vehicles to be registered and to display a registration number.

Railways: Northern Region

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many Sprinter trains are in use on the Northern Rail franchise; and what the average age is of the Sprinter fleet. [144833]

Mr. Tom Harris: The Northern franchise currently has 40 Class 150 Sprinter units in use, each comprised of two vehicles. The Class 150s were built between 1984 and 1987.

Roads: Accidents

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate his Department has made of the number of children (a) killed and (b) seriously injured on the road in each year since 1997 during their journey to and from school when travelling (i) on foot, (ii) by bicycle and (iii) in vehicles; what estimate he has made of the number who were within 300 metres of their home in each case; and if he will make a statement. [144156]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is given in the following table.

Number of children (aged 0-15) killed or seriously injured in reported personal injury road accidents, on the way to or from school, GB: 1997 to 2005

2005 is the latest year for which figures are available. No estimates are available of the number of children injured within 300 metres of their home.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many (a) road traffic accidents (RTAs) and (b) RTAs involving serious injury or fatalities were recorded in each year since 1997 in which mechanical failure or defects, including tyres, have been identified as the cause or a contributory factor; [145152]

(2) what types of defects detectable during the MOT test have led to serious and fatal accidents in each year since 1997. [145157]

Dr. Ladyman: Comprehensive information on what types of defects detectable during the MOT test have led to serious and fatal accidents is not available.

From 2005 information has been collected on contributory factors to reported personal injury road accidents, including vehicle defects. These are "tyres illegal, defective or under inflated", "defective lights or indicators", "defective brakes", "defective steering or suspension", "defective or missing mirrors" and "overloaded or poorly loaded vehicle or trailer". This Information is published on the Department's website at the following web addresses:

Traffic Lights: Cameras

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment was made of the merits of requiring traffic light cameras to be brightly painted when the decision was taken to make that a requirement for fixed speed cameras; and if he will make a statement. [144138]

Dr. Ladyman: No assessment was made. Traffic light signals are, by their very nature, highly visible so it is unnecessary to require any cameras monitoring them to be brightly painted. Traffic light signals monitored by cameras are however clearly signed in advance.

Transport: Costs

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the percentage change in real terms of the cost of travelling by (a) private car, (b) bus and (c) train since 1997. [142517]

Gillian Merron: Between 1997 and 2006 the real cost of motoring declined by 10.2 per cent. bus and coach fares increased by 12.6 per cent. and rail fares increased by 5.9 per cent.

West Coast Railway Line

Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many instances of serious safety lapses have occurred on the West Coast mainline since the Grayrigg derailment on 23 February; [144370]

(2) how many instances of serious safety lapses have occurred on the Cumbrian section of the West Coast mainline since the Grayrigg derailment on 23 February; [144371]

(3) if he will make a statement on Network Rail's initial report into the Grayrigg derailment; [144372]

(4) what inspection regime is used for checking the condition of the rail line on the Cumbrian section of the West Coast mainline; [144373]

(5) what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the number of staff employed in the maintenance of the Cumbrian section of the West Coast mainline; [144374]

(6) what additional checks have been introduced on the Cumbrian section of the West Coast Main Line since the Grayrigg derailment on 23 February; [144377]

(7) whether there is to be a review of the speed limits in operation on the Cumbrian section of the West Coast Main Line; [144378]

(8) what assessment he has made of the impact on scheduled journey times of additional checks being carried out on the Cumbrian section of the West Coast Main Line. [144379]

Mr. Tom Harris: The Grayrigg derailment is being investigated by the Rail Accident Investigation branch (RAIB), which will in accordance with its regulations, make its report public in the shortest possible time commensurate with a thorough investigation. The RAIB's investigations covers a broad range of issues but includes the maintenance regime and related staff resources; and any internal reports produced by Network Rail will be considered by RAIB as part of its investigations.

When RAIB's detailed findings are available, Network Rail will consider them carefully and any action which may need to be taken.

The inspection regime to check the condition of the track (including any additional checks) is an operational matter for Network Rail. It falls to the rail industry to agree the speed limits and journey times on the line. Network Rail's arrangements are subject to independent scrutiny.

Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the full report on the inquiry into the Grayrigg derailment to be published. [144375]

Mr. Tom Harris: The investigation by the rail accident investigation branch (RAIB) is continuing and the RAIB will, in accordance with its regulations, make its report public in the shortest possible time commensurate with a thorough investigation.

JUSTICE

Burglary: Sentencing

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many mandatory sentences were handed down to burglars in each year since 1997. [144136]

Mr. Hanson: The following table shows the information reported to the Ministry of Justice, previously Home Office, Court Proceedings Database on persons sentenced under section 111 of the Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 (previously section 4 of the Crime (Sentences) Act 1997) in England and Wales for a third offence of domestic burglary in the years 2000 to 2005. Data are not available before 2000, as the Crown court computer system was not updated to recognise these sentences until then.

The data are published in table 2.6 of the Statistical Bulletin, "Sentencing Statistics 2005". It can be located at the following:

Children: Abuse

Annette Brooke: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how much funding has been allocated to training for paediatricians giving testimony for the prosecution in child abuse cases for 2007-08. [140385]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I have been asked to reply. This information is not held centrally.

Coroners: Mesothelioma

Ms Keeble: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of procedures in coroner's courts for dealing with deaths due to mesothelioma. [144027]

Ms Harman: A coroner must hold an inquest into deaths which are reported to him which he has reasonable cause to suspect of being unnatural. This would usually include diseases contracted at work such as mesothelioma. Investigations into these kinds of deaths will continue in a reformed system, but will be governed by national standards set by a new chief coroner.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what representations her Department has received on the conduct of inquests into deaths caused by mesothelioma; and if she will make a statement. [144028]

Ms Harman: I have received the report of the British Lung Foundation on the investigation of mesothelioma deaths. My officials attended the launch of the report and have met subsequently with representatives of the British Lung Foundation. The report's recommendations will be taken into account as reform proposals are further developed.

Crown Courts: Prison Accommodation

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice whether all inmates detained in Crown court cells have been subject to the minimum standard of induction as required by Prison Service Order 0550; who was responsible for conducting the induction procedures; what level of training those responsible for the induction received; and if she will make a statement. [141668]

Mr. Hanson: Prison Service Order 0550 provides instructions and guidance on the induction process for prisoners on arrival at a prison establishment. As such it is not applicable to the exceptional use of court cells, which are used only as a measure of last resort if accommodation in prison and police cells is exhausted.

Prisoners who have not yet been held in a prison will undergo full reception and induction procedures at the prison to which they are allocated.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice whether all inmates detained in Crown court cells have been subject to the minimum standard of health screening as required in prison service orders; who was responsible for conducting the health screening; what the minimum level of training is for those responsible for conducting the screening; and if she will make a statement. [141669]

Mr. Hanson: Arrangements are in place for prisoners held in court cells to be assessed by a qualified health care professional. Further health screening will take place on reception at the prison to which they are allocated.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice whether each instance of accommodation provided for inmates in Crown court cells corresponds with the minimum standards as laid down in Prison Service Order 1900; and if she will make a statement. [141670]

Mr. Hanson: Prison Service Order 1900 provides guidance for the certification and use of prison accommodation and is not applicable to the use of court cells, which are used only as a measure of last resort if accommodation in prison and police cells is exhausted. Appropriate staffing levels and procedures are in place in order to ensure prisoners are held in safe and decent conditions.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what level of supervision is provided to prisoners detained overnight in Crown court cells; and if she will make a statement. [141671]

Mr. Hanson: Staffing levels are determined on a site-by-site basis in order to ensure safety and decency, good order and control. In addition to an appropriate level of staff provided by the relevant prisoner escort contractor, there is prison service governor grade supervision.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice who is responsible for the supervision of prisoners lodged overnight in Crown court cells; and if she will make a statement. [141672]

Mr. Hanson: It is a legal requirement for prisoners to be held in the custody under the authority and direction of a 'constable.' When court cells are in use, this role is discharged by a prison service governor grade.

Additional staffing of court cells is provided by the relevant prisoner escort contractor, following established operating procedures.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many prisoners have been held overnight in Crown court cells since the beginning of 2007; and if she will make a statement. [141673]

Mr. Hanson: Since the beginning of 2007 current data show that court cells have been used on 561 occasions (as at 19 June 2007). One occasion means one prisoner night in a court cell.

Departments: Advertising

Grant Shapps: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice which (a) advertising agencies and (b) other organisations supplied consultancy services for advertising campaigns for (i) her Department and its predecessor and (ii) its agencies in each of the last five years; and what the cost of these services was. [139439]

Mr. Hanson: Since my Department, the Ministry of Justice, was established on 9 May 2007, it has not commissioned any consultancy services for advertising campaigns. Its predecessor Department, the Department for Constitutional Affairs, did not use consultancy services for advertising campaigns.

Grant Shapps: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how much was spent on advertising by (a) the Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last five years. [139515]

Mr. Hanson: Since my Department, the Ministry of Justice, was established on 9 May 2007, the Department and its agencies have incurred no expenditure on advertising.

Departments: Remploy

Danny Alexander: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what (a) services and (b) products her Department and its predecessor has procured from Remploy in the last 12 months; and at what cost. [143791]

Ms Harman: The Ministry of Justice was created on 9 May 2007, and my response relates to the former Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA) and those bodies which were part of the Home Office and are now part of the Ministry of Justice.

DCA

In the financial year ending 31 March 2007, the DCA procured from Remploy: (a) 'Book-binding' services for Court Registers and Publications to the value of £8,635.70 and 'Disability Training' services to the value of £3,858.47. (b) The DCA has not purchased any of Remploys' products. Total expenditure was £12,494.17.

Office for Criminal Justice Reform (OCJR)

In the last 12 months, OCJR have not procured any services provided by Remploy, nor has it purchased any of their products.

National Offender Management Service (NOMS)

In the last 12 months, NOMS have not procured any services provided by Remploy, nor has it purchased any of their products.

HM Prison Service (HMPS)

In the last 12 months, HMPS have not procured any services provided by Remploy, nor has it purchased any of their products.

Drink Driving

Mr. Vara: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice pursuant to the answer to the right hon. Member for Gordon (Malcolm Bruce) on 6 June 2007, Official Report, columns 592-600W, on driving under the influence, how many convictions there were in each police authority area in England and Wales for the offence of drink driving in each year between 1995 and 2001. Mr. Hanson: Available information taken from the Court Proceedings Database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform, from 1995 to 2001 is provided in the following table.

[2] In 2000 problems encountered with the electronic submission of data directly from the courts resulted in shortfalls in summary motoring offences for Northamptonshire from June onwards. This shortfall continued in 2001.
[3] Staffordshire police force were only able to submit sample data for persons proceeded against and convicted in the magistrates courts for the year 2000. Although sufficient to estimate higher orders of data, these data are not robust enough at detailed level and have been excluded from the table.

Note:
Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts and police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.

Fixed Penalties: Prisoners

James Brokenshire: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice pursuant to the answer of 5 June 2007, Official Report, column 382W, on fixed penalties: prisoners, how it was possible to provide a substantive answer to question 12643, tabled on 6 March 2007, by the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hallam on illegal immigrants: fixed penalties. [142186]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The substantive answer provided to question 12643, tabled on 6 March 2007, by the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hallam (Mr. Clegg) on illegal immigrants: fixed penalties, asked specifically for the number of fixed penalties issued to Romanian and Bulgarian nationals for working in breach of the Accession (Immigration and Worker Authorisation) Regulations 2006. The information relating to the number of fixed penalty notices issued under this scheme is collated locally but not published as a national statistic. This information has not been quality assured and should be treated as provisional management information only.

The answer of 5 June 2007, Official Report, column 382W, referred to fixed penalty notices and Penalty Notices for Disorder. The offences covered in these collections are motoring, minor public disorder and environmental offences, which do not relate to immigration matters. As a result of this, data on the nationality of recipients of these disposals are not collected centrally.

Offenders

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many (a) first time offenders and (b) re-offenders were arrested and subsequently charged in (i) Bridgend constituency, (ii) the South Wales police authority area, (iii) Wales and (iv) England in each of the last five years. [144293]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested is not available. The Ministry of Justice (MoJ) holds an extract of data from the police national computer (PNC) which is used to provide data on proven re-offending. Because of the focus on re-offending the data held is largely for cases which resulted in a conviction or a caution, although it also includes information on cases that are still pending at the time the data is extracted from the PNC. Details of cases which on completion do not result in a caution or conviction are not held. This dataset cannot therefore be used to provide comprehensive information on arrests or charges.

The main arrests collection held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform covers persons arrested for recorded crime (notifiable offences). It does not however include information about whether or not the offenders had previously committed offences.

Poaching: Salmon

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many convictions there were in each year from 2002 to 2006 for illegal poaching of salmon with prohibited instruments. [144103]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Offences under the Salmon and Freshwater Fisheries Act for the illegal poaching of fish with prohibited instruments do not specify the type of fish poached, and therefore data on convictions for poaching of salmon with prohibited instruments are not separately identifiable, and are therefore not available.

Police Custody: Sussex

Nick Herbert: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice (1) how many cells at police stations in Sussex are being used as part of Operation Safeguard; [144592]

(2) what the cost has been of the use of cells at police stations in Sussex of Operation Safeguard; [144593]

(3) how many prisoners have been held in police stations in Sussex since the latest launch of Operation Safeguard. [144594]

Mr. Hanson: Sussex police force has not committed to providing places in police cells as part of Operation Safeguard but provides ad hoc assistance when required.

No invoices have yet been paid to Sussex police.

The level of usage of Operation Safeguard within individual police force areas is held for use as management information only.

Prisoners: Young Offender Institutions

Mr. Vara: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what the average population was in young offender institutions in each year since 1997. [144145]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The average population in young offender institutions in England and Wales in each year from 1997 to 2005 is shown in the following table.

Population in young offender institutions

	Number
1997	7,834
1998	8,505
1999	8,344
2000	8,439
2001	8,565
2002	8,779
2003	8,424
2004	8,294
2005	8,243

The figures were taken from web table 8.10 of the Home Office Statistical Bulletin: Offender Management Caseload Statistics 2005. This can be found at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs07/hosb1806section8.xls

These figures have been drawn from administrative IT systems, which, as with any large-scale recording system, are subject to possible errors with data entry and processing.

Prisons: Crimes of Violence

Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many incidents of (a) self-harm, (b) prisoner-on-prisoner violence, (c) prisoner-on-officer violence and (d) officer-on-prisoner violence were recorded in each prison in each of the last five years. [142708]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Prisons: Drugs

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how much and what proportion of the prison service budget was spent on drug rehabilitation programmes inside prisons in the last 12 months, broken down by treatment methods and programmes. [142720]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Out of a total £2.83 billion allocated to run prisons during 2006-07 (excluding healthcare and education funding), £77.3 million was provided for custodial drug treatment. This equates to 2.73 per cent. of the total allocation.

The funding breakdown is given in the following table:

Intervention	Allocation 2006-07 (£ million)	Proportion of total prison spend (percentage)
Clinical services	23.3	0.82
CARATS	31.7	1.12
Drug rehabilitation programmes	19.4	0.69
Juvenile substance misuse programmes	2.9	0.10
Total	77.3	2.73

Prison Drug Treatment

Around 55 per cent. of those received into custody are problem drug-users (PDUs)—with some local prisons reporting up to 80 per cent. testing positive for Class A drugs on reception. This means around 70,000 PDUs enter custody each year—with 40,000 being present at any one time.

Addressing drug-misuse is a priority for the MoJ—and NOMS has in place a comprehensive drug strategy, the three key elements of which focus on: (i) supply reduction, (ii) demand reduction (through effective treatment) and (iii) building effective through-care arrangements (particularly through prisons' engagement in the HO-led drug interventions programme (DIP)) so timely continuity of treatment can be maintained as PDUs move respectively between custody and the community.

Drug 'treatment' in custody goes much wider than the 116 drug rehabilitation programmes running across the estate and includes: (i) clinical services (maintenance-prescribing and/or detoxification programmes) that are available in all local and remand prisons; and (ii) CARATs (Counselling, Assessment, Referral, Advice and Through-care services) that are provided in all prisons.

Spending on prisons

The total spending on prisons in 2006-07 was £2.83 billion. This figure is a provisional outturn and subject to audit. It includes HMPS, private prisons, and prison related-services managed in NOMS HQ. It does not include expenditure on education or health met by the DFES or DoH.

Spending on Prisons has increased in real terms by 36 per cent. since 1996-97 (to 2006-07). Real terms means adjusted for inflation to 2005-06 levels using the Treasury deflator.

For the purpose of this PQ, the total £2.83 billion figure cited for running prisons has been based on the funding allocated to run prisons operationally—primarily on security, safety, decency and health, maintaining their fabric and providing prison officers to deliver/oversee services for prisoners.

Prison drug treatment funding

While it is true that the level of funding allocated to drug treatment is only a small proportion of the overall prisons budget, this needs to be seen in context. A significant proportion of the prisons budget is spent on infrastructure and staffing—essential to keep prisons safe and to protect the public. It is however, better to compare expenditure on drug treatment against actual treatment need. With funding levels up 997 per cent. since 1996-97 and overall numbers engaged in prison treatment increasing year on year, prisons are doing much to close the treatment gap. The calculations are based on additional drug treatment funding allocated as a result of successive spending reviews. The figure approximates to £7 million but it is not possible to breakdown between various treatment types. The pre-CSR baseline has therefore been excluded from the calculations.

Integrated Drug Treatment System (IDTS)

The integrated drug treatment system (IDTS) is designed to boost the quality and increase the volume of drug treatment with a particular focus on drug users during their first 28 days in custody. By March 2008 full IDTS (enhanced clinical services and psychosocial support i.e. CARATS) will be available in 17 prisons; additionally enhanced clinical services will also be available in a further 35 establishments. Collectively, NOMS/DH funding for delivery of IDTS during 2007-08 stands at £18.7 million. This is expected to see around 24,500 drug users benefiting annually from enhanced clinical services.

So far as IDTS is concerned, the Department of Health and NOMS have had to make challenging decisions in reviewing the totality of budgets in recent years. Current levels of funding are down significantly on planned expenditure.

Treatment gap

More work is needed to identify the gaps in treatment provision. Historically, local assessment and epidemiological studies have informed treatment delivery across the prison estate. Work is already underway on a needs analysis model but, ahead of its data being available later this year, NOMS already anticipates there being a significant treatment gap. For example, to identify offenders' drug needs effectively, the CARAT service would need to undertake substance-misuse triage assessments for up to 80 per cent. of the annual prison through-put; based on 136,000 offenders passing through custody, this would be around 108,000 offenders. As currently resourced, CARAT teams only deliver around 75,000 assessments—a potential shortfall of 33,000.

Prisons: Overcrowding

Nick Herbert: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice (1) what discussions her Department has had with the Prison Service on the possibility of easing prison overcrowding by transferring prisoners serving sentences in closed prisons to (a) open prisons and (b) Ford Open Prison; [144590]

(2) what plans there are to relieve overcrowding in closed prisons by transferring prisoners to (a) open prisons and (b) Ford Open Prison. [144591]

Mr. Hanson: The Prison Service has already implemented measures designed to maximise the use of the whole prison estate. This includes the transfer of prisoners sentenced to less than 12 months in custody to an open prison (including to HMP Ford) for the final 56 days of their sentence. Each individual is subject to a streamlined risk assessment in order to determine whether they are suitable for transfer.

Probation: Manpower

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what her most recent estimate is of the number of (a) probation officer and (b) probation service officer vacancies in each probation area in England and Wales. [140427]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Not all Probation Areas in the National Probation Service operate a set establishment against which vacant posts can be measured. As a more representative alternative, Probation Areas are required to report regularly on the number of active vacancies they have. An active vacancy is one which a Probation Area is actively trying to fill through a recruitment process.

Figures for 31 December 2006 show that there were a total of 8343.64 full-time equivalent Probation Officers in post in England and Wales. On the same date there were 70.27 full-time equivalent vacancies that were actively being recruited to. Therefore active vacancies accounted for 0.84 per cent. of the total posts available at that time.

Additionally, the National Probation Service employs 6,502.74 full-time equivalent probation service officers, who also deliver front-line services to offenders. At this time, there were 203.00 full-time equivalent vacancies, equating to 3.03 per cent. of the total posts available.

The figures presented in the following table show active vacancies for each Area, in terms of full-time equivalent value, for the Probation Officer and Probation Service Officer grades at the close of Quarter 3 06/07 (1 October to 31 December 2006).

Reoffenders

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many offenders made the subject of each type of community supervision by the courts were sent to prison for (a) further offending during the duration of the order and (b) otherwise breaching the conditions of the order in each of the last six years for which figures are available. [144134]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information for England and Wales on the completion rates for the main types of community sentence, for each year since 1995, can be found in Table 5.1 of the Home Office Statistical Bulletin: Offender Management Caseload Statistics 2005, a copy of which can be found in the House of Commons Library. This information shows the number of community sentences which are terminated due to further offences being committed by the offender or for failure to comply with the requirements of the sentence. Information on the number of offenders received into prison in each of the last six years for breaching community sentences is shown as follows. Information on the number of offenders who are sent to prison for committing further offences during community supervision is not centrally available.

Strikes: Shrewsbury

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice if he will initiate an inquiry into the arrest, prosecution and conviction of the 24 building workers in 1972, known as the Shrewsbury 24, and the subsequent treatment they have received whilst serving their jail sentenees; and if he will place copies of the documents held by his Department relating to the case in the Library. [143701]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Any person who believes they have been the victim of a miscarriage of justice can apply to the Criminal Cases Review Commission (CCRC) for a review of their case. The CCRC has the power to review possible miscarriages of justice in England, Wales and Northern Ireland, to gain access to documents and other material which may be relevant to its investigations, and to refer to the appropriate court any case in which there is a real possibility that the conviction will not be upheld. Unless, however, there are exceptional circumstances, the CCRC is not empowered to refer cases until the court appeal system has been exhausted. It is open to prisoners and former prisoners to seek recompense through civil litigation for any alleged wrongdoing while in prison custody.

We are not aware of the existence of any documents of which copies might be placed in the Library.

Tickets: Touting

Mr. Swire: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many prosecutions there were of ticket touts in each of the last five years. [144171]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The offence of ticket touting, under section 166 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 applies to regulated football matches. This public order provision is used by police in a proportionate and targeted way when the segregation of supporters might be compromised. Detailed information on football-related arrests has been collated by the Football Banning Orders Authority since the football season 2001-02, when the existing banning order framework was introduced. The following table provides details of prosecutions in respect of ticket touting offences.

Aggregates Sustainability Levy Fund

Paul Holmes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much of the Aggregates Sustainability Levy Fund was allocated to each of the fund's eight national delivery partners in each year since the fund was established. [143551]

Barry Gardiner: I have been asked to reply.

The figures in the following table show the final allocations to the Aggregates Levy Sustainability Fund's national delivery partners in England in each of the financial years the fund has been running.

Paul Holmes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much from the Aggregates Levy Eund was allocated to the fund's objective of (a) minimising the demand for primary aggregates, (b) promoting environmentally friendly aggregates extraction on land, (c) promoting environmentally friendly aggregates extraction in the marine environment, (d) promoting environmentally friendly transport of aggregates, (e) addressing the environmental impacts of past aggregate extraction and (f) compensating local communities for the impacts of aggregates extraction in each year since the fund was established. [143624]

Barry Gardiner: I have been asked to reply.

The Aggregates Levy Sustainability Fund's four objectives are:

1. Minimising the demand for primary aggregates
2. Promoting environmentally friendly extraction and transport
3. Addressing the environmental impacts of past aggregates extraction
4. Compensating local communities for the impacts of aggregates extraction

The fourth objective was added in April 2005.

The figures in the following table show the approximate allocations between the four objectives in each of the financial years the fund has been running.

Business: Education

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) schools and (b) businesses were involved in the Enterprise Summer School Scheme in West Lancashire constituency in 2006; and how many (i) have been and (ii) are expected to be involved in the scheme in 2007. [143529]

Jim Knight: I have been asked to reply.

The experimental 2006 Enterprise Summer School Scheme was managed for the Government by Young Enterprise, a leading educational charitable organisation. Nationally, we do not hold local information at the level of detail requested.

In light of evaluation, we are now considering how to develop enterprise summer schools. We have no plans for a further round of enterprise summer schools in 2007, but are developing options for future years.

Contracts: Medical Services

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what involvement his Department had in negotiating the new contract for the delivery of general medical services agreed in June 2003. [143808]

Mr. Timms: The general medical services contract was negotiated between the General Practitioners Committee and the NHS Confederation.

Valuation Office Agency

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many laser pens and laser measuring devices the Valuation Office Agency has purchased in the last 36 months; and what the cost has been. [143644]

Mr. Timms: The Valuation Office Agency (VOA) has laser measuring devices, but not laser pens. These are available to staff carrying out property inspections as part of the work of the VOA. The company that provides the laser measuring devices also supplies other items and services to the VOA, which are invoiced together. Therefore, a breakdown of the cost of laser measuring devices could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what payments (a) his Department and (b) the Valuation Office Agency made to Hometrack in each of the last three years. [143646]

Mr. Timms: No payments have been made to Hometrack by either (a) his Department or (b) the Valuation Office Agency.

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the property attributes and data that the HM Revenue and Customs stamp taxes provides to the Valuation Office Agency in relation to domestic dwellings to assist with council tax valuations and revaluations. [143647]

Ed Balls: The data which Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs stamp taxes supplies to the Valuation Office Agency is the information included in the land transaction return, which is prescribed by the Stamp Duty Land Tax (Administration) Regulations 2003 (S.I. 2003/2837).

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many photographic identity cards have been issued to staff of the Valuation Office Agency to assist in carrying out valuations of property. [143746]

Mr. Timms: The responsibility for issuing photographic identity cards lies with local offices across the Valuation Office Agency. The data on numbers issued are not held centrally and cannot be obtained without incurring disproportionate costs.

Departments: Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in his Department have been allowed to work from home for part of the week in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on home working. [143875]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave him on 8 May 2006, Official Report, column 84W.

Departments: Manpower

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people granted (a) temporary part-time, (b) temporary full-time, (c) permanent part-time and (d) permanent full-time contracts of employment in his Department in each of the last three years were (i) male, (ii) female, (iii) registered disabled and (iv) aged 55 years or over. [143890]

John Healey: The information requested is as follows:

	Male	Female	Disabled	Over 55

Temporary part-time	1	6	0	0
Temporary full-time	49	48	2	0

Departments: Projects

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether his Department uses the categorisation 'mission critical' in relation to departmental projects; and if he will make a statement. [143506]

John Healey: The categorisation "mission critical" is used by Government in relation to departmental projects. The definition of mission critical programmes or projects is published in the NAO report 'Delivering Successful IT enabled Business Change' (November 2006) and is used to define those that are (A) essential to the successful delivery of a major legislative requirement, a PSA target, or a major policy initiative announced and owned by the Prime Minister or a Cabinet Minister; or (B) if the programme or project is not successful there are catastrophic implications for the delivery of a key public service, national security or the internal operation of a public sector operation.

Departments: Redundancy

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many redundancies there were from his Department in (a) 2002-03 and (b) 2006-07; and what the total amount was of compensation payments made in each year. [137188]

John Healey: There were no redundancies in the Treasury in 2002-03. The data for 2006-07 are as follows. The costs of compulsory early severance or early retirement are determined according to the Civil Service Compensation Scheme.

2006-07

Disabled Children

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with representative groups about the transition support programme announced in Aiming High for Disabled Children: Better Support for Families. [143559]

Ed Balls: Treasury Ministers and officials have meetings with a wide range of organisations in the public and private sectors as part of the process of policy development and delivery. As was the case with previous Administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such meetings.

The disabled children review consulted on a wide range of policy options, including support at transition to adulthood, with voluntary sector representatives, providers, professionals, local government, disabled children and young people and their parents, MPs, and academics, through:

responses to the Children and Young People review Call for Evidence in 2006; joint HM Treasury and Department for Education and Skills seminars in July and October 2006;

a series of parliamentary hearings held in July 2006; engagement with the disabled children's pathfinder children's trusts; and visits to local authorities and specific providers.

Employment: West Lancashire

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people aged 24 years of age or under were considered to be economically inactive in West Lancashire in each of the last 10 years. [144967]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 21 June 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many people aged 24 years of age or under were considered to be economically inactive in west Lancashire in each of the last 10 years. (144967)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) compiles statistics of inactivity from the annual local area Labour Force Survey LFS and the Annual Population Survey (APS) following International Labour Organisation Definitions.

The attached table shows the number of economically inactive persons, aged 16 to 24, resident in the West Lancashire constituency, from the annual local area LFS for the 12-month periods ending in February from 1997 to 2004 and from the APS for the 12-month periods ending in March from 2005 to 2006. These numbers are also expressed as a percentage of the total population in that age group.

As these estimates are for a subset of the population in a small geographical area, they are based on very small sample sizes, and are therefore subject to large margins of uncertainty. In this case, the sample sizes are not sufficient to give an accurate estimate of even the direction of the change over the period.

Table 1: Economic inactivity in 16 to 24 year olds in West Lancashire parliamentary constituency

	Economically inactive 16 to 24 year olds
12 months ending	Level (thousand)	Rate (percentage)
February 1997	3	30
February 1998	4	37
February 1999	2	24
February 2000	3	23
February 2001	4	45
February 2002	3	33
February 2003	4	42
February 2004	2	22
March 2005	3	34
March 2006	3	29

Notes:
1. Estimates are subject to sampling variability.
2. Changes in the estimates over time should be treated with caution.

Families

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) internal evaluations and (b) external research the Treasury has (i) undertaken and (ii) commissioned on the effects of investment in early intervention with families as opposed to public spending on the consequences of not providing such early intervention; and if he will make a statement. [139015]

Ed Balls: The Treasury undertakes and commissions a wide range of evaluations. Most recently, the Children and Young People's Review conducted an extensive examination of the existing literature on spending on early intervention activity and preventative support, consulting practitioners, academics and commissioners of services. The review's public Call for Evidence attracted more than a 100 responses, details can be found at:

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/spending_review/spend_csr07/reviews/cyp_review/cypreview_index.cfm

The conclusions of this evidence and analysis were set out in "Aiming High for Children: Supporting Families" and "Aiming High for Disabled Children: Better Support for Families".

"Aiming High for Children: Supporting Families" highlights evidence from the United States that prevention and early intervention can represent a cost-effective response by public services. The conclusions of the review place a new emphasis on building children's resilience through improving attainment in education, good social and emotional skills and positive parenting. This analysis will be supported by significant investment over the next spending period in universal services, such as schools, health services and Sure Start children's centres. These all have a crucial role to play in focusing support on prevention and early intervention. New investment includes:

- £340 million additional funding for Sure Start children's centres, child care and early years by 2010-11;
- building on the Every Child a Reader scheme to help narrow attainment gaps by providing an average of 10 hours, one to one teacher-led tuition for 300,000 under-attaining pupils a year in English and 300,000 in Maths by 2010-11;
- funding so that by 2010-11 schools can offer two hours of free extended activities a week during term time, with two weeks a year of part-time holiday provision for children eligible for free school meals;
- faster roll-out to all schools of the successful Social and Emotional Aspects of Learning programme;
- intensive support for up to 30,000 parents who most need parenting support, focusing in particular on fathers; and
- a commitment from the Department of Health to examine how health services can best support parents and families in the early years of children's lives, by expanding the scope and duration of the current health-led parenting pilots, subject to the Comprehensive Spending Review.

"Aiming High for Disabled Children: Better Support for Families" acknowledged that despite an improvement in the outcomes for disabled children, they are less likely to achieve as much in a range of areas as their non-disabled peers. This report sets out policy proposals to encourage more responsive services and early interventions for disabled children and their families, across social services and health to enhance equality and opportunity for disabled children and their families. Improving their educational, social emotional development, and their opportunities for independent living, choice and control, is a key part of this process.

This report announced the following provision:

- £280 million over the next three years to fund short breaks for disabled children, meaning an extra 40,000 fortnightly short breaks for severely disabled children and their families to help prevent family breakdown;
- £35 million to fund a pilot project to provide accessible child care, promote training, and tackle other barriers to accessing child care;
- £19 million for a Transition Support Programme to promote wrap around support, and consolidate person-centred planning at the critical transition to adulthood. This builds on the Goverament's commitment to roll-out the successful Early

Support Programme which provides intensive, co-ordinated support early in a disabled child's life; radical reform in the co-ordination and provision of community equipment and wheelchairs to maximise disabled children's mobility; development of a national indicator as part of the suite of public service agreement targets, underpinned by a 'core offer' to help disabled young people and their parents understand what support they can get and how to access it across local services; and specific resources for evaluation and benchmarking good practice on early intervention for disabled children and their families as part of the work of the new Centre for Excellence for Children and Family Services.

Immigration: Greater London

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the change in funding for (a) London and (b) Wimbledon as a result of the change from International Passenger Survey to Labour Force Survey. [143013]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The Office for National Statistics published indicative figures for mid-2002 to mid-2005 to show the effect of a number of improvements to the methodology to estimate the international migration component of the population estimates. These improvements include the use of the Labour Force Survey in combination with the International Passenger Survey to distribute in-flows of international migrants to a regional level.

No estimates have been made of the distribution of formula grant to any authority based on these indicative figures.

Landfill Tax

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the forecast revenue is from landfill tax in (a) 2005-06, (b) 2006-07, (c) 2007-08 and (d) each year onwards for which estimates are available in (i) England and (ii) the United Kingdom. [143654]

John Healey: UK landfill tax receipts for 2005-06 and a provisional figure for 2006-07 are published by HM Revenue and Customs at http://www.uktradeinfo.com/index.cfm?task=Bulletins in the landfill tax bulletin. A projection for 2007-08 receipts is published in Table C8 of the March 2007 Financial Statement and Budget Report.

Outturn or projected landfill tax receipts for England are not available separately.

Public Sector: Manpower

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what his latest estimate is of the (a) total population and (b) number of public sector workers for the period from 2007 to 2057; and if he will make a statement; [144074]

(2) what changes to Government assumptions about (a) public sector staff turnover and (b) the total number of public sector employees in relation to the total population underlie the new estimates of the future costs of public sector pensions in (i) the 2006 long-term public finance report and (ii) the 2004 long-term public finance report ; and if he will make a statement. [144076]

Mr. Timms: The staff turnover assumptions used in the long-term public finance report are provided by the Government Actuary's Department to reflect the actual experience of the schemes. The 2005 staff turnover assumptions were based on the assumptions adopted for principal civil service pension scheme (PCSPS) based on scheme experience while the 2006 assumptions are a weighted average of PCSPS, NHS pension scheme (NHSPS) and the teachers pension scheme (TPS) experience and assumptions. A technical note detailing staff turnover assumptions for the 2005 cash flow projections for unfunded public service pension schemes was also placed in the House of Commons Library in June 2006 and a note detailing the 2006 projections is published on the Government Actuary's Department website.

Data used in the LTPFR assumptions is based on scheme membership and not on the total number of public sector employees. HM Treasury does not produce population estimates or projections. The last official population projections were produced by the Government Actuary's Department in 2005 and are publicly available on their website. The Office for National Statistics will be responsible for producing the next set of projections and these will be published on 23 October.

Sequestration of Assets

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the total value of assets the Asset Freezing Unit is likely to freeze in each of the first three years of its operation on an annual budget. [144568]

Ed Balls: Decisions by the Treasury to freeze the assets of suspected terrorists are at all times taken in response to advice from law enforcement and security agencies. It is not possible to estimate the value of assets likely to be frozen in a given year.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Asset Freezing Unit will become operational; how many full time equivalent staff members it will employ; what its annual budget will be; and what the set up costs will be. [144569]

Ed Balls: The Treasury intends to establish a dedicated Asset Freezing Unit by the end of the summer. The unit will be funded from within the Treasury's departmental expenditure limit.

Stamp Duties: Repayments

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people received refunds on stamp duty in 2006-07; and how many received such refunds erroneously. [143726]

Ed Balls: From 1 December 2003, stamp duty land tax replaced stamp duty for property transactions. During 2006-07 Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs issued 7,442 repayments of stamp duty land tax.

Stamp duty land tax is a self-assessed tax. It is not possible to estimate the number of repayments which should not have been made because a purchaser has incorrectly completed his or her return.

Tax Credit: Pension Funds

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the evidential basis is which supports the statement that the abolition of dividend tax credits in his July 1997 Budget was the right decision for the future of the UK's pension system. [143546]

Ed Balls: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the statement the Chancellor of the Exchequer made to the House and subsequent exchanges on occupational pensions on 17 April 2007, Official Report, columns 175-79.

HEALTH

Blood Donors

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations she received in each year since 2002 on the National Blood Service's policy that prohibits gay and bisexual men from donating blood. [144179]

Caroline Flint: The Department is able to provide information for the last three years. This is provided in the following table.

	Correspondence[1]
2005	24
2006	27
2007	11 (to date)

Cancer

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the (a) epidemiological and (b) statistical correlation between incidences of cancer and (i) mining communities and (ii) iron and steel industry communities. [141049]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We are not aware of any departmental assessment looking at the epidemiological and statistical correlation between incidences of cancer in either mining communities or the iron and steel industry communities.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate her Department has made of the number of people who will be diagnosed with lymphoma in the next five years. [143739]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We estimate that 57,698 people will be diagnosed with a type of lymphoma between 2008 and 2013.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking to increase the number of lymphoma patients who are able to choose whether to receive their care at home or in a community setting. [143742]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) published "Improving Outcomes" guidance for patients with haematological cancers, including lymphoma, in October 2003. This guidance covers all aspects of a lymphoma patient pathway, including providing supportive care in both a home and community setting. It is based on the best available evidence and has been put together after wide consultation, drawing on the views of patients and carers as well as the experts in the field.

The national health service has been required to set out action plans to achieve compliance with the NICE recommendations and has set key milestones for the delivery of the guidance. Implementation will be incremental and will be supported through the increased general funding being provided to the NHS. Implementation is being monitored by strategic health authorities and through peer review.

We have also provided £6 million of funding for the Integrated Cancer Care programme, which explored models of delivery to help all cancer patients get the best quality of care possible, and to find out the most effective ways to use resources.

This programme also supported patient choice by engaging patients more actively in decisions about their care. A final report, detailing the development of the programme and the key recommendations, was submitted to Ministers in spring 2007 and has been published on the Department of Health's website at:

www.dh.gov.uk/en/Publicationsandstatistics/Publications/PublicationsPolicyAndGuidance/DH_074957

Additionally, as part of the development of the cancer reform strategy announced last November, we will be considering the most appropriate setting for the delivery of care for cancer patients.

Cancer: Sunitinib

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidance her Department gives to primary care trusts for the provision of the drug sunitinib (Sutent) to cancer patients on the NHS; [144632]

(2) if she will ensure that the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence makes an early assessment of the effectiveness of sunitinib (Sutent) for the treatment of cancer patients; [144633]

(3) what assessment her Department has made of the efficacy of the drug sunitinib (Sutent) for treating cancer patients. [144634]

Caroline Flint: Guidance issued by the Department makes it clear that it is not acceptable for national health service organisations to refuse to fund a treatment simply because it has not been appraised by National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE). Pending final guidance, NHS bodies should continue to make local decisions on the use of sunitinib (Sutent), taking account of the available evidence.

The Department referred sunitinib to NICE on 19 June 2007 for appraisal as part of its 14th work programme.

The safety, quality and efficacy of a drug is assessed as part of the process for granting a marketing authorisation. Sunitinib has been approved by the European Medicines Evaluation Agency, with contributions from the United Kingdom via membership of its scientific advisory committee, the Committee for Medicinal Products for Human use, for use in the European Union to treat patients with renal cell carcinoma and gastrointestinal stomal tumour. The Department has undertaken no separate assessment of the efficacy of sunitinib.

Cancer: Medical Treatments

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what support is available for lymphoma patients to help them comply with their treatments. [142980]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) published 'Improving outcomes in haemato-oncology cancer' for patients with haematological cancers, including lymphoma, in October 2003. This guidance covers all aspects of a lymphoma patient pathway, including supportive care, and is based on the best available evidence and have been put together after wide consultation, drawing on the views of patients and carers as well as the experts in the field.

The national health service has been required to set out action plans to achieve compliance with the NICE recommendations and has set key milestones for the delivery of the guidance. Implementation will be incremental and will be supported through the increased general funding being provided to the NHS. Implementation is being monitored by strategic health authorities and through peer review.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact of payment by results on the provision of social and psychological support to lymphoma patients. [143305]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There has been no formal assessment of the impact of payment by results on the provision of social and psychological support to lymphoma patients.

Social care is outside the scope of payment by results. Psychology services are excluded from payment by results, except psychological support provided during a patient's stay in hospital. Funding for services that are excluded from payment by results is agreed locally between commissioners and providers.

Cancer: Research

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans her Department has to review the implementation of the Human Tissue Act 2004 in order to safeguard tissue-banks which may be needed for research into lymphatic cancers and other conditions. [142956]

Ms Rosie Winterton: None. The Human Tissue Act 2004 was passed following a considerable amount of parliamentary debate as well as extensive consultation and discussion with a wide range of stakeholders including healthcare professionals, academics and researchers, families affected by organ retention, members of the general public as well as other Departments and the devolved Administrations. It provides a sound regulatory framework that supports research activities, including tissue banking, while maintaining the confidence of both professionals and the public.

Cancer: Tomography

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment has been made of the impact of lymphoma services of the £20 million extra capital investment to build new PET-CT facilities announced on 12 October 2005; [142977]

(2) how many PET-CT scanning facilities were available for lymphoma patients in each year since 2004; and where they were located. [142979]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not routinely collect data on the, number, location and clinical use of Positron Emission Tomography (PET) scanning and therefore cannot make an assessment of the additional funding made available for lymphoma patients.

However, 'The National Framework for the Development of PET-CT Services in England' published in 2005 estimated that 15,000 scans were needed for diagnosis and treatment of patients with lymphoma. A National Audit database is currently being developed by the United Kingdom PET-CT Advisory Board. In the future, this database will help to monitor the number of scans recommended against estimates of needs for conditions such as lymphoma.

Annex C (pages 24-27) of the national framework identifies the PET-CT facilities in England in 2005. A copy of the national framework is available in the Library. In addition, the National Clinical Research Institute (NCRI) also published A 'Framework for PET Research in the UK' in March 2007 and Appendix IX of this report identified the location of current facilities for PET scanning within the national health service only. This report can be found on NCRI's website at www.ncri.org.uk.

Cardiovascular System: Diseases

Lorely Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent meetings she has had with groups representing patients with peripheral arterial disease. [144551]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There have been no ministerial meetings with groups representing patients with peripheral arterial disease in the past year, but officials have met interested stakeholders from the University of Dundee.

Lorely Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration her Department has given to the inclusion of strategies to manage peripheral arterial disease in the national stroke strategy. [144553]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The national stroke strategy had a project group looking at issues around prevention and raising public awareness. This made broad recommendations which are relevant to peripheral arterial disease, and which will be published for consultation this summer.

Lorely Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions have taken place with regard to identification of patients with peripheral arterial disease as part of the vascular disease risk management programme. [144556]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department's Vascular Programme Board has considered a presentation about the impact of peripheral arterial disease. This will be considered as part of a broader programme of work exploring the feasibility of a comprehensive vascular risk management programme.

Lorely Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance has been issued by her Department on the use of the ankle brachial pressure index as a means of assessing vascular disease risk. [144557]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has not issued guidance on the use of on the ankle brachial pressure index on how to assess vaseular disease risk.

Carers: Grants

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to continue the carers' grant after April 2008. [145095]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 25 April 2007, Official Report, column 1193W.

Dental Services

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact the new dental contract has had on (a) care of patients and (b) working conditions of dentists; and if she will make a statement. [142326]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department will shortly be publishing a report, assessing the first 12 months of the new arrangements for local commissioning of dental services and the new contractual arrangements. The new arrangements are designed to support dentists in carrying out less complex and invasive courses of treatment that allow more time for preventative care. This should help promote clinically appropriate care for patients while reducing workload for dentists. It will take time to build up detailed evidence on the impact on patient care and on dental workload and expenses. However, the available evidence suggests that the new arrangements are, as intended, supporting dentists in carrying out less complex courses of treatment.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact of the new dental contract on access to NHS dentistry; and if she will make a statement. [142327]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department will be publishing a report later in the summer, assessing the first 12 months of the new arrangements for local commissioning of dental services and the new contractual arrangements. The most recent data show that the proportion of the population accessing national health service dental services in the two-year period ending December 2006 is the same as in the two-year period immediately preceding the reforms. This suggests that access has remained broadly stable during the transition to the new arrangements. The evidence also so far indicates that the NHS is commissioning a steadily increasing volume of NHS dental services.

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department has a target for the number of NHS dentists per head of population in (a) each primary care trust area and (b) England. [142901]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has not set targets for numbers of national health service dentists. Under the dental reforms implemented from April 2006, it is for primary care trusts to assess local oral health needs and develop dental services to reflect these needs.

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of (a) adults and (b) children are registered for NHS dentistry in (i) the City of Sunderland, (ii) the North East region and (iii) England. [143345]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Under the new national health service dental contractual arrangements, patients do not have to be registered with a dentist to receive NHS care. Information is available on the number of patients receiving NHS dental care or treatment at least once over a 24-month period (patients seen). This is not comparable to registration data for the period before April 2006.

Section F2 of Annex 3 of the NHS Dental Statistics for England Q4: 31 March 2007 report contains information on the number of adult and child patients seen in the 24-month periods ending 31 March, 30 June, 30 September, 31 December 2006 and 31 March 2007 in England, NHS North East and Sunderland teaching primary care trust, expressed as a proportion of the estimated population for each area. This report is available in the Library.

The report, published by The Information Centre for health and social care, is also available online at:

www.ic.nhs.uk/statistics-and-data-collections/primary-care/dentistry/nhs-dental-statistics-for-england:-quarter-4:-31-march-2007

Alison Seabeck: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in which primary care trusts patients seeking an NHS dentist are (a) able to make their own arrangements to choose which NHS dentist they see, (b) allocated a dentist from a central list after a wait of no more than three months and (c) allocated a dentist from a central list after a wait in excess of three months. [143929]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not held centrally. Primary care trusts (PCTs) are responsible for providing or commissioning primary dental care services to reflect local needs. It is for PCTs to agree locally with the providers of these services the most effective arrangements to support patients in accessing services.

Alison Seabeck: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which primary care trusts have undertaken patient surveys in order to assess patient demand for NHS dentistry in their area. [143930]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not held centrally. Primary care trusts (PCTs) are responsible for providing or commissioning primary dental care services to reflect local needs. It is for PCTs to decide locally, in consultation with local clinicians and patients, how most effectively to assess these needs.

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what basis comparisons can be made between the number of NHS patients registered at a dental practice and units of dental activity to assess levels of dental provision before and after the introduction of the new general dental services contract. [144844]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Information Centre for health and social care regularly publishes information on the number of individual patients seen by national health service dentists in England over a 24 month period. The latest data show the position for the 24 months ending 31 March 2007 and is contained in "NHS Dental Statistics for England: Quarter 4: 31 March 2007", which is available in the Library.

To support comparisons of access before and after the dental reforms introduced in April 2006, the Information Centre reports include information on numbers of individual patients seen in the last 24 months of the previous contractual arrangements, i.e. the period ending 31 March 2006. These data show that the number of patients seen has remained broadly stable throughout the first transitional year of the reforms.

Units of dental activity are a way of measuring the courses of dental treatment provided for NHS patients, based on grouping courses of treatment into three main bands and applying different weightings to reflect the relative complexity of these bands. The corresponding number of patients seen will vary depending on the complexity of the treatment they require and the frequency with which they re-attend for new courses of treatment.

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which indicators her Department intends to use to compare NHS dental provision before and after the introduction of the new general dental services contracts. [142613]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Data are available at national level on the numbers of patients receiving national health service dental services within the most recent two-year period and on the number of courses of treatment provided annually for NHS patients (by treatment band). The Department is supporting primary care trusts in developing a wider range of indicators that can be used locally to measure and benchmark the development of primary dental services.

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the number of individual NHS patients registered and treated under general dental services contracts is recorded. [142614]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Patients no longer have to be formally registered with a practice to receive national health service dental services. The information centre for heath and social care published quarterly data on the numbers of individual patients receiving NHS dental care at least once within the most recent two-year period. Numbers of patients seen in the previous 24 months ending 31 March, 30 June, 30 September and 31 December 2006 are available in Section F1 of Annex 3 of the NHS Dental Statistics for England Q3: 31 December 2006 report. This report is available in the Library and also at:

www.ic.nhs.uk/statistics-and-data-collections/primary-care/dentistry/nhs-dental-statistics-for-england-q3:-31-december-2006.

Dental Services: East Sussex

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what total value of NHS orthodontic treatment was carried out in (a) Eastbourne and (b) East Sussex in each of the last five years. [141891]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Data identifying the value of orthodontic courses of treatment alone by financial years and for specific local areas is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

However a special analysis of general dental services (GDS) costs over a 12 month reference period from 1 October 2004 to 30 September 2005 was prepared to help calculate funding levels for the new primary dental service arrangements introduced from 1 April 2006. The following table draws on that analysis and sets out the total payments during that twelve month reference period for all courses of treatment which included an element of orthodontic care in each of the primary care trusts (PCTs) in East Sussex operational at the time.

PCT name	Orthodontic earnings 1 October 2004 to 30 September 2005
Bexhill and Rother	11,398
Brighton and Hove City	918,052
Eastbourne Downs	493,349
Hastings and St. Leonards	225,155
Sussex Downs and Weald	351,487

Notes:
1. The data relate to claims from dentists working under the terms of the former General Dental Services only. It includes the value of interim payments made during the 12 month period for orthodontic treatments. It excludes orthodontic work carried out within former Personal Dental Service pilots, where the value of orthodontic as opposed to general dental treatments can be less easily identified. This may mean the GDS data above is not fully representative of all elements of orthodontic care in every area.
2. The data is presented by the PCT areas that were operational during the reference period, rather than the new PCTs that assumed responsibility for services from 1 October 2006.

Dental Services: Fees and Charges

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) definition and (b) value is of the units used to calculate NHS dentists' fees. [144606]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Under the new contractual arrangements introduced from April 2006, dentists are no longer paid on the basis of separate fees for individual treatments. Dentists or dental practices instead have an agreed annual contract value, paid in monthly instalments, in return for which they carry out an agreed volume of dental services over the course of the year.

These annual service levels are defined primarily in terms of the courses of treatment provided for national health service patients, but with courses of treatment categorised into three main bands and with different weightings to reflect the relative complexity of these bands. There are separate, though similar, arrangements for defining annual service levels for specialist dental services such as orthodontics. Within the overall contract value, primary care trusts (PCTs) and practices may also arrange for the provision of other services that are not measured through courses of treatment.

A course of treatment which consists of an examination, diagnosis, e.g. x-rays and oral health advice, and a scale and polish if needed, is recorded as a band 1 treatment. This equates to one unit of dental activity.

A course of treatment which includes band 1 items together with additional treatment such as fillings, root canal work or extractions, is recorded as a band 2 treatment. This equates to three units of dental activity.

A course of treatment which includes band 1 and 2 items together with more complex procedures such as crowns, dentures or bridges is recorded as a band 3 treatment. This equates to12 units of dental activity.

There are additional arrangements for urgent courses of treatment and for certain other categories of treatment such as the issue of prescriptions.

The relationship between annual contract values and annual service levels, expressed in terms of units of dental activity, varies between contracts. For dentists or dental practices, who had previously provided services under the old general dental services arrangements, the calculation of annual contract values and annual service levels was based on an assessment of overall NHS earnings and corresponding courses of treatment during a 12-month reference period before the start of the reforms. The resulting variations in contract prices reflect, in turn, historic differences in treatment patterns and patients' oral health needs. Subject to these transitional protections, the calculation of annual contract values and corresponding service levels is a matter for agreement locally between primary care trusts and dentists or dental practices.

Dental Services: Manpower

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) dentist to patient and (b) orthodontist to patient ratio is in each (A) strategic health authority and (B) primary care trust area in England; and what those ratios were in each of the last five years. [142418]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The requested information has been placed in the Library and shows the number of patients registered with a national health service dentist per number of NHS dentists, by strategic health authority (SHA) and primary care trust (PCT) in England, as at 31 March for each of the years from 2001 to 2006.

This information is based on the old contractual arrangements. Under the new NHS dental contractual arrangements, patients do not have to be registered with a dentist to receive NHS care. Information is, however, collected on the number of patients receiving NHS care or treatment at least once within the most recent two-year period (patients seen). This is not comparable to registration data for earlier years.

The information placed in the Library also shows the number of patients seen in the previous 24 months per number of dentists on open NHS contracts, by SHA and PCT in England, as at 31 December 2006.

Both these sets of data include NHS orthodontic services, but these services could only be separately identified at disproportionate cost.

Annex F of the "NHS Dental Activity and Workforce Report, England: 31 March 2006" contains information comparing the numbers of people resident in each SHA and PCT area with the numbers of dentists providing NHS services in that area as at March for each year from 2001 to 2006.

This report is available in the Library and is also available on-line at:

www.ic.nhs.uk/statistics-and-data-collections/primary-care/dentistry/nhsdental-activity-and-workforce-report-england-31-march-2006.

Section G of Annex 3 of the "NHS Dental Statistics for England Q3; 31 December 2006" report contains information comparing the numbers of people resident in each SHA and PCT area with the numbers of dentists on open NHS contracts in that area as at 30 June, 30 September and 31 December 2006.

This report is available in the Library and is also available on-line at:

www.ic.nhs.uk/statistics-and-data-collections/primary-care/dentistry/nhs-dental-statistics-for-england-q3:-31-december-2006.

Dental Services: St. Albans

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much NHS funding went to providing dentistry provision in the St Albans constituency in (a) 2004, (b) 2005 and (c) 2006. [142687]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Primary care trusts (PCTs) assumed full responsibility for local commissioning of primary care dentistry and received devolved budgets with effect from 1 April 2006. A table listing the primary dental service resource allocations for 2006-07 for all PCTs in England as at 31 July 2006 is available in the Library. PCTs determine the distribution of resources within their areas. A breakdown of the primary dental service resource allocations by constituency areas is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Full year data on expenditure by PCTs on primary dental care in 2006-07 is not yet available.

Prior to April 2006, most primary dental services were provided under former general dental service (GDS) arrangements. These were demand led services where the pattern of dental expenditure was largely determined by where dentists chose to practice, and how much national health service work they chose to undertake. PCTs were not given fixed GDS funding allocations. In a number of areas, personal dental services (PDS) pilots were also established, where some former GDS dental practices and some directly managed dental services converted to locally commissioned arrangements to test new ways of working and new forms of contract remuneration. PDS pilots were funded by PCTs from supplementary allocations issued by the Department.

The following table shows the available data on expenditure on the former GDS and PDS services for the constituency of St. Albans for 2004-05 and 2005-06. The difference between gross and net expenditure is the contribution to costs from dental charges collected directly from patients.

Core GDS and PDS dental payments within St. Albans constituency, 2004-05 and 2005-06 [1, 2, 3, 4, 5]

£ million

	2004-05	2005-06
Gross GDS	3.421	3.171
Gross PDS	0.052	0.701
Net GDS	2.389	2.287
Net PDS	0.048	0.508
Gross GDS and PDS	3.473	3.872
Net GDS and PDS	2.437	2.795

[1] Gross GDS payments include adult fees (including item of service and continuing care payments), child fees (including item of service and capitation payments), commitment payments, seniority payments, maternity/paternity/adoptive leave payments, long term sick leave payments, continuing professional development allowances including travel hours, reimbursement of business rates, vocational training grants and clinical audit payments. The following costs are excluded from those data: employer's superannuation costs, vocational trainee salaries and NI contribution costs, clinical audit convenors, clinical audit secretarial support costs and travel expenses, and costs associated with any salaried general dental practitioners and emergency dental services.

[2] PDS payment data relate to baseline payments or the agreed regular monthly payments made to PDS practices. The data cannot identify the cost of any PDS services that are directly managed by local NHS trusts, such as certain dental access centres.

[3] In the immediate aftermath of dental practices converting from GDS to PDS pilots, there can be a period of overlapping expenditure as time lags in submitting GDS treatment claims can mean that clearance of GDS arrears coincides with the start of regular PDS payments.

[4] Payments to dental practices are assigned to areas on the basis of practice postcode data. The practices themselves may draw patients from a wider catchment area.

[5] Net payments represent the balance of payments due after taking account of NHS dental charge income collected from patients by dental practices.

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS dentists are working in St. Albans; and how many there were in (a) 2004, (b) 2005 and (c) 2006. [142688]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Numbers of national health service dentists in regional areas in England as at 31 March 1997 to 2006 are available in the "NHS Dental Activity and Workforce Report England: 31 March 2006". Annex E contains information at strategic health authority (SHA) and primary care trust (PCT) area. Information at parliamentary constituency area is available in Annex G.

This information is based on the old contractual arrangements. Copies of the report are available in the Library and at:

www.ic.nhs.uk/statistics-and-data-collections/primary-care/dentistry/nhs-dental-activity-and-workforce-report-england-31-march-2006.

Numbers of NHS dentists in regional areas in England as at 30 June, 30 September and 31 December 2006 are available in Section G of Annex 3 of the NHS Dental Statistics for England Q3: 31 December 2006 report.

Copies are available in the Library and at:

This information is based on the new dental contractual arrangements and is not directly comparable with earlier information. Data are only available at SHA and PCT level. To provide these data at constituency level area would be at disproportionate cost. In this report, St. Albans is covered by West Hertfordshire PCT.

In both sets of figures, no account is taken of the level of service, if any, that each dentist provides.

Dentists: Contracts

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists were operating under (a) general dental services contracts and (b) personal dental services agreements in each year since 1997 in (i) Suffolk, (ii) Bedfordshire, (iii) Cambridgeshire, (iv) Essex, (v) Hertfordshire, (vi) Norfolk and (vii) England. [143954]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information is not available in the form requested. Information on numbers of national health service dentists broken down by general dental services and personal dental services contractual arrangements is available by NHS organisation rather than by county. Information as at 30 September for the years 1997 to 2005 at primary care trust (PCT) level in the requested areas is shown in the following table. (PCT boundaries are as at 30 September 2005).

These are the latest available data at PCT level.

Notes:
1. PCT boundaries are as at 30 September 2006.
2. Dentists will be counted more than once if they have contracts in more than one PCT. England totals exclude duplication.
3. The figures are based on the numbers of dentists with open GDS or PDS contracts.
4. Dentists consist of principals, assistants and trainees.
5. The areas have been defined using practice postcodes within the PCT.
6. Data include notifications received by the NHS BSA up to 2 November 2005 for England data and 13 January 2006 for PCT data.
7. No account is taken of the level of service, if any, that each dentist provides.

Departments: Recruitment

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much her Department and its agencies paid to recruitment consultants in each year since 1997. [140037]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Travel Agents

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much her Department and its agencies paid in travel agencies' fees in each year since 1997. [139906]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The net payment made to travel agencies by the Department since 1997 has been:

	Net payment (£)
1997-98	[1]—
1998-99	27,840
1999-2000	46,469
2000-01	32,700
2001-02	[2]0
2002-03	15,329
2003-04	36,966
2004-05	15,687
2005-06	66,780
2006-07	24,443

[1] No record.
[2] Travel agency fees 2001-02—nil net costs. In that year, the Department contracted with Carlson Wagonlit. This company received commissions from the rail and air operating companies to offset the management/contract costs charged to the Department. In other years, companies invoiced the Department for payment of these costs.

Departments: Vetting

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which Ministers in her Department have been Criminal Records Bureau checked. [139186]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Ministers are not security vetted by Departments.

Diabetes

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to prevent cases of diabetes. [143512]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We are committed to preventing as many cases of diabetes as possible. Obesity is one of the major causes of type 2 diabetes and tackling obesity, working through national and local partnerships, is a key departmental objective. The Government have a public service agreement (PSA) target, which is jointly owned by three Departments, to halt the year-on-year rise in obesity among children aged under 11 by 2010—in the context of a broader strategy to tackle obesity in the population as a whole. As childhood obesity often tracks into adulthood, the PSA-owning Departments are working to support families to eat more healthily and be more active.

Doctors: Qualifications

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many Indian doctors there are in the UK on highly skilled migrant programme visas who have not yet received a postgraduate certificate. [143438]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not held centrally.

Doctors: Recruitment

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what period of time will elapse between second round interview job offers to junior doctors and the commencement of the posts offered. [135589]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The further recruitment round will be managed locally so the period of time between offers and the commencement of the posts will vary depending on speciality and location.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received on the functionality of the application process used in Modernising Medical Careers; and if she will make a statement. [128234]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has received representations in the form of e-mails and letters concerning the Modernising Medical Careers (MMC) programme.

The Department has also had meetings with many stakeholders. We also set up an independent review of the MMC recruitment and selection process. This is being led by Professor Neil Douglas, Vice Chair of the Academy of Medical Royal Colleges and President of the Royal College of Physicians of Edinburgh. Members of the review group include representatives of the Royal colleges, the British Medical Association, the four United Kingdom Health Departments and NHS Employers.

Junior Doctors: Training

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many posts were available for junior doctors through the Medical Training Application System (MTAS) in round one; how many applicants for these posts there were; whether there were any new training posts in round two; and how many applicants per training post there were for those posts available through MTAS; [134104]

(2) when she will answer question 134104, tabled by the hon. Member for Yeovil on 24 April 2007, on the Medical Training Application Service. [144923]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of posts available for the 2007 recruitment process is in the following table.

Posts on MTAS

	Run through	FTSTA	Academic	Total	Round one posts not on MTAS added after 19 April[1]	Estimated GP posts filled outside MTAS	New run through programmes in Round 2	Estimated new FTSTAs and GP posts in Round 2[1]	Overall total of training posts in 2007[2]
UK	14,595	4,392	185	19,172	108	3,450	215	302	23,247
England	11,916	3,485	182	15,583	108	2,828	215	302	19,036

Across the UK 34,389 candidates submitted applications on Medical Training Application Service (MTAS) during the first recruitment round and made 127,948 applications. Of these 32,600[3] applicants made at least one eligible application and a total of 118,600[3] eligible applications are recorded on the MTAS system. Of the eligible applicants 29,600[3] were already working in training or non-training posts in the national health service.

The MTAS data provide the number of applications per post not applicants per post. Based on the MTAS extract dated 19 April there were 6.2 applications per post.

[1] Taken from a survey of English deaneries on 14 June. Figure only includes the posts in England and not those in the devolved Administrations because the survey only covered English deaneries. We expect there to be additional new posts in the devolved Administrations.

[2] As set out in note 1, the United Kingdom total does not include the new Round 2 posts in the devolved Administrations.

[3] This figure is an estimate derived by inference from the data provided by applicants on the MTAS system.

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information has been made public by (a) her and (b) Ministers in her Department and (c) other representatives on (i) matching algorithms and (ii) other matters relating to Medical Training Application Service and Modernising Medical Careers that were not included in (A) her Written Statement of 15 May and (B) her response to the Urgent Question on 16 May; and if she will make a statement. [138712]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The applicant's guide, which was first published on 30 November 2006, provided detailed information about the recruitment process, including how applicants would be matched to posts. Since the Modernising Medical Careers (MMC) Review began, a series of communications has been sent to applicants and recruitment teams and the applicant's guide has been revised. All of this information is available on the MMC website at www.mmc.nhs.uk.

Further background and information on the decision not to proceed with designing an algorithm to match applicants to posts was included in the Department's witness statements to the Judicial Review brought by Remedy UK. Copies of these two statements have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she made of the cost of administering each on-line job application by a junior doctor in the latest period for which figures are available. [140987]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The costs of administering junior doctor applications are not collected centrally. Processing costs will vary depending on local deanery arrangements. On-line application enables deaneries to reduce advertising, printing and distribution costs.

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many applicants to the Medical Training Application Service were from St. Albans constituency. [142694]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not collected centrally.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what distinction was made between applicants from outside the EU and EU citizens by the Medical Training Application Service. [143439]

Ms Rosie Winterton: All applicants in the current recruitment to specialty training must meet the eligibility requirements that applied on 5 February 2007, regardless of their nationality. Applicants who meet the eligibility requirements who are from outside the European Economic Area (EEA) will be considered on the same basis as United Kingdom and EEA applicants unless they require a work permit.

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the clarity of advice on requirement of the Home Office Passport Stamp in the applicants' guide of January 2007 for the Medical Training Application Service; why the date of 5 February was chosen; whether potential delays in obtaining the stamp were taken into account; and if she will change the requirement to 1 August; [144397]

(2) whether the applicants' guide for the Medical Training Application Service refers to migrant status and the Highly Skilled Migrant Programme; [144398]

(3) whether (a) her Department and (b) the Postgraduate Medical Education and Training Board can vary the 5 February deadline for the Highly Skilled Migrant Programme status passport stamp. [144399]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The application form made clear that evidence of immigration status should include an appropriately stamped passport.

To ensure consistency in the assessment of applications it was agreed that eligibility criteria for applications to specialty training had to be met on the final date of application, 5 February. This included the assessment of immigration status. To change this date or allow exceptions to it would be impractical and unfair.

The current applicants' guide, available on the Modernising Medical Careers website, is clear that immigration status will be assessed as of the 5 February 2007.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the Office of Government Commerce carried out a Gateway Review of the Medical Training Application Service. [144525]

Ms Rosie Winterton: No. However Medical Training Application Service was included in the Modernising Medical Careers Health Gateway programme review in September 2006.

Doctors: Vacancies

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS posts available for F2 doctors are training posts; and how many vacancies are short fixed-term contracts. [129081]

Ms Rosie Winterton: On Medical Training Application Service as at 19 April there were 7,687 specialist training level 1 (ST1) posts available for foundation level 2 (F2) doctors, of these 6,058 are for run-through and 1,529 are for fixed term specialist training appointments (FTSTA). FTSTAs are also training posts.

The further recruitment round will contain an estimated 302 additional FTSTAs and general practitioner training posts, but it is not yet possible to identify which of these will be at ST1 level.

For those who have successfully completed the Modernising Medical Careers foundation training programme and who demonstrate their ability to progress, there will be still further new training programmes through one-year fixed term appointments. We are asking the Postgraduate Medical Education Training Board to expedite the approval of these programmes.

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of F2 doctors who have been trained but who will not have an NHS post from August. [129119]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Deaneries are currently making Round 1 offers to applicants. When this process is complete we will then be able to estimate the likely numbers of F2 doctors who will not secure a specialty training place at the end of the process (Rounds 1 and 2).

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the written statement of 15 May 2007, Official Report, columns 30-31WS, on medical training (recruitment), how many and what proportion of jobs will go into round two; if she will allow doctors who could not or who mistakenly did not apply for round one to be considered for round two; whether an applicant may delay responding to a round one offer from a second choice until she or he has heard from the first choice; and how the results of the additional interviews which have been arranged as part of round one will be integrated with the results of the original round one interviews. [138184]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is not yet clear how many jobs will go into the further recruitment round as not all job offers have been made and accepted from the first round. The applicant guidance makes clear that the further recruitment round will be restricted to those applicants who have enrolled on Medical Training Application Service and have either declined all offers made to them in round one, have accepted a fixed-term specialty training appointment but would like to apply for a run-through post, or who have not been successful in the first round.

Up to the 10 June deadline, applicants were able to delay responding to a round one offer to see if another offer was made. Offers of posts after 11 June and before 22 June must be accepted or declined within a 48-hour period.

Deaneries integrated the results of the original round one interviews and the further interviews on a local basis.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 16 May 2007, Official Report, columns 613-7, on the Medical Training Application Service, how many GP training posts are being filled in the UK. [138801]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In the United Kingdom, there are 3,864 general practice posts being filled by the Medical Training Application Service system. An additional 3,450 general practitioner (GP) posts (for GPs already working in a training environment) were filled outside MTAS, creating a total of 7,314 GP training posts in the UK.

Elderly: Abuse

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps her Department plans to take in response to the UK study into the prevalence of elder abuse; and if she will make a statement; [143979]

(2) when her Department (a) commissioned and (b) received the UK study of prevalence of elder abuse; [143980]

(3) if she will commission research into the prevalence of abuse of older people who are (a) resident in care homes and (b) suffering from dementia; and if she will make a statement; [144158]

(4) what representations she has received on (a) the abuse of older people and (b) the findings of the UK Study of Abuse and Neglect of Older People report. [144159]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department will introduce a new monitoring system to report the extent of abuse, based on a new national standardised method for the collection of data on referrals in England. The Department will also review the "No Secrets" guidance on developing and implementing multi-agency policies and procedures to protect vulnerable adults from abuse. The case for legislation will be considered as part of the review.

The report, "UK Study of Abuse and Neglect of Older People, Prevalence Survey Report", was commissioned jointly by the Department and Comic Relief in August 2005. A draft report of the findings of the prevalence survey was submitted at the end of March 2007. Independent peer reviews were commissioned at the beginning of April 2007 and received at the end of April. The final draft of the prevalence survey report was received on 17 May 2007 and published on 14 June.

The research, which was produced by the Institute of Gerontology, Kings College, London and the National Centre for Social Research, involved a feasibility study of the ethical and methodological issues that would be faced by extending the work to residential care homes. This is the last stage of the commissioned study and is due to be submitted to the Department in mid July. This will enable the Department to assess if, and how, it may be possible to commission further research with residential care populations.

The prevalence survey will have included people with dementia, where they were able to give consent to be interviewed. No proxy interviews, however, were undertaken for those without the ability to consent. Research with people who have severe dementia is extremely difficult, but there are research teams working on innovative methods for involving people with cognitive impairment. The Department's research governance framework reminds researchers of the importance of working as inclusively as possible and the Mental Capacity Act 2005 provides a framework to enable those without capacity to be safely involved in research, where appropriate.

To date, the Department has received a wide range of representations on the abuse of older people. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my noble Friend Lord Hunt, the Minister of State on 19 June 2007, Official Report, column 94.

Electromagnetic Fields: Health Hazards

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will instigate an official inquiry into the potential effects on health of the roll-out of Wi-Fi technology. [145063]

Caroline Flint: The independent Advisory Group on Non-ionising Radiation (AGNIR) undertook a comprehensive assessment of radio waves and health in 2003. Its report, entitled 'Health Effects from Radiofrequency Electromagnetic Fields', was published by the then National Radiological Protection Board (now the Radiation Protection Division of the Health Protection Agency (HPA)). Copies are available in the Library and on the HPA web site:

www.hpa.org.uk/radiation/publications/documents_of_nrpb/abstracts/absdl4-2.htm

All devices that emit radio waves (such as wireless internet) should be used in compliance with the exposure guidelines published by the International Commission on Non-ionising Radiation Protection (ICNIRP) as specified in the European Recommendation on limiting public exposure to electromagnetic fields (EC/519/1999).

Information about wireless devices and health is available on the Department's web site at:

www.dh.gov.uk/en/Aboutus/MinistersandDepartmeatureLeaders/ChiefMedicalOfficer/Features/FeaturesArchive/Browsable/DH_5369553.

The Government acknowledge further advice provided by the HPA at:

www.hpa.org.uk/radiation/understand/radiation_topics/emf/wifi.htm

This states:

'There is no consistent evidence to date that wireless fidelity (WiFi) and wireless local area networks adversely affect the health of the general population. The signals are very low power, typically 0.1 watt (100 milliwatts) in both the computer and the router (access point) and the results so far show exposures are well within internationally accepted (ICNIRP) guidelines. Based on current knowledge and experience, radio frequency (RF) exposures from WiFi are likely to be lower than those from mobile phones. Also, the frequencies used in WiFi are broadly the same as those from traditional RF applications.'

Food: Labelling

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations she has received on food labelling. [144585]

Caroline Flint: Food labelling is the responsibility of the Food Standards Agency, which reports to Parliament through health Ministers. The agency is in regular contact with a wide range of stakeholders on a number of food labelling issues.

General Practitioners: West Lancashire

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners per head of population there were in West Lancashire constituency in each year since 1997. [143534]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Cluster Headaches: Medical Treatments

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what treatment is provided by the NHS for cluster headaches; whether the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence has been consulted on possible treatments for the problem; and what representations she has received on the effectiveness of occipital nerve stimulation as a procedure for treating cluster headaches. [143942]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: A range of pharmacological interventions are available to prevent the occurrence of cluster headaches, and to relieve the pain of attacks. It is the responsibility of health professionals to consider what treatment is the most appropriate for their patients, in consultation with the patient and informed by their medical history. The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence has not been consulted on treatments for cluster headaches.

The Department has not received representations on the effectiveness of occipital nerve stimulation in the treatment of cluster headaches.

Health Services: Overseas Visitors

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate her Department has made of the outstanding amount of money owed by foreign nationals for the use of NHS facilities. [144524]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is not possible to provide the information requested. Successive Governments have not required the national health service to provide statistics on the number of foreign nationals seen, treated or charged under the provisions of the NHS (Charges to Overseas Visitors) Regulations 1989, as amended, nor any costs involved.

Health Services: Reciprocal Arrangements

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether treatment under the European Health Insurance Card is paid for by the country where the card originated, the country where the treatment is given or the country where the patient is normally resident. [142043]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Under European Union regulations, the member state who issues the European Health Insurance Card is responsible for payment when any treatment is given.

Health Services: Training

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what (a) funding for training purposes was provided to and (b) expenditure on training was made by each strategic health authority in 2006-07; [137294]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 8 May 2007, Official Report, column 162W, on the NHS: training, what funding for training purposes was allocated to strategic health authorities (SHAs) in 2006-07, broken down by SHA; and what the actual expenditure on training was in each authority. [137373]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The funding provided to strategic health authorities for training and education in 2006-07 is shown in the following table.

2006-07 multi professional education and training (MPET) allocations

Strategic health authority (SHA)	Total MPET allocations (£000)
East Midlands SHA	276,532
East of England SHA	291,090
London SHA	898,301
North East SHA	199,527
North West SHA	499,511
South Central SHA	256,782
South East Coast SHA	201,456
South West SHA	308,193
West Midlands SHA	350,911
Yorkshire and Humberside SHA	484,048
England Total	3,766,349

The actual amount spent on education for 2006-07 is not yet known.

The Department of Health is in the process of collecting returns relating to expenditure on education and training in 2006-07. Validated data are expected to be available by the end of June 2007.

Health Visitors

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many full-time equivalent health visitor posts there were in each year since 1997, broken down by primary care trust; and if she will make a statement. [122828]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information has been placed in the Library.

Primary care trusts were first introduced in 2001-02, so we have produced a table showing health visiting staff by organisation in the period 2001 to 2006.

Health Visitors: East Sussex

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many health visitors were employed in (a) Eastbourne and (b) East Sussex in each of the last 10 years. [130971]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is only available from 2002 onwards. The number of community health professionals, which includes health visitors, in the East Sussex Downs and Weald primary care trust (PCT) area since 2002 is contained in the following table.

National health service hospital and community health services: Qualified community nurses in the East Sussex Downs and Weald PCT as at 30 September each specified year

Notes:
1. On 1 October Sussex Downs and Weald PCT was formed from a complete merger of Eastbourne Downs and Sussex Downs and Weald PCTs. 2006 figures are as at 1 October 2006. 2002-05 figures are an aggregate of the two predecessor organisations.
2. More accurate validation processes in 2006 have resulted in the identification and removal of 9,858 duplicate non-medical staff records out of the total work force figure of 1.3 million in 2006. Earlier years' figures could not be accurately validated in this way and so will be slightly inflated, the level of inflation in earlier years' figures is estimated to be less than 1 per cent. of total across all non-medical staff groups for headcount figures (and negligible for full-time equivalents). This should be taken into consideration when analysing trends over time.

Heart Diseases/Cancer

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent comparative assessment she has made of survival rates for (a) heart attack and (b) cancers with those of other (i) EU and (ii) Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development countries; and what such assessment she has made of rates (A) 10 and (B) 20 years ago. [144117]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Data are not collected centrally for heart attacks.

Cancer registries in England participate in the Eurocare Project, which measures and explains differences in cancer survival rates across Europe. Twenty countries participate in the project covering a total population of 100 million.

The latest report, EUROCARE-3, tracks patients who were diagnosed with cancer between 1990 and 1994 and followed up to 1999. It puts England in the middle ranking for survival rates, roughly below other Western European countries and above Eastern European Countries.

The next report, EUROCARE-4, which is due later this year tracks patients diagnosed in 1995-2002 and followed up to 2003. We believe that the next publication of figures will show that the gap between England and other Western European countries has narrowed. Earlier reports cover cancer patients who were diagnosed between 1978 and 1985, and followed up to 1990 (EUROCARE) and those diagnosed between 1985 and 1989, and followed up to 1994 (EUROCARE-2).

Heart Diseases: Screening

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) pursuant to the answer of 23 May 2007, Official Report, column 1130W, on heart diseases: screening, what further detailed practical work on abdominal aortic aneurysm screening implementation should be undertaken to ensure a phased roll out of a national screening programme for men aged 65 years and over; and if she will make a statement; [142698]

(2) what response her Department has made to the Abdominal Aortic Aneurysm Screening Working Group's recommendations, submitted in their progress report to the National Screening Committee's meeting in March 2007; and if she will make a statement. [142699]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The United Kingdom National Screening Committee (NSC) is considering the practical implications that would be involved in implementing a screening programme for abdominal aortic aneurysms. Further detailed work under the auspice of the NSC is being undertaken on a number of practical issues. These include developing standard operating procedures, programme standards, quality assurance procedures and training requirements. Officials will be kept informed on how this work develops.

Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals NHS Trust: Training

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the staff training budget was for Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals NHS Trust in each of the last three years. [140745]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not collected centrally.

In Vitro Fertilisation

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many men were registered as sperm donors in each of the last five years. [144321]

Caroline Flint: The number of sperm donors currently recorded by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority for each of the last five financial years is set out in the following table. Numbers may change as new information is obtained.

	Total number
2001-02	326
2002-03	305
2003-04	246
2004-05	250
2005-06	270

When donor anonymity was removed from 1 April 2005 there were concerns about the impact on donor numbers. Therefore we welcome the increased numbers in 2005-06 and will continue to encourage good practice in terms of donor recruitment.

Injuries: Children

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many recorded injuries excluding fatalities there were of children aged (a) 0 to four, (b) five to eight, (c) nine to 12 and (d) 13 to 16 years in each year since 1997; [144260]

(2) how many recorded injuries excluding fatalities there were of children aged (a) 0 to four, (b) five to eight, (c) nine to 12 and (d) 13 to 16 years where the injury was recorded as taking place (i) in the home, (ii) at school, (iii) in hospital, (iv) on a sports ground or other place where sporting activities occur, (v) in public parks and (vi) in other places in each year since 1997. [144261]

Caroline Flint: Data are not collected centrally precisely in the form requested. Data that most closely relate to the requested figures are from the Home and Leisure Accident Surveillance System, available for 1997 to 2002. These data cover injuries from non-fatal home and leisure accidents leading to an accident and emergency (A&E) visit (intentional injuries, road traffic and work accidents, and injuries treated by general practitioners or at home are not included). The figures are estimates for the United Kingdom, based on a sample of hospitals. The table shows data for published childhood age groups, and for locations relevant to the requested breakdown. More detail is available in the home and leisure accident surveillance system annual reports www.hassandlass.org.uk/query/reports.htm

or from Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents, which hold the detailed data

Irlen Syndrome

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what provisions there are for services for children and adults diagnosed with Irlen Syndrome to be provided on the NHS; [143515]

(2) what funding her Department provides for the provision of glasses for people who require glasses as a result of Irlen Syndrome. [143692]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The national health service provides optical vouchers for children and other eligible groups who, following a sight test, have been given a prescription to correct a defect in sight. Optical vouchers can be used to purchase glasses or contact lenses. Parents of children with reading difficulties are encouraged to have an NHS-funded sight test to check that there are no refractive problems or eye disease which may be contributing to the difficulties.

If, after a sight test (and glasses if necessary), difficulties are still being experienced then a wider assessment is called for. The best interests of children are likely to be served by a scheme of assessment and treatment, which takes into account the full range of possible ways of helping children with the symptoms associated with descriptions of Irlen syndrome. This is something that local education and health authorities should take forward in view of their responsibilities for services in their areas.

Kidney Patients: Health Services

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what provision is made for kidney patients requiring regular haemodialysis while away from home on holiday; and if she will make a statement; [142019]

(2) what her Department's policy is on providing access to haemodialysis facilities to kidney patients wishing to holiday away from home; [142020]

(3) if she will increase the number of facilities providing access to haemodialysis for kidney patients who wish to holiday away from home; and if she will make a statement. [142021]

(4) what information is provided to kidney patients who wish to take holidays about access to alternative NHS haemodialysis units. [142022]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The National Service Framework for Renal Services makes clear that the ability to dialyse away from home, for holidays or other reasons, is important to kidney patients. The Department has published guidance on temporary dialysis away from home which has been placed in the Library and is available on the Department's website at:

www.dh.gov.uk/en/Publicationsandstatistics/Publications/PublicationsPolicy/AndGuidance/DH.4084218.

The exact manner in which this guidance is implemented is a matter for the national health service.

Learning Disability: Death

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to establish a confidential inquiry into mortality of people with learning difficulties. [144811]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: At this stage, the Department has no plans to establish a confidential inquiry into mortality of people with learning disabilities.

The Department has established an independent inquiry into the deaths of six people named in Mencap's report, "Death by Indifference". In addition to the six cases, the independent inquiry will be identifying the action required to ensure that people with learning disabilities receive appropriate healthcare. The findings and recommendations of that inquiry will be used to inform a decision on whether to take forward a full confidential inquiry into mortality.

Medicine: Overseas Students

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she plans to take to enable international medical graduates working in the United Kingdom as part of the Highly Skilled Migrants programme to complete their training in the event of their visas expiring before the end of their training period. [126407]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Doctors in training working in the national health service who are part of the highly skilled migrant programme will be able to extend their leave under that programme provided they meet the eligibility criteria set by the Home Office at the time their visa expires.

Mentally Ill: Cannabis

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer to my friend the hon. Member for South Cambridgeshire (Mr. Lansley), of 6 June 2007, Official Report, column 583W, on mentally ill: cannabis, how many hospital admissions on mental health grounds resulting from the use of cannabis there were in each (a) strategic health authority and (b) primary care trust area in each year since 1997. [142416]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Data showing the number of hospital admissions on mental health grounds resulting from the use of cannabis in each strategic health authority and primary care trust in each year since 1997 have been placed in the Library. The data show admissions by all consultant specialities, including admissions by consultants registered under mental illness specialities only.

Midwives

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many student midwives she expects to qualify in 2007; and how many places she expects there to be in the NHS for newly qualified midwives. [142283]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In 2004-05, the national health service commissioned 895 midwifery degree places. Those who successfully complete the training will qualify in 2007.

Additional midwives will qualify through a variety of programmes, including an 18 month pre-registration education programme, adaptation and return to practice programmes. These programmes are funded and arranged locally, depending on local needs and therefore the start and end dates vary.

It is a joint responsibility between higher education institutions and local NHS organisations to see that midwifery and other health care graduates are supported to find employment. Vacancies for graduates continue to be posted on "NHS Jobs" and the NHS Careers information service can direct graduates to appropriate sources of information and advice. Graduates are encouraged to be flexible when applying for posts.

In developing "Maternity Matters", which outlines the Government's vision for maternity services, the NHS workforce review team identified that the midwifery workforce would increase by 1,000 leading up to 2009.

Muscular Dystrophy

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if her Department will allocate funding for the Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy Registry in the UK. [141450]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Implementation of the Department's research strategy "Best Research for Best Health" will result in an expansion of our research programmes and in significant new funding opportunities for health research. Details, including the scope of the programmes and the arrangements for making applications for support from them, are available on the National Institute for Health Research website at www.nihr.ac.uk. Funding awards are in all cases made after open, competitive, peer review.

NHS Appointments Commission

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria were used in the appointment of members to the NHS Appointments Commission. [143223]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Person specifications for all posts were agreed with Ministers and made publicly available to all potential candidates. Copies have been placed in the Library.

NHS Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her estimate is of the increase in her Department's future public sector pension liability which will arise from salary increases under the (a) Agenda for Change programme and (b) the new GP contracts; and if she will make a statement. [144577]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Government Actuary's Department (GAD) has valued the total future liabilities of the NHS Pension scheme as at 31 March 2006 to be £165.4 billion. GAD are in the process of preparing a detailed actuarial valuation of the scheme as at 31 March 2004 which will be published later this year which will include analysis of the factors leading to any change in valuation.

NHS: Allowances

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 8 May 2007, Official Report, column 153W, on NHS: allowances, in what (a) month and (b) year the level of the personal expenses allowance was set; and on what basis the level set was felt to be appropriate. [140461]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The requirement for an allowance for expenditure on personal items for those living in residential care settings originates from the National Assistance Act (NAA) 1948 - Part III (Local Authority Services), section 22(4). The National Assistance (Charges for Accommodation) Regulations 1948 set the sum for personal requirements at five shillings per week. These regulations came into force on 5 July 1948.

Due to the passage of time, it has not proved possible to establish the reasons that the level set was felt to be appropriate. Contemporary papers and reports are not available.

The 2007-08 rate of personal expenses allowances is £20.45 per week. This took effect on 9 April 2007.

NHS: Crimes of Violence

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS workers have been assaulted in each region of England in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [142143]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A table outlining the estimated number of reported violent incidents collected by the Department for 2001-02, 2002-03 for each strategic health authority, national health service trust and primary care trust in England has been placed in the Library.

In April 2003, the NHS Security Management Service (NHS SMS) was created and assumed responsibility for the issue of tackling violence against NHS staff. The NHS SMS has collected data on the number of reported physical assaults on NHS staff in England for the period 2004-05 and 2005-06. A breakdown of figures by reporting period for each NHS trust has been placed in the Library.

The NHS SMS has introduced a comprehensive strategy and integrated structure for addressing the issue of violence against NHS staff.

NHS: Finance

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding the Government provided to meet the start-up and running costs of the (a) Council for Healthcare Regulatory Excellence, (b) Nursing and Midwifery Council and (c) Health Professions Council in each year since its creation; and what proportion of the total budget this represented in each case. [142473]

Ms Rosie Winterton: According to our records, the amount of funding that was provided to the Health Professions Council (HPC) for its establishment was £3,804,467.38 between 2002 and 2004. No funding has been paid to the HPC by the Department since April 2004, as the HPC is an autonomous organisation funded by registration fees and does not receive funding from the Department. Details of the HPC's budget are not held centrally, but are available from the HPC itself.

According to our records, the amount of funding that was provided to the Nursing and Midwifery Council (NMC) for its establishment was £3,656,382.81 between April 2002 and April 2004. No funding has been paid to the NMC by the Department since April 2004, as the NMC is an autonomous organisation funded by registration fees and does not receive funding from the Department. Details of the NMC's budget are not held centrally, but are available from the NMC itself.

According to our records, the amount of funding that was provided to the Council for Healthcare Regulatory Excellence (CHRE) starting in 2003 for its start-up costs and running costs so far is £8,790,315.47. This represents 100 per cent. of CHRE budget.

Figures prior to April 2002 are currently unavailable without extensive research.

NHS: Manpower

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent estimate she has made of supply and demand for (a) consultants, (b) GPs, (c) nurses and midwives and (d) allied health professionals in 2007-08 in the same format as that included in her Department's third draft of its pay and workforce strategy, dated 27th November 2006. [131961]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The following table shows the Department's February 2007 estimates of the numbers of staff in particular groups in 2007-08. These figures were the latest version using the same approach as in the draft pay and workforce strategy, using the September 2005 census as the baseline.

Staff group		2007-08
Consultants	Available supply	31,600
	Demand	31,000
General practitioners	Available supply	30,800
	Demand	31,000
Qualified nurses	Available supply	314,500
	Demand	304,800
AHP/ST&Ts	Available supply	155,300
	Demand	144,100

The actual size of NHS workforce in 2007-08 will be determined by NHS organisations who will make decisions taking account of their local circumstances.

NHS: Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the employee contribution rate is to the NHS pension scheme; what plans there are to change this rate; what the revenue yield would be from varying the rate by 1 per cent; and if she will make a statement. [144264]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The contribution rate for scheme members is 6 per cent. of pensionable pay, however members classed as manual workers pay 5 per cent. NHS employers and the national health service trade unions have proposed a new tiered contribution structure with the rate of employee contributions tiered by pensionable pay.

The NHS pension scheme pensionable payroll as at 31 March 2006, taken from the resource accounts, was approximately £31 billion. Increasing the member contribution rate across the board by 1 per cent. of pensionable pay would yield just over £0.3 billion a year.

NHS: Training

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many training posts were available in each region of England in each of the last five years; and how many she expects to be available in 2007. [141653]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally.

North East Strategic Health Authority: Finance

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the surpluses generated in the north east strategic health authority (SHA) in 2006-07 will be retained in full in the SHA for use in future years. [144407]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The surplus generated by the national health service at the end of 2006-07 will be carried forward for spending in future years.

Individual organisations must work to manage the potential financial risks and the strategic health authorities (SHAs) have a key support role to play. The financial recovery in 2006-07 has put the NHS on a much firmer financial footing for 2007-08. Planning to generate surpluses, and holding reserves at SHA level, are a central part of the strategy to ensure that financial good health can be sustained in future years.

Nurses: Pay

Mr. David Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses will receive pay increases of 4.9 per cent. or more in 2007-08. [142266]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Figures for individual nurses are not held centrally.

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average salary of nurses in Blackpool, North and Fleetwood was in (a) 1997 and (b) the latest year for which figures are available. [143975]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Research Training Posts

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many academic research training posts are funded by the Government for (a) coronary heart disease, (b) cancer and (c) stroke and stroke-related problems. [144058]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The following academic research training posts are funded by the Department's research capacity development programme.

The Medical Research Council (MRC) is one of the main agencies through which the United Kingdom Government support medical and clinical research.

The MRC currently supports around 300 fellows and 100 capacity building and industrial collaborative students through its research career award schemes. The number of those currently supported in the areas of cancer, cardiovascular and cerebrovascular research are shown in the table.

Fellowship type	Cancer	Cardiovascular	Cerebrovascular

The MRC also supports around 1,000 further students through doctoral training accounts to universities. The information that would be needed to classify those awards by reference to disease areas is not held centrally.

Ruth Hartley

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether a unique identification number was accurately maintained for Dr. Ruth Hartley throughout each stage of the ST2007 recruitment process. [134433]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Medical Training Application Service allocates and maintains unique identification numbers for applicants and applications (final suffix letter). These are system generated and are not changed. Our supplier has confirmed that there is no evidence of any corruption to this data.

Sandwell and West Birmingham Hospitals NHS Trust

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) doctors, (b) consultants and (c) nurses were employed by Sandwell and West Birmingham Hospitals NHS Trust in each of the last five years. [136707]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of medical and dental staff showing consultants, qualified nursing, midwifery and heath visiting staff[1] within Sandwell and West Birmingham Hospitals NHS Trust as at 30 September each year for the period 2002 to 2006 is shown in the table.

[1] Census data collected by the Information Centre and in earlier years, the Department of Health, are provided, validated and signed off by each organisation that provides data from their payroll systems. When compiling a response for this parliamentary question, the data for nurses for 2005 were queried with the trust by the Department. Although it is possible that there was some error in submitting the data, it is not possible for the trust to replicate the data and provide an estimate for 2005 due to staff changes since. This should be taken into consideration when comparing data over time.

Smoking: Prisons

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what mechanisms exist to ensure that funding allocated by primary care trusts for nicotine replacement therapy within prison establishments is adequate; and if she will make a statement; [142866]

(2) what assessment she has made of the impact on demand for nicotine replacement therapy within prison establishments of the requirements of Prison Service Instruction 09/2007; what resources she has made available to meet this demand; and if she will make a statement; [142867]

(3) what assessment she has made of the demand for nicotine replacement therapy in areas designated as dormitories within the prison estate; and if she will make a statement; [142868]

(4) what assessment she has made of the availability of nicotine replacement therapy at (a) each prison establishment and (b) for those held in custody while attending courts; what resources are provided to support the demand for this treatment; and if she will make a statement. [142870]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Since April 2006, primary care trusts (PCTs) have been responsible for ensuring that healthcare services in prison(s) in their locality are of an equivalent quality and range to that which the general public receives from the national health service. Provision is determined by local health needs assessment, which, in partnership with the prison, should take into account the type of accommodation in which prisoners are held.

Nicotine replacement therapy (NRT) is available via prison health services, in the same way that it is in the community, through a general practitioner. This would include those prisoners attending for court appearance from prison.

For each of the financial years 2003-06, the Department provided an additional £500,000 funding to bring smoking cessation services in prisons in England, including NRT, in line with National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence guidelines. Resources are now contained within baseline primary care trust funding.

Strokes

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will increase the availability of (a) acute stroke services available within three hours and (b) other specialist treatment for people suffering from strokes; and if she will make a statement. [143947]

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are in place to ensure that every primary care trust area has a service for diagnosis and treatment of a stroke within three hours of symptom onset; and when she expects this to be in place. [143030]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The rapid diagnosis of stroke and the introduction of thrombolysis (the use of clot-busting drugs) are key challenges for the national health service in its treatment of stroke. This is why the Department is developing a new national stroke strategy for England, which aims to support the NHS to modernise services and deliver the newest treatments for stroke.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what timetable is in place to provide an acute stroke service in every primary care trust area; and if she will make a statement. [142969]

Ms Rosie Winterton: All primary care trusts caring for people who have had a stroke now have a specialist stroke service and 97 per cent. (196 of 203 hospitals) of hospitals in England who treat stroke patients now have a stroke unit (in 2004 only 82 per cent. had a stroke unit).

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the trend in the number of strokes amongst people in England. [143006]

Ms Rosie Winterton: These data are not collected centrally.

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects the national stroke strategy to be published. [145043]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Government are currently developing a new national stroke strategy for England which aims to modernise services and deliver the newest treatments for stroke, and the aim is to publish it this winter, following a full public consultation.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to reduce the number of deaths caused by strokes. [143025]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Stroke mortality is falling. For people under 65, the three year average death rate from stroke has fallen by 23 per cent. over the period from 1993-95 to 2002-04. For people aged 65-75 the death rate has dropped by 30 per cent. over the same period. However, the Government recognise that more needs to be done. This is why we are developing a new national stroke strategy for England which will modernise services and deliver the newest treatments for stroke. The strategy will be published for consultation shortly with the intention of the final version being available by the end of the year.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she plans to take to prevent avoidable deaths from stroke in England; and if she will make a statement. [143946]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Stroke mortality is falling. For people under 65, the three-year average death rate from stroke has fallen by 23 per cent. over the period from 1993-95 to 2002-04. For people aged 65 to 75, the death rate has dropped by 30 per cent. over the same period.

The risk factors which increase an individual's chances of suffering a stroke include smoking, drinking alcohol, poor diet and lack of physical activity. Strokes are also more likely in those who suffer from hypertension and diabetes. Through the public health White Paper "Choosing Health", the Department has set out a programme of action to help improve the health of the public including action on smoking and diet. This builds on existing work such as campaigns on smoking and diet, National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence guidelines on the management of hypertension, points for prevention activities in the general practitioner contract and support for the Blood Pressure Association blood pressure awareness campaigns.

The coronary heart disease and diabetes national service frameworks have also driven forward improvements in primary and secondary prevention of risk factors associated with circulatory disease in general. This includes better control of blood pressure and blood glucose, cholesterol management and the use of aspirin.

The Department is also developing a new national stroke strategy for England which aims to modernise services, not just for those who have had a stroke, but also those at risk of doing so.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will provide funding for research into the prevention and treatment of stroke in people of (a) African Caribbean and (b) South Asian origin. [143972]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Over the last 10 years, the main part of the Department's total expenditure on health research has been devolved to and managed by national health service organisations. Details of individual NHS supported research projects including a number relevant to my hon. Friend's question are available on the national research register at www.dh.gov.uk/research.

The Department's National Institute for Health Research is investing £20 million over five years in the UK Stroke Research Network set up in 2005. The Network is supporting clinical trials and other well designed studies conducted by public and private sector funders, and has adopted the following three studies which involve research into the prevention and treatment of stroke within black and minority ethnic communities:

DNA resource for lacunar stroke

South London ethnicity and stroke study

The South London secondary prevention programme

The Department is also funding the South London Stroke register which assesses the risk of stroke and the natural history of stroke with a focus on ethnicity.

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which NHS trusts in London provide acute stroke services. [143020]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not hold this information centrally. However, the following hospitals took part in the 2006 sentinel audit of stroke services conducted by the Healthcare Commission.

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department has taken to ensure a comprehensive acute (a) stroke service and (b) recovery service in Sutton and Merton Primary Care Trust area. [143009]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This is a local issue. NHS London is working to improve stroke care in London, and this is one of the issues being dealt with by the long-term strategy for London being led by Professor Sir Ara Darzi. The Royal College's National Stroke Guidelines are for a scan to be provided within 24 hours (and within three hours where a thrombolysis service is provided).

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) brain scanners and (b) specialist radiologists are available in Sutton and Merton Primary Care Trust for the diagnosis of acute stroke within three hours of the onset of symptoms. [143153]

Ms Rosie Winterton: NHS London has advised that the majority of Sutton and Merton Primary Care Trust (PCT) patients are treated at St. George's Hospital and St. Helier Hospital, which also provide services for other PCTs. St. Helier has one CT scanner, one MRI scanner and 10 radiologists. St. George's has three CT scanners, and most of the reporting is carried out by five neuro-radiologists.

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many Wimbledon residents are in receipt of treatment for strokes. [143008]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information is not collected in the format requested. The following table shows the number of all diagnoses count of finished consultant episodes with Sutton and Merton PCT as primary care trusts of residence for strokes (which covers the Wimbledon area).

PCT description	Finished consultant episodes (FCE)
Sutton and Merton PCT	1,241

Notes:

All Diagnoses count of episodes

These figures represent a count of all FCEs where the diagnosis was mentioned in any of the 14 (7 prior to 2002-03) diagnosis fields in a HES record.

FCE

An FCE is defined as a period of admitted patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Please note that the figures do not represent the number of patients, as a person may have more than one episode of care within the year.

Ungrossed Data

Figures have not been adjusted for shortfalls in data (i.e. the data are ungrossed).

Surgery: Assessments

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many surgeons in the London Deanery are involved in shortlisting of general surgery candidates for specialist training grades 1-3 within the medical training application service; how many applications are to be considered; how many pages have been photocopied in the process undertaken so far; how many hours of work are estimated to be needed to score each 100 complete forms; and how the required trained assessors will be trained and assessed themselves. [127671]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally. The local selection process is a matter for the local deaneries and units of application.

Transsexuality: Medical Treatments

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what voice therapy is available on the NHS to those wishing to change their gender. [144637]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: It is for primary care trusts in partnership with local stakeholders to commission services in order to meet local needs. This process provides the means for addressing local needs within the health community including the provision of voice therapy on the basis of assessed clinical need.

United Health Group

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place in the Library a copy of the contract between her Department and Channing Wheeler. [138315]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: A copy of Mr. Channing Wheeler's contract of employment will not be placed in the Library on grounds of confidentiality.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Afghanistan: Opium

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the total cost was of the poppy eradication programmes undertaken in Afghanistan by the UK in each year since 2001. [143747]

Dr. Howells: I refer my hon. Friend to the written answer I gave him on 2 November 2006, Official Report, columns 657-658W, and I submit the following updated table that includes the 2006-07 figures.

£ million

Financial year	Total Afghan counter narcotics spend	Eradication
2002-03	23.1	21.2
2003-04	31.3	1.3
2004-05	33.2	2.2
2005-06	[1]92.3	5.7
2006-07	82.0	2.9

[1] The published figure for 2005-06 was given as £92.8 million in the written answer on 2 November 2006.
This was adjusted downwards in 2007, when full information on actual, as opposed to projected, spend became available.

Aung San Suu Kyi

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what new diplomatic steps she plans to take on the imprisonment of Aung San Suu Kyi. [143981]

Mr. McCartney: We have repeatedly condemned the continuing detention of Aung San Suu Kyi. Most recently, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister issued a statement on 19 June marking her 62nd birthday and calling again on the Burmese Government to end her detention under house arrest.

With the UN and other key partners, we will continue to press for an open and inclusive political process in Burma and an improvement in the human rights situation. The release of Aung San Suu Kyi is central to both objectives.

We shall continue to raise our concerns about all human rights abuses, including the detention of Aung San Suu Kyi, with the Burmese Government. On 28 May, I met the Burmese Foreign Minister at the Asia/Europe Foreign Ministers meeting in Hamburg, and called again for the Burmese Government to release Aung San Suu Kyi. The Asia Europe Meeting (ASEM) Chair Statement, endorsed by all ASEM members, also called for the release of Aung San Suu Kyi and urged the Burmese Government to remain constructively engaged with the Association of South East Asian Nations, the UN and the international community.

Bosnia: Depleted Uranium

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how many civilians in (a) Bosnia and (b) Kosovo have been reported as showing signs of depleted uranium contamination during the last 10 years; and if she will make a statement; [143984]

(2) what efforts the Department is making to monitor the effects of depleted uranium on civilians in (a) Bosnia and (b) Kosovo. [143985]

Mr. Hoon: While the UK has not used depleted uranium munitions in the Balkans, we maintain a watching brief on related scientific developments.

The Ministry of Defence carried out depleted uranium environmental monitoring surveys in Kosovo in 2001 and in Bosnia in 2002. Only limited and localised depleted uranium contamination was detected and the reports concluded that there is no foreseeable way in which this could present a radioactive or toxic risk for the environment or human health. These findings are in line with those of the UN environment programme's reports on the Balkans, and, under World Health Organisation recommendations, do not indicate a need for systematic monitoring of the civilian population.

Departments: Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people in her Department have been allowed to work from home for part of the week in the last 12 months; and if she will make a statement on her Department's policy on home working. [143883]

Mr. Hoon: As the information requested by the hon. Member is not held centrally, it could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

All Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) staff are entitled to apply to work flexibly. The Permanent Under-Secretary is fully committed to promoting flexible working across the Department, both at home and overseas, and has recently appointed a member of the FCO Board as the FCO's first champion for flexible working. A growing number of staff at all levels, including senior managers, are working flexibly whether part-time, job sharing, working compressed hours or from home. New technology is being introduced to enable staff to work away from the office. Information on flexible working is available on the FCO intranet and a flexible working network has been established to offer support and guidance to staff working flexibly and those managing flexible workers. The FCO is a member of the working families organisation.

Departments: Manpower

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people granted (a) temporary part-time, (b) temporary full-time, (c) permanent part-time and (d) permanent full-time contracts of employment in her Department in each of the last three years were (i) male, (ii) female, (iii) registered disabled and (iv) aged 55 years or over. [143896]

Mr. Hoon: Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) figures requested by the hon. Member are:

Temporary part-time

We do not hold figures on part-time temporary workers centrally. Collating this information would incur disproportionate cost.

Temporary full-time

Total number of contracts granted = 219—Breakdown by year as follows:

	2004	2005	2006	2007[1]
Number issued to men	47	39	40	35
Number issued to women	10	22	13	13
Number issued to registered disabled	0	0	0	0

[1] To-date

Permanent part-time

Total number of contracts granted = 17—Breakdown by year as follows:

	2004	2005	2006	2007[1]
Number issued to men	0	0	0	3
Number issued to women	2	1	2	8
Number issued to registered disabled	0	0	0	1

[1] To-date

Permanent full-time

Total number of contracts granted = 705—Breakdown by year as follows:

	2004	2005	2006	2007
Number issued to men	75	88	113	98
Number issued to women	47	48	104	99
Number issued to registered disabled	8	6	4	15

[1] To-date

The FCO does not hold readily accessible data on contracts of employment granted to those aged 55 and over, separated into temporary part-time, temporary fall-time, permanent part-time and permanent full-time. Collating this information would incur disproportionate cost. However, the following figures are available for all contract-types combined issued to those aged 55 and over in each of the last three years:

	2004	2005	2006	2007[1]
Number issued those aged 55 and over	37	45	50	19

[1] To-date

Departments: Marketing

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which advertising and marketing campaigns were run by (a) her Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last five years; which external agencies were involved; and what the cost was of each campaign. [144613]

Mr. Hoon: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) does not keep a central record of amounts spent on advertising and marketing campaigns. The information required to answer this question could be obtained only by requiring individual budget holders in the FCO and its agencies (FCO Services and Wilton Park) to examine all invoices for the last five years. This could be done only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Official Cars

Mr. Simon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what make and model of car (a) she and (b) each Minister in her Department selected as their official ministerial car; and what criteria were used when making the decision in each case. [141998]

Margaret Beckett: I refer my hon. Friend to the written answer given to him by the Minister of State, Department for Transport, my hon. Friend the Member for South Thanet (Dr. Ladyman) on 14 June 2007, Official Report, columns 1268-69W.

Departments: Official Residences

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will list the official ministerial residences allocated to Ministers in her Department; and what the total annual cost is of running each. [141956]

Margaret Beckett: I refer the right. hon. Member to the reply my right. hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave to her on 14 June 2007, Official Report, column 1263W.

On costs, I refer the right. hon. Member to the reply my right. hon. Friend the then Foreign Secretary gave to the hon. Member for North East Hertfordshire (Mr. Heald) on 14 February 2006, Official Report, columns 1905-06W.

Departments: Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff in her Department received bonus payments in 2007; what proportion of the total workforce they represented; what the total amount of bonuses paid has been; what the largest single payment has been; and if she will make a statement. [143087]

Mr. Hoon: The processes for determining annual pay and bonus awards for Foreign and Commonwealth Office staff in the senior management structure and in the delegated grades follow a timetable, which reaches a conclusion in late July. We will not therefore be in a position to supply the figures requested until August.

I will write to the hon. Member as soon as this information is available and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Departments: Trade Unions

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many meetings (a) she and (b) her Department's Ministers held with trade union representatives in 2006. [128755]

Margaret Beckett: Ministers meet a large number of trade union representatives in the course of their official duties. These include face to face meetings, meetings where they are part of a delegation or on the sidelines of speeches or other official engagements.

Obtaining the information required for the time period specified by the right. hon. Member would incur disproportionate cost.

Departments: Travel Agents

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much her Department and its agencies paid in travel agencies' fees in each year since 1997. [139907]

Mr. Hoon: The fees paid to our Travel Management Company (American Express) since 1997 are as follows:

1997-98	611,081
1998-99	630,824
1999-2000	649,841
2000-01	678,138
2001-02	760,047
2002-03	754,430
2003-04	757,352
2004-05	749,923
2005-06	792,828
2006-07	836,196

Diplomatic Service: Deportation

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many diplomats were asked to leave London following activities incompatible with their diplomatic status in each of the last 10 years; and from which country's embassy each was expelled. [143510]

Mr. Hoon: No diplomats have been asked to leave London for "activities incompatible with their diplomatic status" in the past 10 years.

Egypt: Human Rights

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the human rights situation in Egypt. [144024]

Dr. Howells: We continue to have serious concerns about certain aspects of the human rights situation in Egypt. We regularly raise these and concerns about other issues, including religious freedom, with Egyptian officials both bilaterally and with EU partners. We hope that Egypt's election to the UN Human Rights Council will encourage progress.

Hamas

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) direct and (b) indirect discussions her officials held with the Hamas leadership in the Palestinian Territory between March and 16 June 2007. [144227]

Dr. Howells: We have not met with any members of Hamas, including when they were part of the National Unity government, to discuss political issues. To discuss the Alan Johnston case, our Consul-General in Jerusalem met Ismail Haniya, the Hamas Prime Minister and Hamas Government spokesman, Ghazi Hamad. Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials have also met with Ghazi Hamad in London. No other issues were discussed.

As the UK has made clear, we are willing to work with those who are committed to the Quartet principles: renunciation of violence; recognition of Israel; and acceptance of previous agreements and obligations, including the Roadmap.

Human Trafficking: Conferences

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will list the invitees to the forthcoming conference at Wilton Park entitled Human Trafficking: how best to stem the flow; and what the cost of the conference is to each attendee. [144053]

Dr. Howells: The information requested constitutes personal data and we do not have the consent of the individuals concerned to disclose such information. However, the conference programme, with the names of confirmed speakers, the cost of participation, as well as general information and reports of conferences is available on Wilton Park's website:

(http://www.wiltonpark.org.uk/documents/conferences/WP854/pdfs/WP854prog.pdf)

Iran: Terrorism

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received on the Iranian bank Bank Saderat being used by the Government of Iran to transfer money to terrorist groups in the Middle East; what assessment she has made of those reports; and if she will make a statement. [143777]

Margaret Beckett: The Government are aware that the United States Government identified Bank Saderat in a press statement of 8 September 2006 as being involved in the transfer of funds to

"Hizballah and other terrorist organizations", and that the bank was being

"cut off from all access to the US financial systems, direct or indirect".

We are keeping the situation under review.

Iraq: Peace Keeping Operations

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made since July 2006 towards achieving the priorities and aims of rule of law development in the Iraqi provinces of (a) Al Basrah, (b) Al Muthanna, (c) Dhi Qar and (d) Maysan; what (i) human and (ii) financial resources the UK Government has committed to this development; and if she will make a statement. [132519]

Margaret Beckett: In Dhi Qar, Muthanna and Maysan security responsibility has now all been transferred to the Iraqi authorities. Until late 2006, British police advisers were mentoring and advising police officers in Al Muthana, Dhi Qar and Maysan. Provincial Reconstruction Teams (PRT) continue to offer support, but they are run by coalition allies rather than the UK. No UK financial resources are currently committed to support the rule of law in these provinces.

In Basra, the Multinational Division (South East) Security Sector Reform team, the consulate's civilian police and prisons teams and the PRT work with the Iraqi police, prison service and judiciary to support the rule of law in Basra. Over 80 per cent. of Basra's police stations have been assessed as largely or fully capable of carrying out basic policing duties, a significant increase on the July 2006 figure. The prisons adviser is training local prison officers and advising on the recruitment of new prison officers to staff a new central prison in Basra. The PRT is building the investigative skills of judges and others involved in the judicial process. The PRT is also assisting with the design and construction of an additional courthouse for Basra.

The results of the whole effort can be seen in the improvements in specialist police units, the action taken against some former police officers accused of abuse, and the building projects under way to improve the infrastructure.

The UK provides three staff to work solely on the rule of law with the Basra PRT, 31 police officers and former police officers, and one HM Prison Service officer. The broader military efforts are not included in the estimated cost of £18 million for our rule of law activities in Basra for the current financial year.

Iraq: Politics and Government

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) pursuant to the answer of 12 June 2007, Official Report, column 982W, on Iraq: politics and Government, how many applications for assistance the Government received in each month since March 2004 from (a) current and (b) former Iraqi employees; how many of these applications were (i) approved and (ii) rejected; what percentage of those approved applications resulted in the granting of refugee status and admission to the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement; [144609]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 12 June 2007, Official Report, column 982W, on Iraq: politics and Government, what assistance measures are offered to the former and current Iraqi employees whose applications for assistance have been approved; and if she will make a statement; [144610]

(3) pursuant to the answer of 12 June 2007, Official Report, column 982W, on Iraq: politics and Government, how many applications for assistance the Government received in each month since March 2003 from current and former Iraqi employees at the British Government embassies, consulates, missions or offices in (a) Iraq, (b) Baghdad, (c) Basra, (d) Syria, (e) Jordan and (f) Egypt; and if she will make a statement. [144611]

Dr. Howells: As I said in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham Selly Oak (Lynne Jones) on 24 May 2007, Official Report, column 1418W the Foreign and Commonwealth Office does not hold a central record of applications for assistance. In order to answer these questions accurately officials at the relevant posts would be required to examine all their records since 2003, which would incur disproportionate cost.

As I said in my response to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham Selly Oak (Lynne Jones) on 7 June 2007, Official Report, columns 645-46W, in line with our policy worldwide we do not comment on the substance of individual immigration or consular cases and all applications are dealt with on a case-by-case basis.

Iraq: Turkey

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of Turkish troops entering Kurdish areas of Iraq; what discussions she has had with her (a) Turkish, (b) Iraqi and (c) US counterparts on this issue; and if she will make a statement. [142423]

Margaret Beckett: We are aware of counter-terrorist operations by the Turkish security forces close to Turkey's border with northern Iraq. This is usual at this time of year when the Partiya Karkerên Kurdistan (PKK) steps up its terrorist activities. A series of PKK attacks have struck military and civilian targets in Turkey recently, causing a significant number of fatalities. We utterly condemn the attacks carried out by the PKK, as we do all acts of terrorism.

The Turkish and Iraqi Governments have denied recent media reports of Turkish troops entering northern Iraq. We have no evidence to the contrary.

We encourage Turkey to work with the Iraqi Government and the Kurdish regional government to address the PKK presence in northern Iraq. We welcome the ongoing trilateral co-operation between Turkey, Iraq and the US; with each of whom we discuss this issue.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received of Turkish troops having undertaken cross-border military operations in Northern Iraq; what representations she has made to her Turkish counterpart on those reports; and if she will make a statement. [142598]

Margaret Beckett: The Turkish and Iraqi governments have confirmed that no incursions into northern Iraq by Turkish security forces have taken place. We continue to follow the situation closely through our Missions in Ankara, Baghdad and Erbil and remain in close touch with the Turkish and Iraqi governments.

We are aware of counter-terrorist operations by the Turkish security forces close to Turkey's border with northern Iraq. This is usual at this time of year when the Partiya Karkeren Kurdistan (PKK) steps up its terrorist activities. A series of PKK attacks have struck military and civilian targets in Turkey recently, causing a significant number of fatalities. We utterly condemn the attacks carried out by the PKK, as we do all acts of terrorism.

Iraq: USA

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the proposals by the United States to establish a long term military presence in Iraq; what discussions she has had with her US counterpart on this issue; and if she will make a statement. [142424]

Margaret Beckett: We maintain a constant dialogue with the US Administration on the security situation in Iraq, and our shared plans and strategies to respond to it. At present, this dialogue is focused on working to reduce the level of violence in Iraq and creating the conditions necessary for the transfer of responsibility for security to the Iraqi authorities in Basra province.

Khmer Rouge

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when she expects the surviving leaders of the Khmer Rouge to be (a) charged and (b) put on trial. [144481]

Dr. Howells: A Plenary Session in Phnom Penh of national and international judicial officers unanimously adopted The Internal Rules of Procedure for the Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia on 12 June. This significant step paves the way for the process of holding fair and transparent trials.

Judicial officers, in a joint statement on 13 June, stated that it was their understanding that co-prosecutors would shortly file their first introductory submission. Co- investigating judges can then begin the judicial process. Whilst there is no current timetable for the trial phase, we currently envisage the trial process starting in the first half of 2008. Both the Cambodian Government and the UN are aware of the urgency of starting these trials and are working hard to do this as soon as possible.

The UK will continue to follow developments closely in the coming months.

Kosovo: Peace Keeping Operations

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the progress of plans to replace NATO's KFOR mission in Kosovo with a European Union mission; what she expects the UK's (a) financial and (b) military contribution to that mission to be; and if she will make a statement. [144364]

Mr. Hoon: There are presently no plans to replace NATO's Kosovo Force with an EU mission. Following implementation of UN special envoy Ahtisaari's comprehensive proposals for Kosovo's future status, it is envisaged that NATO will provide the international military presence in Kosovo. Separately, there will be a European Security and Defence Policy (ESDP) mission in the area of policing and rule of law.

An EU planning team is in place in Kosovo and is carrying out the necessary planning and preparations for the ESDP mission. But the UK expects to maintain its personnel contribution at or around that currently provided to the UN Mission in Kosovo (circa 80 personnel) and will contribute around 17 per cent. of the common costs of the ESDP mission from the Common Foreign and Security Policy budget.

Kosovo: United Nations Security Council

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of progress towards securing a new United Nations Security Council resolution on Kosovo; and if she will make a statement. [144367]

Mr. Hoon: Intensive negotiations are continuing in the UN Security Council in New York. We are working to achieve a resolution paving the way for implementation of the Ahtisaari proposals as soon as possible.

On 18 June, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed Kosovo at the EU General Affairs and External Relations Council. The Council confirmed its support for UN Special Envoy Martti Ahtisaari and reiterated its view that his comprehensive proposals provide the basis for the settlement of the Kosovo issue by a new resolution of the UN Security Council.

Members: Correspondence

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions her Department has had with the Cabinet Office on the target of 20 working days for replying to correspondence from hon. Members. [143317]

Margaret Beckett: Having checked with my officials I can confirm there is no record of discussions between the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Cabinet Office regarding the target of 20 working days for replying to correspondence from hon. Members.

Middle East: Peace Negotiations

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received on recent progress of the 2002 Arab Peace Initiative. [144025]

Dr. Howells: The Arab League's re-endorsement of the 2002 Beirut Declaration at the Arab Summit in Riyadh is a welcome step. It offers the prospect of normal relations between Israel and the Arab world. The Arab League has a key role to play in promoting reconciliation between the Israelis and Palestinians and moving forward the peace process.

In its statement on 30 May, the Quartet (EU, US, UN and Russia) noted its positive meeting with the Arab League in Sharm al-Sheikh on May 4, and looked forward to continued engagement with the Arab states. It welcomed the intention of the Arab League to engage Israel on the 2002 Arab League initiative and Israeli receptiveness to such engagement. The Quartet encouraged continued and expanded Arab contacts with Israel, and Israeli action to address concerns raised in the April 18 Arab League Follow-up Committee meeting, including a cessation of settlement expansion and the removal of illegal outposts, as called for in the Roadmap.

Israeli Foreign Minister Livni met President Mubarak and the Egyptian and Jordanian Foreign Ministers in Cairo on 10 May to discuss subsequent action. The Quartet principals agreed to meet in the region with members of the Arab League to follow up on the Arab Peace Initiative and efforts to advance the regional track.

We support the Arab League's engagement with the parties and welcome the meetings since the re-endorsement of the Arab League Initiative. We hope that this will create confidence between the parties to re-start negotiations.

Morocco: Politics and Government

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the Moroccan initiative for autonomy for Western Sahara; and if she will make a statement. [143081]

Margaret Beckett: The UK regards the status of Western Sahara as undetermined, pending UN efforts to find a solution. To this end, the UK fully supports the efforts of the UN Secretary-General and his personal envoy to the Western Sahara, Peter Van Walsum, to assist the parties to achieve a just, lasting and mutually acceptable political solution, which will provide for the self determination of the people of Western Sahara.

On 30 April the UN Security Council adopted UN Security Council Resolution 1754, which took note of Morocco's proposal presented to the UN Secretary-General on 11 April, and called for both sides to enter into negotiations without preconditions.

The UK welcomes the prospect of negotiations between Morocco, the Polisario and their neighbours to be hosted by the UN on 18-19 June. The UK continues to support the process.

North Korea: Nuclear Reactors

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when she expects International Atomic Energy Agency monitors (a) to arrive in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) and (b) to begin inspection of the Yongbyon nuclear reactor; and what recent discussions she has held with (i) the United States, (ii) South Korea, (iii) China, (iv) Russia and (v) Japan on methods of applying pressure to the DPRK regime to ensure the Yongbyon nuclear reactor is closed. [145097]

Dr. Howells: Following an invitation on 16 June from the Director-General of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea's (DPRK) General Department of Atomic Energy, the Director-General of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), Dr ElBaradei, replied on 18 June, noting that an IAEA team, headed by Deputy Director-General for Safeguards, Mr Olli Heinonen, would visit Pyongyang in the week commencing 25 June.

I understand that the letter of invitation from the DPRK has asked for the IAEA delegation to visit Pyongyang to discuss the modalities for verification and monitoring by the IAEA of the shutdown of the Yongbyon nuclear facility.

Ensuring the closure of the Yongbyon reactor is an issue for discussion amongst members of the six party talks. Although the UK is not a member of the talks, we fully support the process and regularly keep in touch with partners, including through our embassies. We will continue to urge the DPRK to fulfil the commitments it has entered into under the February agreement, including the closure of the Yongbyon nuclear reactor, as well as comply with UN Security Council Resolution 1718 and resume its obligations under the Nuclear Non-Proliferation treaty.

Nuclear Weapons: Proliferation

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken to widen international participation in the Proliferation Security Initiative; and if she will make a statement. [143778]

Margaret Beckett: The UK has been actively involved in outreach activities for the Proliferation Security Initiative (PSI), which now includes over 80 countries. We continue to use suitable bilateral or multilateral lobbying opportunities to encourage other countries to endorse the PSI Statement of Interdiction Principles. For example, last year a UK Government team made a useful PSI outreach visit to Vietnam and in March, UK officials were involved in an Asia-Pacific PSI Outreach Forum organised in New Zealand.

Palestinians: Children

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when she expects to write to the hon. Member for Thurrock about the visit to the UK by children from Palestine hosted by the charity Bethlehem Link; and if she will make a statement. [144643]

Dr. Howells: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, replied on 15 June.

Palestinians: Immigration

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received on the operations of the (a) EU Police Mission in the Palestinian Territories and (b) EU Border Assistance Mission at Rafah crossing point in light of recent events in Gaza; and if she will make a statement. [144359]

Dr. Howells: At the EU General Affairs and External Relations Council in Luxembourg on 18 June, EU Foreign Ministers agreed to support the Palestinian Civilian Police through the resumption of the EU Police Mission for the Palestinian Territories and to resume the EU Border Assistance Mission Rafah. We support this.

We have received reports on the safety of officials at the Rafah crossing point, They have now been safely evacuated to Jerusalem.

Palestinians: Overseas Aid

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contribution the UK made towards the review of the Temporary International Mechanism; and if she will make a statement. [142779]

Margaret Beckett: We have worked closely with the European Commission and the World Bank to draft terms of reference for the evaluation, and to ensure that the review examines the linkages between both the European Commission and the World Bank with respect to the Temporary International Mechanism. Department for International Development officials in Jerusalem and Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials in Brussels have had a substantial engagement with the review teams and continue to work with them to ensure the final report is of a high quality. The final report is due to be presented at the end of the month.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) financial, (b) diplomatic, (c) military and (d) humanitarian support the Government gave the elected Palestinian Hamas-led government in the last six months; and if she will make a statement. [145013]

Dr. Howells: We did not provide any financial, diplomatic, military and humanitarian support to the Hamas-led government.

We have continued to provide support to the Palestinian people. The EU set up the 'Temporary International Mechanism' (TIM) in 2006, which provided support directly to the Palestinian people, bypassing the Hamas led government. This has been extended for a further three months until September. The EU gave €680 million to the Palestinians in 2006, more than in any previous year. €200 million of this was transferred through the UK-inspired TIM. The UK has also provided £15 million through the TIM. This has supported Palestinian front line health services, allowances for government workers and the operation, maintenance and repair of water, sanitation and electricity services in Gaza and the West Bank

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) financial, (b) diplomatic, (c) military and (d) humanitarian support the Government is providing to the Palestinian Fatah movement; and if she will make a statement. [145016]

Dr. Howells: We have provided no financial, diplomatic, military or humanitarian support to Fatah. We have provided some limited media training for Palestinian political parties including Fatah.

Palestinians: Politics and Government

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the potential impact of the dissolution of the Palestinian unity government and the formation of a new government on plans for Palestinian security sector transformation; and if she will make a statement. [144358]

Dr. Howells: We regret the announcement that the National Unity Government (NUG) has been dissolved, but understand that Hamas' recent actions left Palestinian President Abbas with few alternatives. We, along with the EU and Quartet (EU, US, UN and Russia), support President Abbas' decision to dissolve the NUG and declare a state of emergency.

We look forward to working with Prime Minister Fayyad and his ministerial team for the benefit of all Palestinians. Prime Minister Fayyad has said his priorities are restoring security and improving the economic and humanitarian situation—we share those goals and will continue to work with the Palestinian Authority towards them.

We remain committed to security sector reform and will continue to work with President Abbas and Prime Minister Fayyad to strengthen the Palestinian security forces. We are currently considering how best to do this, given recent events.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment the UK Government have made of the (a) size and (b) military capability of the (i) Hamas Executive Force and (ii) Izzedine al-Qassam Brigades in Gaza; and if she will make a statement. [144362]

Dr. Howells: In April 2006 the then Hamas-affiliated Palestinian Interior Minister, Siad Siyam, established an Executive Force. By January 2007, the force was believed to have as many as 5,000 members, Hamas had announced its intention to increase this figure to some 12,000 and establish a 1,500 strong force in the West Bank.

Hamas's military wing—known as the Izzedine al Qassam Brigades—was founded in 1992 and has been responsible for numerous attacks on Israel, including suicide bombings. The group is likely to be able to draw on thousands of men as required. Hamas militants in both forces appear well disciplined and capable of conducting mobile urban warfare, rocket and improvised explosive devices bomb attacks.

Sanctions: EC Action

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 4 June 2007, Official Report, columns 244-5W, on sanctions: EC Action, which geographical working group reviews and evaluates EU sanctions against Iran; how often the group meets; and to whom the group reports. [143951]

Dr. Howells: Any evaluation of the impact of sanctions on Iran would be carried out by the geographical working group covering the Middle East, Committee on the Middle East and Gulf (COMEM). COMEM can meet as required and the UK is represented by officials from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office based in Brussels. COMEM also meets every three months when representatives from EU capitals attend, COMEM reports to the Political and Security Council and the Committee of Permanent Representatives, (known as Coreper). Any formal legal review of the sanctions will be undertaken by the Foreign Relations Counsellors Working Party.

Saudi Arabia: Torture

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether any British citizens have been tortured in Saudi Arabia since 1 January 1997; and if she will make a statement. [144119]

Dr. Howells: The UK unreservedly condemns the use of torture and works hard with international partners to eradicate this abhorrent practice. Although the Foreign and Commonwealth Office is not itself in a position conclusively to confirm or deny allegations of torture in Saudi Arabia, we do raise such allegations with the Saudi authorities. We have raised at least nine allegations of torture with the Saudi authorities since 1997.

Somalia: Peace Keeping Operations

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment has been made of the merits of establishing a UN force for Somalia; and what the UK policy is on the matter. [143779]

Mr. McCartney: The Government strongly support the current African Union Mission to Somalia (AMISOM) but also support the need for the UN Security Council to consider fully the merits of establishing a UN force in Somalia, to succeed AMISOM. We sponsored UN Security Council Resolution 1744, adopted unanimously by the Security Council on 20 February, and fully supported the Council's Presidential Statement of 30 April. Both emphasised the need to consider establishing a UN force in Somalia to succeed AMISOM and requested the Secretary-General to undertake contingency work and prepare options for the Security Council to consider. We expect the Secretary-General to report back to the Council within the next month, after which we will assess the merits of a force, in consultation with our UN partners. We supported this approach as Co-Chairman of the International Contact Group for Somalia when it met in London on 6 June.

Sudan: Armed Conflict

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the Answer of 10 May 2007, Official Report, columns 400-1W, on Sudan: armed conflict, what measures to allow better air monitoring of the violence in Darfur have been proposed by the UK; and if she will make a statement. [142586]

Margaret Beckett: We are considering a number of measures to improve air monitoring in Darfur, from enhanced monitoring on the ground to a no fly zone. We need to assess the logistical challenges of implementation and impact on the humanitarian effort of any measures. We are working with partners in the UN Security Council to press both the African Union and the Panel of Experts to notify the UN Sanctions Committee of any instances of offensive military flights in Darftir.

Sudan: Peace Keeping Operations

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what agreements have been reached with the government of Sudan on when the United Nations/African Union heavy support package will be in place; and if she will make a statement. [142697]

Margaret Beckett: The Government of Sudan gave their full agreement on 16 April to the deployment of the UN Heavy Support Package, The UN Department for Peacekeeping Operations is now responsible for organising its deployment. We are pressing them to ensure that this happens as soon as possible.

We will monitor its deployment to ensure the Government of Sudan do not block it. If the Government do not co-operate, we will be prepared to introduce tougher measures.

Weapons: Finance

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Financial Action Task Force is expected to complete its examination of the risks involved in weapons of mass destruction proliferation finance and to review its mandate, as called for by the G7 Finance Ministers in Essen in February 2007; and if she will make a statement. [143775]

Ed Balls: I have been asked to reply.

The Financial Action Task Force is due to complete a review of its mandate by the end of June 2008. Its examination of the risks involved in weapons of mass destruction proliferation finance is in progress. There is no formal deadline for completing this work.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Bereavement Benefits

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was (a) overpaid and (b) underpaid in bereavement benefits due to (i) fraud and (ii) error in each of the last five years. [133912]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available in the format requested. For details of the amount of overpayment in bereavement benefit and widow's benefits combined, due to official error, I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) on 18 April 2007, Official Report, columns 697-700W.

There are no reliable estimates of the amount of underpayment in these benefits.

Carers' Allowances: Leeds

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Leeds West (a) receive and (b) are entitled to carers' benefits. [143674]

Mrs. McGuire: The available information is in the following table.

Number of people in Leeds West parliamentary constituency in receipt of and entitled to carers' benefits—November 2006

	In receipt	Entitled
Carer's allowance (CA)	660	1,080
Income support with a carer premium	370	370

Notes:
1. Figures are rounded to the nearest 10.
2. Recipients of IS carer's premium may also be entitled to or receiving CA.
3. CA recipient totals show the number of people in receipt of an allowance, and excludes people with entitlement where the payment has been suspended.
4. CA entitled totals show the number of people who are entitled to receive CA, including those who receive no actual payment.

DWP Information Directorate 100 per cent. WPLS

The vast majority of those entitled to but not receiving CA are pensioners and are likely to be receiving state pension and may receive the carer's premium in pension credit. Only one benefit at a time can be paid for the same purpose. While the circumstances that give rise to entitlement to CA and the state pension are different, both benefits are designed to provide a degree of replacement for lost or forgone income.

Child Support Agency: Manpower

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many staff were employed by the Child Support Agency in each quarter since January 1997; what the estimated numbers are for each quarter until 2012; and if he will make a statement; [141934]

(2) if he will make a statement on plans to reduce Child Support Agency (CSA) staff numbers; and whether such plans will be affected by CSA performance against targets. [141935]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 21 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions regarding the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many staff were employed by the Child Support Agency in each quarter since January 1997; what the estimated numbers are for each quarter until 2012; [141934]

and

If he will make a statement on plans to reduce Child Support Agency (CSA) staff numbers; and whether such plans will be affected by CSA Performance against targets. [141935]

Such information as is available is in the attached table. However, we cannot currently provide anticipated people numbers beyond March 2008 as staffing profiles have yet to be agreed across the Department.

I have provided the average people employed for each financial year from 1997/98 through to 2000/01, as we no longer retain information on a quarterly basis for this period. The information provided is sourced from the Agency Annual Report and Accounts and is set out in the attached Table 1.

The Agency is committed to meeting both the Departmentally agreed headcount target of 9547 by March 2008 and the Secretary of State performance targets for the coming year.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Child Support Agency: Marketing

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many whole-time equivalent staff are responsible for (a) brand management and (b) marketing at the Child Support Agency; and what the cost was of those staff in the last 12 months. [137978]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 21 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many whole-time equivalent staff are responsible for (a) brand management and (b) marketing at the Child Support Agency: and what the cost was of those staff in the last 12 months. [137978]

The Agency uses the Department for Work and Pensions accounting system. While the accounting system does not have the functionality to report separately the discreet activities and day-to-day costs associated with either marketing or brand management, we can identify five full-time equivalent staff, at a range of grades, responsible for marketing at the Child Support Agency.

The estimated cost for 2006/07 for these people, who are responsible for a range of activity including developing the Agency's external communication channels such as the website and planning the current Child Maintenance Enforcement Campaigns, was £125, 143.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Child Support Agency: Stationery

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much the Child Support Agency spent on (a) stationery, (b) business cards and (c) building signs in each year since 1997. [137974]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 21 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how much the Child Support Agency spent on (a) stationery (b) business cards (c) building signs—in each year since 1997. [137974]

The Child Support Agency is an Executive Agency of the Department for Work and Pensions (and prior to 8 June 2001 formed part of the Department of Social Security). The Agency uses the Departments accounting system to record and report expenditure.

In response to your question:

Stationery—the Department's accounting system combines spend on both printing and stationery. I am therefore unable to provide a breakdown of stationery only. The total costs for printing and stationery are included in the table below.

Business Cards—the Department for Work and Pensions accounting system does not enable us to provide an analysis of spending on these products. As such, the spend on business cards in included in the table.

Building signs—the Department for Work and Pensions accounting system does not enable us to provide an analysis of spending on these products. As such, the information is not available in the requested format.

The printing and stationery costs included in the table all cover posters, leaflets, letters, printing supplies, paper, pens etc. used by the Child Support agency in a given year. The costs for printing and stationery over the last six years as follows:

Financial year	Printing and stationery (£ million)
2001-02	1.5
2002-03	2.2
2003-04	1.8
2004-05	1.8
2005/06	2.1
2006-07	2.2
Total	11.6

The Department retains records for six years in accordance with its statutory obligations, therefore information is not available on the earlier years.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Child Support Agency: Training

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what training courses were attended by Child Support Agency staff in each of the last three years; and what the cost was of each course to his Department; [133918]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 26 February 2007, Official Report, column 1064W, on departmental training, how much was spent on courses for staff in the Child Support Agency in (a) stress awareness, (b) self development, (c) self awareness, (d) creative thinking, (e) curriculum vitae writing, (f) running staff clubs, (g) facilitation skills, (h) non-verbal behaviour, (i) intervention skills and (j) being a change agent in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and how many staff attended these courses. [136020]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty dated, 21 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of state promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what training courses were attended by Child Support Agency staff in the last three years; and what the cost was of each course to his Department. [133918]

You also asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to the Answer of 26th February 2007, Official Report, column 1064W, on departmental training how much was spent on courses for staff in the Child support Agency in (a) stress awareness, (b) self development, (c) self awareness, (d) creative thinking, (e) curriculum vitae writing, (f) running staff clubs, (g) facilitation skills, (h) non-verbal behaviour, (i) intervention skills and (j) being a change agent in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and how many staff attended these courses. [136020]

The Agency's training programme is aimed at making Agency people experts in their specialist business areas in order to effectively deliver more money to more children and improve client service. The Agency offers a wide range of training programmes, including technical training, work towards professionally accredited qualifications, and personal effectiveness training, including some of the courses specified above.

This training is delivered using a number of methods, including our own Learning Resource Centre, Departmental e-learning courses that are available to all our people from their work station and accessed via the Department's Intranet, and external facilitator led training. Varying degrees of information are available for the training offered by each of these sources. Unfortunately, I am therefore unable to provide full detail of all Agency training over the last three years.

Such information as is available is set out in the attached tables.

In relation to the specific training courses you have requested details for, the number of training courses provided via the Learning Resource Centre over the past 3 years is set out in Table 1. However, the information provided is restricted to the number of variable length sessions delivered in the years specified, as information on the number of people participating in the training and the cost to the Agency of these training courses is not available in the format requested.

I am unable to price information for the number of Departmental e-learning courses undertaken by Agency people. There is no cost associated with accessing Departmental e-learning, beyond the time spent taking these courses and their initial development. The Department covered all the developmental costs of these courses and the direct cost to the Agency of each course is nil.

The number of Agency people undertaking the Department's external facilitator led course and the cost of these course is set out in Table 2.

Finally, Tables 3 and 4 set out the number of technical skills training courses attended by Agency people in the last three years. Training set out in Table 4 supports the implementation of the Agency's Operational Improvement Plan, which focuses on delivering more money to more children. Unfortunately, information on the cost for each of these courses in not readily available.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many deduction of earnings orders the Child Support Agency had in place in each month since January 2000; and if he will make a statement. [141095]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 21 June 2007:

[1] Robust information covering the period February 2003 to July 2004 is not available.

Notes:

1. Numbers are rounded to the nearest hundred.
2. The table includes deduction from earnings orders (DEOs) and deduction from earnings requests (DERs). DERs are the equivalent of DEOs when a non-resident parent is a member of the Armed Forces.
3. The table above includes those old-scheme cases with either a Full Maintenance Assessment or an Interim Maintenance Assessment; plus those new-scheme cases with either a Full Maintenance Calculation, or a Default Maintenance Decision. New-scheme cases being processed clerically are excluded from this analysis.
4. Data prior to March 2003 are only available quarterly. March 2007 is the most recent available.
5. The volume of deductions from earnings orders/requests (DEO/Rs) decreased to 158,000 in December 2006. This sudden fall was caused by a fix to the new computer system to suspend 8,500 ineffective DEOs on cases where employers had informed the Agency that the non-resident parent on that case was no longer in their employment. These DEOs have been suspended and the Agency put together a recovery plan to trace those non-resident parents and restore compliance, through DEOs where appropriate.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what performance targets he has set for Vertex to respond to cases referred to the Child Support Agency Bolton office by or on behalf of hon. Members; and if he will make a statement; [141304]

(2) if he will list the (a) performance indicators and (b) performance targets which he has set for Vertex for its management of the Bolton office of the Child Support Agency. [142317]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 12 June 2007]: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 21 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what performance targets he has set for Vertex to respond to cases referred to the Child Support Agency Bolton office by or on behalf of hon. Members; and if he will make a statement. [141304]

and;

You also asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, if he will list the (a) performance indicators and (b) performance targets which he has set for Vertex for its management of the Bolton office of the Child Support Agency. [142317]

Although the agency has contracted out the maintenance of its clerical cases to Vertex Data Science Ltd, the performance targets set by the Secretary of State apply to all Child Support cases regardless of whether they are clerical or not.

The Secretary of State targets for the current operation year are:

Number of children—By 31 March 2008, maintenance will be collected or have been arranged by the Agency on behalf of 720,000 children.

Total Maintenance Collection (Arrears)—Collect or have arranged £970 million in child maintenance between 1 April 2007 and 31 March 2008; of which at least £120 million maintenance will be arrears.

Maintenance Outcomes—By 31 March 2008, in 66% of cases across both the new and old schemes in which a liability to pay maintenance exists, the non-resident parent has either made a payment via the collection service or a Maintenance Direct arrangement is in place.

Uncleared applications to the New scheme—By 31 March 2008, the volume of uncleared new scheme applications will be no more than 140,000.

In addition, the Agency's Client Service Standards, including responding to hon. Members correspondence applies to cases maintained by the Bolton office. We aim to reply to letters and either resolve complaints, or agree next steps, within three weeks of receiving them.

Vertex Data Science Ltd performance against these measures is continually reviewed to ensure they are supporting the Agency's aim to deliver more money for more children.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimates he has made of the number of children who would be lifted out of relative poverty if all non-resident parents were fully compliant with the payment of child support. [143587]

Mr. Plaskitt: No estimate has been made of the number of children who would be lifted out of relative poverty if all non-resident parents were fully compliant with the payment of child support. To produce a robust estimate we would require information on the position in the income distribution of parents with care where the non-resident parent in the case is not fully compliant. This information is not available for all the relevant parents with care.

Community Care Grants: Lancashire

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average Social Fund Community Care Grant award was in West Lancashire constituency in (a) 2005-06 and (b) 2006-07. [143517]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the following table.

Lancashire West social fund operating unit

Notes:
1. Data are not available by parliamentary constituency but only by social fund operating unit.
2. West Lancashire parliamentary constituency is part of the social fund operating unit of Lancashire West. (This covered the same area as the Jobcentre Plus district of Lancashire West until 31 March 2006.)
3. Figures do not include awards made after review.
4. Figures have been rounded to the nearest £1.

Departments: Advertising

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was spent on advertising by (a) the Department and (b) its non-departmental agencies in each of the last five years. [139524]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department runs a number of promotional campaigns aimed at increasing awareness of rights and responsibilities. The table details spend on advertising campaigns run by the Department in each of the last five complete financial years.

Government policies and programmes affect the lives of millions of people and in order for them to work they must be communicated effectively. But that also has to be done with cost efficiency in mind and there are strict rules to ensure value for money on Government advertising.

[1] The table does not include the following as the information is not held centrally and to obtain it would incur disproportionate cost:
spend by non-departmental bodies for which the Department is responsible;
details of highly localised publicity activity by the Department's customer-facing businesses; recruitment or procurement advertising;
Jobcentre Plus publicity during 2002 to 2003 as at that time allocations sat with individual policy teams and within regional budgets.

The information in the table relates to media buying expenditure only, which forms the bulk of departmental publicity expenditure, but excludes direct mail, public relations, production and other costs. All figures are exclusive of VAT.

Departments: Correspondence

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what targets have been set for replies to letters from his Department's offices; what targets have been set in Kent; and which of these targets have been met in each of the last 24 months. [141421]

Mr. Plaskitt: Each of the agencies within the Department records correspondence from customers in a different way, therefore I have listed the performance information for each agency separately.

The target for replying to correspondence from members of the public and their representatives is to reply to 100 per cent. of letters in 15 working days. The target for replying to correspondence from members of the public and their representatives is to reply to 100 per cent. of letters in 10 working days. I am unable to tell you how HSE has performed against this target as records are not kept centrally. Figures for Kent are not recorded separately.

Departments: Disclosure of Information

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many cases of people receiving confidential information about other individuals in error there were in each of the last five years in (a) Jobcentre Plus, (b) the Child Support Agency and (c) the Pensions Service. [143257]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The information requested is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Official Residences

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the official ministerial residences allocated to Ministers in his Department; and what the total annual cost is of running each. [141968]

Mrs. McGuire: No Ministers in my Department have been allocated ministerial residences.

Departments: Postal Services

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the reasons were for the decision to move his Department's post opening and distribution services in Kent from Haden Building Management to the Royal Mail. [141430]

Mrs. McGuire: The decision to move the Department's post opening and distribution services in Kent from Haden Building Management to the Royal Mail was a consequence of DWP's review of office services, which includes post opening. This review concluded that the Department would make considerable operational benefits, provide significant cost savings and greater value for money to the Department and the taxpayer, by moving a new operating methodology by means of a single national contract.

Following competition, Haden Building Management won the contract to deliver the entire Department's office services requirements from 1 March 2007. Royal Mail is a subcontractor to Haden, opening post at Royal Mail centres, in secure mail opening units.

Direct Payments

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which financial institutions participate in the Direct Payments Scheme. [143193]

Mr. Plaskitt: This is a matter for my hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Disabled People: Poverty

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what proportion of (a) people with disabilities of working age and (b) children with disabilities were living in poverty in each Government office region in (i) 1996-97 and (ii) 2004-05. [118811]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Employment Services: Digital Broadcasting

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) whether digital television job services are available in Wirral; [142970]

(2) what provisions exist for people without access to digital television or the internet to access job search services; [142971]

(3) what steps are being taken to advertise the provision of digital television services to those seeking jobs; [142972]

(4) what estimate he has made of the average age of people using the digital television job search services; [142973]

(5) what level of use of digital television job search services was recorded in the latest period for which figures are available, broken down by region. [142974]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide my hon. Friend with the information requested.

Letter from Mel Groves, dated 21 June 2007:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about jobsearch services available through digital television. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to Lesley Strathie as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus. I am replying on her behalf as Acting Chief Executive.

Jobcentre Plus published a News Release on 2 April 2007 to launch the national job search engine on digital television in partnership with Looking Local, the local government digital TV portal. Looking Local is part of DigiTV, which is a not-for-profit organisation run by, and for, local government. DigiTV is currently working with over 75 Local Authorities in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

The digital television jobsearch services are available in Wirral. Although Wirral Council are not currently delivering services through DigiTV's Looking Local, other councils in the area are, and these are accessible across the Wirral.

Customers without digital television or the Internet can access Jobcentre Plus vacancies through channels such as Jobseeker Direct (a telephone job search service), Jobpoints (in all Jobcentre Plus offices), and External Kiosks in third party premises such as libraries. We also offer assisted jobsearch through our Personal Advisers in Jobcentre Plus offices, and some outreach premises, for more disadvantaged customers. In addition, all employment programmes delivered through Jobcentre Plus contain a jobsearch element, for example, Programme Centres offer Internet access, newspapers, and support on the range of jobsearch skills, including CV preparation, completing job applications and interview skills.

Jobcentre Plus has no current plans to advertise or evaluate digital television jobsearch services. The services offered through digital television form part of a wider set of services, available across a range of channels for those seeking work. The two pilots that took place in Kingston-upon-Hull (2003), and London (2005), were evaluated, but did not report on the age range of users.

Looking Local currently averages 270,000 hits per month for jobsearch services but information is not available broken down by region.

Housing Benefit: Temporary Accommodation

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to change the level of non-Housing Revenue Account housing benefit subsidy to local authorities for homeless households placed in temporary accommodation in (a) 2008-09 and (b) 2009-10. [145167]

Mr. Plaskitt: A questionnaire has been sent to a sample of local authorities seeking information on the use and costs of temporary accommodation. Until we have considered the results of this questionnaire, no decision can be made about subsidy arrangements in respect of homeless households in temporary accommodation for 2008-09.

We are continuing to work with the Department for Communities and Local Government and the devolved Administrations on our longer term proposals which would separate out reasonable costs for the rent and management of temporary accommodation; we would expect these to take effect from 2009.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many claimants of disability living allowance who also claim incapacity benefit have been on incapacity benefit for more than (a) six months, (b) 12 months, (c) 18 months, (d) 24 months and (e) 60 months. [144011]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 19 June 2007]: The available information is in the following table.

Number of claimants of DLA, who also claim IB/SDA—November 2006

	Duration of IB/SDA claim
	Six months up to one year	One year and up to 18 months	18 months and up to two years	Two years and up to five years	Five years and over

Incapacity Benefit: Disposable Income

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the median net disposable income of households receiving incapacity benefit was (a) before and (b) after housing costs were taken into account in the latest period for which figures are available. [142737]

Mrs. McGuire: Latest available data show that the median net (disposable) weekly income of households receiving incapacity benefit is £302 before housing costs and £260 after housing costs.

Notes:

1. The source of the information provided is the Family Resources Survey (FRS), United Kingdom 2005-06. The Survey is a nationally representative sample of approximately 28,000 households.

2. Data for 2005-06 were collected between April 2005 and March 2006.

3. The estimates are based on sample counts that have been adjusted for non-response using multi-purpose grossing factors which align the FRS to Government Office Region populations by age and gender. Estimates are subject to sampling error and remaining non-response error.

4. Incapacity benefit receipt is under-reported on the FRS. However, there is no other reliable source for this information at a household level.

5. Figures for the median net weekly income are rounded to the nearest pound.

6. Net (disposable) weekly income includes income from all sources for all adults and children in the household, less income tax and national insurance contributions (for adults).

7. Housing costs include household rent for rented accommodation or mortgage interest for those buying their home with a mortgage, plus water and sewerage charges (including council tax water charge in Scotland), plus premiums paid on structural insurance, plus charges for owner occupiers (ground rent, service charges etc.).

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the median equivalised net disposable income (a) before and (b) after housing costs were taken into account was of individuals in households receiving incapacity benefit in the latest period for which figures are available. [142741]

Mrs. McGuire: Latest available data show that the median equivalised net (disposable) weekly income of households receiving incapacity benefit is £271 before housing costs and £228 after housing costs.

Notes:

1. The source of the information provided is the Family Resources Survey (FRS), United Kingdom 2005-06. The Survey is a nationally representative sample of approximately 28,000 households.

2. Data for 2005-06 were collected between April 2005 and March 2006.

3. The estimates are based on sample counts that have been adjusted for non-response using multi-purpose grossing factors which align the FRS to Government Office Region populations by age and gender. Estimates are subject to sampling error and remaining non-response error.

4. Incapacity benefit receipt is under-reported on the FRS. However, there is no other reliable source for this information at a household level.

5. Figures for the median equivalised net disposable weekly income are rounded to the nearest pound.

6. Net (disposable) weekly income includes income from all sources for all adults and children in the household, less income tax and NI contributions (for adults).

7. Housing costs include household rent for rented accommodation or mortgage interest for those buying their home with a mortgage, plus water and sewerage charges (including council tax water charge in Scotland), plus premiums paid on structural insurance, plus charges for owner occupiers (ground rent, service charges etc.).

Incapacity Benefit: Lancashire

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in West Lancashire were registered for (a) incapacity benefit and (b) jobseeker's allowance in the financial year ending (i) March 1997 and (ii) March 2007. [144971]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available in the format requested. The available information is in the following table.

	Incapacity benefit/severe disablement allowance	Jobseeker's allowance
November 1997	6,200	2,388
November 2006	4,880	1,623

1. JSA figures are unrounded, incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance figures for November 1997 are rounded to the nearest 100 and the November 2006 figures to the nearest 10.
2. Incapacity benefit/severe disablement allowance figures for November 1997 have been produced using 5 per cent. data and have been uprated in accordance with Great Britain WPLS 100 per cent. IB/SDA totals.
3. Claimant figures for incapacity benefit include incapacity benefit credits-only cases.

Jobcentre Plus: Chard

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people visited the Jobcentre in Chard in each month since July 2006; and if he will make a statement. [143041]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mel Groves, dated 21 June 2007:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the number of people who have visited Chard Jobcentre since July 2006. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to Lesley Strathie as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus. I am replying on her behalf as Acting Chief Executive.

I am unable to provide details of customer usage in Chard Jobcentre since July 2006 as this information is not recorded in sufficient detail. We are analysing the number of customers using the office as part of the office network review. This monitoring commenced on 21 May 2007 and is being undertaken over a six week period.

I hope this is helpful.

National Insurance

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many temporary national insurance numbers were issued between April 2006 and April 2007. [144080]

Mr. Plaskitt: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) on 2 October 2006, Official Report, column 2593W.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the impact of increasing the upper earnings limit for personal accounts in line with the proposed increase in the upper earnings limit for national insurance contributions on the intended focus of personal accounts on those on median and below median earnings. [137975]

James Purnell: The personal accounts earnings band thresholds will be set at around £5,000 and £33,500 (in 2006-07 terms) uprated thereafter annually in line with average earnings. This will establish the thresholds in their own right and break the link with tax and NICs thresholds and will ensure that personal accounts is targeted at moderate to low earners.

National Insurance Contributions: Rebates

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what estimate he has made of the number of people (a) aged 44 and over in appropriate personal pensions and (b) aged 48 and over in money purchase schemes for whom contracted-out rebates may not replace foregone state second pension benefits; and if he will make a statement; [141175]

(2) how many UK citizens are in (a) appropriate personal pensions (APPs) and (b) money purchase schemes which are contracted-out; how many of these people are aged (i) over 44 in APPs and (ii) over 48 in money purchase schemes; and if he will make a statement. [141177]

James Purnell: Information on the number of people contracted out on a defined contribution basis for the latest year for which validated data are available, broken down by the scheme types and age groups specified, is in the table.

Scheme type	Total in tax year 2003-04 (Thousand)
Appropriate personal pension (including stakeholder pension)
All ages	4,669
Of whom aged over 44	1,157
Contracted out money purchase scheme
All ages	152
Of whom aged over 48	38

Note:
The 'pivotal age' for 2003-04 was 52 for both appropriate personal pensions and contracted-out money purchase schemes.
Source:

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what action he has taken to inform individuals (a) aged 44 and over in appropriate personal pensions and (b) aged 48 and over in money purchase schemes that their contracted-out rebates may not replace the foregone state second pension benefits; and if he will make a statement; [141176]

(2) whether it is the policy of his Department to encourage people over the age of 40 years to take up opted out defined contribution pension schemes; and if he will make a statement. [141205]

James Purnell: Contracting out on a defined contribution basis when over the "pivotal age" (currently 44 for personal pensions and 48 for occupational schemes) is not usually financially beneficial, particularly where there is no employer pension contribution. However, an individual may have their own reasons for making this choice as contracting out offers flexibility not available under the State pension scheme. It is not the Department's policy to encourage or discourage people from contracting out. It is for individuals to decide what sort of pension provision is best for them, given their own personal circumstances.

Selling and advising on all personal pension schemes, including appropriate personal pensions, is subject to the Financial Services Authority's rules on marketing and promotion, provision of suitable advice and provision of information at the point of sale. In addition, in relation to contracting out via an appropriate personal pension scheme, The Financial Services Authority Factsheet "The State Second Pension—should you be contracted out?" says that those in older age groups are likely to be financially worse off by contracting out.

New Deal

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his statement of 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 3, on the new deal, if he will respond to the report by David Freud entitled Reducing dependency, increasing opportunity: options for the future before the summer recess. [143616]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 20 June 2007]: We will respond to the Freud report in the summer.

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was spent on the new deal for disabled people in each year since 2001. [142539]

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many parliamentary questions were tabled to his Department in 2006, broken down by (a) ordinary written and (b) named day; what percentage of ordinary written questions were answered within 10 working days; and what percentage of named day questions were answered by the specified date. [115280]

Mr. Plaskitt: In 2006, 3,461 ordinary written questions were tabled to the Department, of which 48.7 per cent. were replied to within 10 working days and 669 named day questions were tabled, of which 30.5 per cent. received a full reply by the specific date, with all others receiving a holding reply.

Pensions: Overseas Residence

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the reasons are for the policy of freezing UK pensions overseas. [144064]

James Purnell: The UK state pension is fully exportable but is only uprated where there is a reciprocal social security agreement or legal requirement to do so. Our priority is to focus our efforts and available limited resources on pensioners resident in the UK.

To uprate the pension in frozen rate countries would cost around £440 million[1] in 2007-08 and would increase year on year.

[1] This figure does not include paying any arrears.

Personal Accounts Savings Scheme

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will assess the impact of a contribution cap of (a) £3,000 and (b) £5,000 on the proposed personal accounts savings scheme if the upper earnings limit for contributions were increased to £43,000. [140362]

James Purnell: On 14 June 2007, the Government published their summary of responses to the White Paper Personal accounts: a new way to save consultation exercise. That document signalled our intention to establish the personal accounts earning band in line with the primary threshold and upper earnings limit from 2006-07 and to uprate these thresholds annually in line with average earnings. This means that the personal accounts earning band will not increase to the new level of the upper earnings limit that was announced in this year's Budget.

We also announced that the personal accounts annual contribution limit would be set at a level of £3,600 in 2005 earnings terms, and uprated according to earnings to 2012 and beyond. Such a figure will ensure that personal accounts will stay focused on the target market, complementing rather than competing with existing provision, while still providing moderate to low earners with sufficient room to meet benchmark replacement rates.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the additional cost to employers of the proposed personal accounts savings scheme if the upper earnings limit for contributions to the proposed personal accounts scheme were increased to £43,000. [140363]

James Purnell: As the Government's response to their consultation on the White Paper Personal Accounts: a new way to save, sets out we will not increase the personal accounts earnings band upper threshold to reflect the increases in the tax and national insurance thresholds announced in the Budget. An increase in the upper threshold to £43,000 would have cost employers an additional £150 to £200 million a year.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in what percentage of cases the median earner detailed on pages 113 and 114 of the regulatory impact assessment to Personal Accounts: A New Way to Save would have a replacement rate in excess of 100 per cent. if he saved (a) £3,000 each year and (b) £5,000 each year, according to the Department's stochastic modelling. [141530]

James Purnell: Estimates of pension income are heavily driven by a number of assumptions, such as the asset allocation in a particular fund choice, the age at which the individual starts saving and the choice of annuity. It is therefore not possible to say with absolute certainty with which amount of annual savings an individual would achieve a replacement rate of above 100 per cent.

However, both under a contribution limit of £3,000 and £5,000 a median earner with a full working life is likely to be able to achieve an adequate pension income as defined by a replacement rate. This would require additional voluntary savings above the default contribution. Clearly, the higher an individual's contributions, the more likely they are to achieve a particular retirement income.

On 14 June, 2007, the Government published their summary of responses to the White Paper "Personal Accounts: A New Way to Save" consultation exercise. This document contained further analysis on the personal accounts contribution limit and concluded that an annual limit of £3,600 would be an appropriate figure. Such a figure will ensure that personal accounts will stay focused on the target market, complementing rather than competing with existing provision, while still providing moderate to low earners with sufficient room to meet benchmark replacement rates.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what replacement rate the median earner described on pages 113 and 114 of the Regulatory Impact Assessment to Personal Accounts: A New Way to Save would achieve if investments performed in line with central assumptions each year and if his total savings were (a) £3,000 each year and (b) £5,000 each year. [141529]

James Purnell: If investment returns were in line with the estimated average of a 3.5 per cent. real rate of return in each year, a median earner, who contributed up to the contribution limit in each year, would, in principle, be able to reach (a) around a two thirds per cent. replacement rate with a £3,000 contribution limit and (b) around an 85 to 90 per cent. replacement rate with a £5,000 contribution limit. The benchmark replacement rate for a median earner is around two thirds which is in principle attainable with a £3,000 contribution limit.

However, these replacement rates are based on the assumption of a full working life (age 21 to 68) and hence a high number of years of saving (46 years). Some people in personal accounts are likely to start saving at a later age than 21 or have caring breaks in their working life and thus need a somewhat higher degree of flexibility of saving to reach their benchmark replacement rates.

On 14 June, 2007, the Government published their summary of responses to the White Paper Personal accounts: a new way to save consultation exercise. This document contained further analysis on the personal accounts contribution limit and concluded that an annual limit of £3,600 would be an appropriate figure. Such a figure will ensure that Personal Accounts will stay focused on the target market, complementing rather than competing with existing provision, while still providing moderate to low earners with sufficient room to meet benchmark replacement rates.

Personal Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest estimate is of the required personal contribution into a personal pension which would have to be made by a person aged 35, on median earnings and retiring at age 65, in order to receive a pension in retirement equal to (a) 25 per cent., (b) 30 per cent., (c) 35 per cent., (d) 40 per cent., (e) 45 per cent. and (f) 50 per cent. of their median earnings; and if he will make a statement. [141852]

James Purnell: Published analysis regarding the replacement rates and incomes individuals could expect at retirement can be found in Figure 2.iii of the May 2006 White Paper, Security in Retirement Regulatory Impact Assessment. This shows that an individual with an average lifetime income of £25,000, who is 30 in 2012, could expect a replacement rate of 44 per cent. from having saved in a personal account, an improvement of 10 per cent. over the non-saving replacement rate.

This table provides an indication of the net individual contribution rates required to achieve an income in retirement equivalent to a proportion of earnings today. This is based on a male median earner (£24,000 in 2007-08) who starts work aged 25 and starts saving at age 35 in 2012 to retirement at age 68. This individual would achieve a total replacement rate of 45 per cent. (an improvement of 9 per cent. from having saved) with contributions above the band of 4 per cent. from the employee, 1 per cent. from tax relief and 3 per cent. from the employer.

Rates in the table are rounded to the nearest whole number.

Net individual contribution rate (on banded earnings)	Percentage of total earnings	Replacement rate from pension saving	Percentage Total replacement rate
13	10	25	61
16	13	30	66
19	15	35	71
22	17	40	76
25	19	45	81
28	22	50	86

Notes:
1. This table is for illustrative purposes only. It should not be used as the basis for individual decisions as specific circumstances or variation from the underlying assumptions will lead to different results.
2. The results assume an AMC of 0.5 per cent., an employer contribution of 3 per cent., no phasing of contributions, and no contribution cap.

Remploy

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) whether (a) Remploy and (b) other sheltered employment agencies are exempt from competition rules which might protect the contracts they can secure from public bodies and Government agencies in the UK; [143676]

(2) which competition rules which apply to mainstream employers apply to (a) Remploy and (b) other sheltered employment agencies; [143677]

(3) what public procurement rules apply to the awarding of contracts by (a) Government and (b) local government departments and agencies on (i) favourable and (ii) protected terms to (A) Remploy and (B) other sheltered employment agencies. [143678]

Mrs. McGuire: The Public Contracts Regulations apply to all procurement exercises for goods and services by Government with a contract value of over £93,738, and to local government exercises with a contract value of over £144,371.

These Regulations allow contracting authorities to "Reserve" contracts for supported factories and businesses. This means that only organisations where more than 50 per cent. of the workers are disabled persons, who by reason of disability are unable to take up work in the open labour market, can bid for this work. Any employer or supported employment programme meeting the 50 per cent. disabled employees criteria can bid for reserved contracts.

There is also a scheme "Special Contract Arrangements" for contracts below these threshold values. Under this scheme, contracting authorities are allowed to "offer back" work to supported employers, whose tender is unacceptable on price alone, to give them the opportunity to match the best offer received.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether he has considered the merits of extending the proposed structure and numbers of Remploy factories beyond the agreed five year funding period. [144126]

Mrs. McGuire: Any consideration of the merits of extending the proposed structure and numbers of Remploy factories beyond the agreed five-year funding period will only be made after the company has presented its modernisation plans.

Social Fund: Motor Vehicles

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether his Department has granted any applications for Social Fund money for the purchase of a motor vehicle in the last 12 months. [145054]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information requested is available only at disproportionate cost.

Social Security Benefits: Fraud

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many successful prosecutions his Department provided evidence for in the last 12 months on cases involving (a) false representations for claiming benefit and (b) dishonest representations for claiming benefit. [144082]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information requested is not available other than at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many people were (a) charged with and (b) found guilty of benefit fraud in each local authority area in each of the last 10 years; [144142]

(2) how much was lost through benefit fraud in each local authority area in each of the last five years: and how much of that money has subsequently been recovered. [144143]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available broken down by local authority area.

For the available national information on prosecutions, I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave on 23 March 2007, Official Report, column 1187W, to the hon. Member for Ilford, North (Mr. Scott); for the available national information on levels of fraud, I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave on 18 April 2007, Official Report, columns 697-98W, to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws).

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the latest available rates of combined fraud and error were for each of his Department's administered benefits for the latest year for which information is available. [144905]

Mr. Plaskitt: The most recent available information is contained in the DWP report "Fraud and Error in the Benefit System—April 2005 to March 2006" copies of which are available in the Library.

The report is also available online at:

www.dwp.gov.uk/asd/asd2/fem/fem_apr05_mar06.pdf

Social Security Benefits: Personal Records

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to ensure that requests submitted by Clydebank Processing Centre for the return of stored case papers or claimants' documents are dealt with promptly by staff at Heywood. [142286]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Clydebank Benefit Delivery Centre currently retains files on site for nine weeks before dispatch to the Capita Document Management Centre (DMC) or Heywood Stores as they were known. This retention facilitates routine post-action checks, inquiries or other action. Documents/files are requested from DMC using an on-line retrieval with each request being made available for despatch by the TNT Courier by 20:00 on the day of request where the request is received before 17.00 hours or the next working day for requests made after 17.00 hours. Where the request is urgent we can request a response within two hours by fax or e-mail.

Where files are not received there are two escalation routes, depending on the information held in the on-line retrieval system, either via the TNT Courier help desk or the DMC Customer Service Desk. DMC will endeavour to resolve the issue at contact. However, if this is not possible complaints will be investigated within 24 hours of receipt and the caller given the option of a written reply by fax or e-mail. If the inquiry cannot be resolved within 24 hours, DMC Customer Service Desk provides a progress report via e-mail or fax. If the response is unsatisfactory or is not received within 48 hours, the issue is escalated to the DWP Record Storage Contract Management Team. Scotland also has a nominated manager who represents our sites on matters relating to the JCP process and the DMC service.

Clydebank is currently receiving a satisfactory standard of service and escalates individual cases where there are difficulties to the Customer Service Desk. Clydebank aims to reduce the holding to six weeks, rather than nine, in line with our agreed best practice in Scotland.

Social Security Benefits: Young People

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many 18 to 24 year olds were not in employment, education or training in each quarter since 1992; and what proportion in each quarter were claiming (a) jobseeker's allowance and (b) other benefits. [122109]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 22 February 2007]: Information on the proportion of 18 to 24-year-olds not in employment, education or training claiming benefits is not available.

Information on the number and proportion of 18 to 24-year-olds who were not in employment, education or training in the United Kingdom in each quarter since 1992 is in the table.

State Retirement Pensions

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions for what reason the first payment of a state pension is made from the nearest Monday to a pensioner's qualifying birthday. [143691]

James Purnell: Entitlement to a state pension begins on the payday on or following the day on which a person reaches pension age. Historically pensioners had a Thursday payday, but it was changed to a Monday for new claimants in September 1984 to spread the flow of customers using Post Offices more evenly. In some circumstances pensioners can be given a different payday.

Tax Credit

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what kind of prior consultation occurred between the Treasury and the Department for Social Security in respect of the 1997 Budget changes to dividend tax credits. [143547]

Ed Balls: I have been asked to reply.

Treasury Ministers and officials have always been in regular and frequent contact with their counterparts in other Departments on a wide range of issues.

Working Conditions: Temperature

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what guidance or regulations the Health and Safety Executive has made for the maximum and minimum acceptable temperatures in which people can work. [143584]

Mrs. McGuire: The Workplace (Health, Safety and Welfare) Regulations 1992 require employers to provide a reasonable temperature in all indoor workplaces. These Regulations are accompanied by an Approved Code of Practice and guidance. HSE recommends a lower temperature of 16 degrees Celsius unless the work involves severe physical effort in which case the temperature should be at least 13 degrees Celsius.

The Management of Health and Safety at Work Regulations 1999 also require employers to undertake a risk assessment, which includes assessing the risks of working in very hot or cold workplaces. Where risks are identified, proportionate action must be taken by the employer to meet the legal requirements.

Further guidance and advice is available on HSE's website covering a wide range of sectors. It also provides a step-by-step approach to help employers and employees manage excessive temperatures in the workplace including guidance on how to avoid heat stress, (http://www.hse.gov.uk/temperature).

Workstep

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to extend the Workstep programme beyond April 2008. [142537]

Mrs. McGuire: The current WORKSTEP contracts have already been extended until the end of March 2008. We are currently looking at future contracts, but no decisions have yet been made.

Youth Unemployment

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what proportion of people aged (a) 16 to 17 and (b) 18 to 24 years were (i) economically inactive and not in full-time education and (ii) unemployed in each year since 1997, broken down by region. [130033]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The available information has been placed in the Library.
